VOL. 82. No. 254. PART ONE. ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 18, 1930. PAGES 1—12A  PRICE 10 CENTS

$250,000 GIFT TO WASHINGTON U. FOR ENDOWMENT

NEW CENTER ON CAMPUS PLANNED

It Will Include a Museum and an Auditorium — Total Cost Estimated to Be at Least $1,900,000.

Announcement was made last night of the pledge of $250,000 from an anonymous benefactor for an endowment for the work of the Washington University school of architecture, subject to the success of the institution in getting funds for erection and maintenance of a new building for the school.

This is part of a program calling for $1,900,000 to $2,150,000 for developing a center on the campus for the study of art, architecture and archeology. Besides the architectural endowment, the university has made known its desire to obtain $250,000 to $300,000 for the new architectural building, a $100,000 fund for the physical maintenance of that structure, $400,000 to $500,000 for a building to house a museum of art, architecture and archeology, an auditorium and other facilities; $400,000 to $500,000 for an endowment for maintenance of this structure and support of the museum staff and accessions, and an endowment of at least $500,000 for expanding the work of the school of fine arts.

Conditions of Gift.

The $250,000 architectural endowment pledge is from a person who specifies that at least $250,000 must be spent on the desired new building and a $100,000 maintenance fund provided. The university, which is not able to provide this money from its budget now, hopes that public-spirited citizens will give it, either during their lifetime or in their will. Authorities hail the gift of an endowment fund as an especially fine thing, snce it is harder for the donnor to derive satisfaction from it than from money spent on the construction of a building.

It is proposed to place the architectural and museum buildings to the west of William K. Bixby Hall, home of the School of fine arts, given by the president of the university corporation, for whom it is named. This is at Skinker and Forsythe boulevard, at the southeast corner of the campus. The structures would be made to harmonize in appearance and would be connected by passages.

Developing Fine Arts.

Louis LaBeaume, an architect, chairman of the university's Advisory Committee on Fine Arts, said, in announcing the endowment gift, that it was desired to make architectural instruction definitely a part of the work in fine arts, separating it from contact with engineering. Architectural and engineering students are in close contact now, with inadequate space for the former. In addition to the need for more room for the school of architecture, LaBeaume added, it is hoped to increase the faculty and strengthen the courses.

The museum would provide plastic and graphic material for the art and architectural schools that is not available now and by increasing space for the art school would enable that unit to inaugurate courses leading to a degree in fine arts. The auditorium, it is stated in a pamphlet prepared by the university, would meet a great need for student assemblies and university and public gatherings.

Museum as a Laboratory.

It is not sought by the university to compete with the City Art Museum in acquiring large and expensive collections in the museum, but rather to create a departmental laboratory. The university museum, however, would be available to students of the various schools as a matter of general culture. Paintings and other art objects owned by the university and now displayed at the City Art Museum eventually might be taken back to the university, said LaBeaume.

The plan for the school of architecture is to accommodate 200 to 250 selected students, and the university hopes to be able to add instruction in landscape architecture, in collaboration with its school of botany, and in city planning. In the School of Fine Arts it is proposed to provide a normal course to prepare teachers of art for the bachelor's degree.

Eastern Combination Outclasses Field, Gallant Knight Second and Ned O Third—50,000 See Race.

By the Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 17.—Champions every inch of them and every foot of the way, Gallant Fox and Earle Sande proved an unbeatable combination today by galloping through the rain to victory in the fifty-sixth running of the Kentucky Derby.

"Come on, Sande!" roared the half-drenched crowd of 50,000 as the great jockey took command of the race on the back stretch and opened a good lead.

"Come on, Earl!" they shouted again, as Sande and Gallant Fox swerved into the home stretch, spraying the closest contenders with mud.

And come on he did, with a finish so magnificently convincing as to leave not the slightest doubt that the highly favored Eastern combination outclassed the field of crack 3-year-olds. Gallant Fox's time for the mile and a quarter was 2:07 3-5.

Fights Off Tannery's Challenge.

Gallant Fox successfully fought off the early challenge of the Kentucky pride, Tannery, then beat back the last surging rushes of Gallant Knight, Crack Brigade and Ned O.

The heavily played favorite, bearing the colors of William Woodward's Belair stud of New York, won by two good lengths from Gallant Knight of the Audley Farm. G. W. Foreman's Ned O., finishing with a rush, was third, a length and a half behind Gallant Knight, with Gone Away fourth, the last money position, and Crack Brigade, fifth.

Tannery, a dismal disappointment, finished eighth, and for the first time in years the highly-regarded E. R. Bradley entries were nowhere.

The order of finish in the rest of the field of 15 starters was: Longus, Uncle Luther, Tannery, Kilkerry, Alcibiades, Breezing Thru, High Foot, Buckeye Poet, Broadway Limited and Dick O'Hara.

Gallant Fox paid $4.38 for each $2 mutuel ticket to win; $3.76 for place and $3.42 show.

The price on Gallant Knight to place was $14.60, and show $8.78.

The Derby today carried a gross value of $61,250, and $50,725 went to the winner, with $6000 to Gallant Knight, $3000 to Ned O. and $1000 to Gone Away.

Ned O paid $10.14 to show.

Great Ovation for Sande.

Seldom, if ever, in the history of the Kentucky Derby has so great and spontaneous an outburst of popular acclaim greeted a victor as the mud-spattered, but smiling and freckle-faced veteran, Earl Sande, came back to the stands on Gallant Fox. While the crowd milled and yelled itself hoarse, the traditional wreath of red roses was draped around the colt's neck and the Earl of Derby, after witnessing his first American race, stepped out to bestow the coveted gold trophy upon William Woodward, vice chairman of the New York Jockey Club and the owner.

Derby and horse racing history was made by this dramatic victory for thoroughbred class and superlative horsemanship. Sande rode his third Derby winner, equaling the all-time record for this ancient classic. Gallant Fox, racing unbeaten as a 3-year-old to add the Kentucky classic to the triumph in the rich Preakness, duplicated an accomplishment registered only by one other horse—Sir Barton in 1919. The black son of Sir Gallahad III-Marguerite stamped himself as the champion of his class, beyond the slightest shadow of doubt.

Mad Dash for the Rail.

At the spontaneous, expectant cry, "they're off!" Gallant Fox was swept into the Mad dash for the rail, rated along easily in a contending position. Sande was in no hurry apparently to make a move, content to let the only filly in the race, Alcibiades, dash out in front, followed by the blue grass favorites, Tannery and Buckeye Poet. They swept past the grandstand, a wild flash of color, in this order, after the first quarter mile, with Gallant Fox fourth, closely pursued by Crack Brigade and Gallant Knight.

Around the first turn Alcibiades was still in front, Tannery still holding on well and Crack Brigade moving up to take stride with Gallant Fox.

Down the long back stretch, they began to string out and Sande made his first move. Gallant Fox responded and easily went to the front. Alcibiades dropped back quickly and Crack Brigade challenged the favorite, closely pressed by Gallant Knight. For perhaps a furlong it looked as though Crack Brigade would make it a duplica-

CHINESE WEEPS AFTER ACQUITTAL IN BRIBERY CASE

Joe Lin, California-born Chinese, who has lived by the white man's code for most of his 52 years, was cleared by the white man's law yesterday when a jury in Federal Court acquitted him of a charge of bribery.

Unlike the "Heathen Chinee" of fiction who remains silent and expressionless in the face of fortune or disaster, the gray-haired "Mayor of Chinatown" wept and stammered as he thanked the 12 men who had decided his fate.

For 25 years, since he had adopted St. Louis as his home, Lin had made friends among his white neighbors. During those 25 years Government officials and politicians came to speak of "my friend, Joe Lin." And Lin, when prison threatened, was able to invoke such names as "my friend, Congressman L. C. Dyer," "my friend, Mr. Jim Nash," and others.

Perhaps if Lin had not been able to produce a Congressman's deposition and the battery of reputable character witnesses that he did, he and his co-defendant, Yee Nam Lee, Chinese grocer, would not have walked from the courtroom free.

Agent Says He Got $300 Bribe.

The Government presented a strong case, employing special counsel to assist. Narcotics Agent Addie M. Sheets, lately a member of the prohibition force at Los Angeles, testified that Lin had paid him $300 to influence his testimony against Lee and two other Chinese, arrested in an opium raid at Lee's grocery, 17 South Eighth street, on Oct. 10, 1928. Three other agents corroborated his testimony.

Before handing over the money, Sheets said, Lin insisted that he sign a promissory note, explaining that he wanted the note for his own protection if the bribe should become known and to show his people that he had served them.

On the other hand, Lin was able to take the stand and, with little Chinese accent, swear that he had always been a law-abiding citizen, describe his 20 years as official interpreter for the Government here, assert that he had lent Sheets the $300, and offer the note which read: "I, Bob Sheets, agree to borrow $300 and pay it back in two weeks."

Accuses His Accuser.

Sheets, he said, had solicited him urgently to persuade the arrested Chinese to produce money to "fix the case" and he had refused. Pressing the request for a bribe, Lin declared, Sheets called on him at the American Hotel, where he

John Cook, 45, Coal Miner, Attacks Family Party in Belleville Basement With Pistol.

FIRES FIRST SHOT THROUGH WINDOW

Enters and Shoots Relative, but Runs Out When Lights Are Switched Off and Kills Self.

Invading a family party in the basement of a Belleville home last night, John Cook, 45 years old, a coal miner of Caseyville, shot and killed his estranged wife and his brother-in-law and then killed himself.

The brother-in-law, John Hart, 35, an automobile mechanic, of Swansea, a Belleville suburb, died instantly with a bullet in the brain. Mrs. Lizzie Cook, 36, was taken to St. Elizabeth's Hospital with a serious wound in the chest. She died at midnight. Cook died in the yard of the home after shooting himself in the head.

The shooting occurred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Dalhaus, 622 Wabash avenue, where Mr. and Mrs. Hart, Mrs. Cook and another pair had gathered. Mrs. Cook, Mrs. Hart and Mrs. Dalhaus are sisters.

The seven adults and two children, a daughter of Mrs. Hart and a daughter of Mrs. Cook, were gathered about a table when a shot was fired through a small basement window.

The bullet struck Mrs. Cook as she stood beside the table. She collapsed on the floor and the others gazed at the door where Cook appeared a moment later with a revolver in his hand.

Hart, who had an injured foot, hobbled toward the intruder. Cook, without a word, opened fire, emptying his revolver. Hart fell to the floor. The others stared in terror while Cook reloaded his revolver.

He raised the weapon to fire again when Dalhaus pressed the electric switch, throwing the basement into darkness. Cook fired two shots in the dark then scrambled up the stairway to the yard. The survivors in the basement heard a shot and found him dead at the head of the stairway with the revolver in his hand.

Separated from her husband for two months, Mrs. Cook had not heard of him for six weeks and presumed that he had left the Belleville district. Recently she had found employment as housekeeper for a Belleville family in order to support herself and her three children.

$2,800,000 NET PROFIT LAST YEAR AT MONTE CARLO

That Was Poor Season, Directors Say, Because of Increased Expenditures.

By the Associated Press.

MONTE CARLO, May 17.—Gross receipts, $5,720,000; net profits, $2,800,000.

Such is the balance sheet presented to the board of directors of the Casino for the gambling year ending March 31. And the directors called it a poor year.

The receipts were maintained at the level of the last five years, but there was a large increase in the expenditures.

The personnel, ranging from croupiers to street sweepers, cost the "kitty" nearly $200,000 more than in 1928-1929.

Publicity also came higher; about $40,000 more than usual. The task of supplying gas to the residents of Monaco, although bearing no direct connection with publicity, which is directed at nonresidents also came higher, by $30,000 than in any former year.

An item which showed conspicuously on the wrong side of the balance sheet was the movies. The falling off is said to be due to the talkie innovation, which was more expensive to operate, and did not manifest a correspondingly greater drawing power here.

MARRIAGE BUREAU KEPT OPEN TILL GIRL BECOMES OF AGE

Applicant's Parents Had Refused Consent So Clerk Waits 15 Minutes.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 17.—The Marriage License Bureau usually closes at noon on Saturdays, but it was kept open for an extra 15 minutes today while a clerk waited for Eva Unrath, Philadelphia nurse, to become of age.

Miss Unrath and Carl W. Backus, chemist, appeared this morning and asked for a license, but Miss Unrath lacked her parents' written consent and her birth certificate showed she wouldn't be 21 until a few minutes past noon. An employe stayed at his desk until 12:15 issuing the license as the clock ticked the beginning of Miss Unrath's twenty-second year and the pair hastened off to the Little Church Around the Corner.

MEYER CLASHES WITH CURATOR HE CALLED "UNFIT"

PROFESSOR TAKES NOTHING BACK

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

COLUMBIA, Mo., May 17.—Considering detail by detail his references to a member of the board of curators of the University of Missouri as "senile" and another as "mentally unfit to hold the office of a curator," Dr. Max F. Meyer, who for 30 years has been head of the university's department of psychology, this afternoon presented his defense in his hearing before the board. The psychologist is charged with insubordination in connection with his address to the Southern Society of Philosophy and Psychology at Nashville, Tenn., last April 18.

His criticism was directed at H. J. Blanton of Paris, Mo., who, with former State Senator McDavid of Springfield and Mercer Arnold of Joplin, constituted the Executive Board which recommended his dismissal for his part in the issuance of the sex questionnaire. The full board, however, changed this to suspension for one year. The term of suspension lately expired.

Dr. Meyer, under questioning by J. E. Goodrich, president of the board, testified that he had applied the term "senile" to Blanton in a letter to Rabbi S. S. Mayerberg of Kansas City.

He termed the hearing a "medieval inquisition."

Dr. Meyer retracted none of his statements in the Nashville address, contending, however, that in some instances members of the board had misconstrued his meaning.

Clash With Curator.

A heated exchange between Dr. Meyer and Senator McDavid, with McDavid shouting his questions at the psychologist, ensued when Dr. Meyer sought to explain what he meant by saying McDavid was "mentally unfit" for the office of curator.

"That goes for me, too," Blanton echoed.

McDavid upbraided Dr. Meyer for a statement in a letter to his counsel at the hearing, Leland Hazard, of Kansas City, saying that "courts in equity are controlled by the mob," which was introduced as evidence. Dr. Meyer explained that the phrase was figurative.

Explaining his reference to McDavid as "mentally unfit to hold the office of curator," Dr. Meyer declared that "mental unfitness does not mean a lack of mentality."

Defending himself against McDavid's charge that he "made the subject of sex too attractive," Dr. Meyer went into a long explanation of the difficulties of sex education of young women.

Discusses Sex Education.

"The problem of sex education is not new," he declared. "In the past, instruction in sex has been so gruesome as to make male students faint. That is not what sex education ought to be.

"It is very important that the teacher should not give the idea that sex is ugly. If the students have the idea that the sex function is abnormal, they will be greatly handicapped in later life—may even become neurotics.

"It was quite impossible for Senator McDavid to make a rational decision. He gave me the impression he thought sex was ugly. There should be no mystery in sex. Every mystery excites the imagination far more than a plain statement of anatomical facts. Women who are unmarried who intend to go into professional work, and who have reached the age of 16, must have some kind of sex education if they have not already had it. These women should not have to seek experimental information."

Tells of Letter to Dr. Brooks.

Testimony by Dr. Meyer disclosed that the day before his first hearing in the sex questionnaire episode he had written President Stratton D. Brooks a letter explaining his position in the case and defending himself. This letter, Dr. Meyer said he expected Dr. Brooks to transmit to the members of the executive board.

Questioned on the point by Dr.

DR. MAX F. MEYER.

DEPUTY SHERIFF SHOT BY ROBBER IN THE COUNTY

Will Van Benthuysen Seriously Wounded by Assailant Who Jumps on Running Board of Auto—Woman Hurt.

Will Van Benthuysen, St. Louis County deputy sheriff, was shot and seriously wounded at 11 o'clock last night by a robber who jumped to the running board of his automobile in Osage Hills.

Miss Carlida Kerth, 135 West Washington avenue, Kirkwood, who was driving Van Benthuysen's automobile, was cut by flying glass from windows of the sedan shattered by the robber's sawed-off automatic shotgun.

Van Benthuysen and Miss Kerth were taken to St. Mary's Hospital, where physicians said they were unable to count the number of pellets that had lodged in his head and neck. Miss Kerth's injuries are not serious.

"Van was teaching me to drive and I was at the wheel when the attempted robbery occurred," Miss Kerth said. "I was driving slowly when a big fat man jumped to the running board and said 'Stick 'em up.'

"Van drew his revolver. Something happened and it didn't fire. I don't know what happened then. The door on my side of the car was broken and I slipped out on to the running board. The robber fired several shots.

"Then I heard him say, 'Grab the wheel and drive somewhere.' I drove in to Bopp's undertaking establishment in Kirkwood."

Employes at the undertaking establishment took Van Benthuysen and Miss Kerth to St. Mary's Hospital. The deputy was conscious, but was bleeding from one ear, a condition which physicians at the hospital said might indicate brain injury.

Van Benthuysen, 23 years old, a former Washington University student, had been a deputy for about a year, and has worked as a night-rider with other deputies for some time. He lives at 436 Holmes avenue, Webster Groves. Miss Kerth is 22 years old.

EXPONENT OF ROCKET MOTOR KILLED MAKING EXPERIMENT

Max Valier of Germany Fatally Hurt in Explosion of New Liquid Oxygen.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, May 17.—Max Valier, German expert on rocket motors, was fatally injured today when working on a model of a new liquid oxygen rocket.

A piece of the recoil motor blew out and struck Valier in the neck. His jugular vein was severed. Two scientists working with him at the time were uninjured.

Valier and the German scientist, Paul Heylandt, had been developing the new motor and only recently had made successful tests with it.

Out of Work; Dies of Hunger.

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., May 17.—Frank Williams, 43 years old, of Harlingen, N. J., today was officially listed as a victim of starvation, following his death last night. Williams walked most of the way West, was unable to get work and was found unconscious in a railroad yard at Needles, Cal., and brought to the County Hospital here. He said he had had virtually nothing to eat for a week.

MUSSOLINI SAYS HIS NAVY PROGRAM IS NO MERE GESTURE

Premier, Before 125,000 Florentines, Declares Ships Will Be Constructed According to "Pride of Italian People."

"MACHINE GUNS BETTER THAN WORDS"

By the Associated Press.

FLORENCE, Italy, May 17.—Premier Mussolini today told 125,000 Florentines gathered in the historic square of the Signoria that "right without force is a vain word."

Retracing the progress of the Fascists since their institution he said the only internal problems remaining for Italy's solutions were of an economic order.

The whole population of Florence and the surrounding country tried to force its way into the historic square where Savonarola was hanged and burned.

To the frenzied plaudits of his hearers, jammed in a solid mass in the square, the Premier in stentorian tones announced that Fascist Italy desired to live in friendship with the peoples beyond her frontiers, but that "if the challenge is given us, all Black Shirts and the regular Army will be at their posts."

The speech bristled with references to Italy's naval ambitious and confidence in her future on the sea. The Premier reaffirmed his promise that her new naval program, instead of being a mere gesture, would be carried out to the utmost.

"It will be constructed ton for ton, with mathematical precision, according to the pride of the Italian people," he cried.

Mussolini said there were parties and groups abroad who believed it was possible to isolate Fascist Italy.

"They are working indirectly for others. We stand waiting for them at the firing post," he declared, "and if an attempt is made to violate our territorial integrity, the Italian people will spring up with a fury such as never has been seen.

"It is certain we can never sit down. Tomorrow you will see an imposing concentration of armed forces. This I wished myself, because it serves as a warning to all, so that they may know that Italy, when her national dignity is in question, has ready the Blackshirts, the regular Army and her whole people in eagerness to reach the position to which she has a right in the world."

Affirming that "real machine guns and real rifles are better than words," in matters of foreign policy, he repeated that "right, without force, is a vain word."

Cardinal Mistrangelo, Archbishop of Florence, himself came out to hear the Duce's speech, listening to it from the historic Palazzo Vecchio. The Duce reverently kissed the Cardinal's amethyst ring, in devout Catholic fashion, upon visiting him in the palace.

PASTOR GETS 1 TO 14 YEARS FOR SHOOTING HIS SEXTON

By the Associated Press.

OTTAWA, Ill., May 17.—Judge Frank H. Hayes in LaSalle County Circuit Court today setnenced the Rev. James A. A. Wilson of Mendota, Ill., to serve one to 14 years in prison for shooting Amos Elliott, his church sexton.

The case will be appealed to the Supreme Court and Judge Hayes granted a stay of execution till Sept. 1. His attorneys said bail would be furnished.

The Rev. Mr. Wilson has been in jail since Jan. 29, the day he shot Elliott and Mrs. Elliott in a quarrel over a letter Wilson had written to Mrs. Emma Wagner, a parishioner. He said the Elliots had been showing the letter around the parish and were putting a wrong interpretation on it.

After the shooting the minister went to his home and tried to kill himself, but inflicted only slight wounds.

POLICE PREPARE TO BLOCK GANDHI FOLLOWERS' RAIDS

WOMAN LEADER ON WAY TO SHOLAPUR

Mrs. Naidu Said to Seek to Renew Civil Disobedience Campaign at Scene of Recent Riots.

By the Associated Press.

BOMBAY, May 17.—The salt war in Bombay presidency tonight appeared to be working to a crisis. While successive groups of civil resistance volunteers poured into Dharasana to carry on the campaign against the Government salt depot there begun by Mrs. Sarojini Naidu, 400 other volunteers assembled this afternoon in Bombay and planned to march tomorrow on the salt depot at Wasala, six miles away.

A large force of police has been called out to frustrate the attempt, the nucleus of their concentration being at Jacob Circle, on the line of March to Wadala. The volunteers changed their plan of marching en masse and decided to split into small groups so as to spread out the police. It is thought they plan to reassemble at Gowari, which is near the salt pans, and launch a raid from there.

A third raid is projected at the Shiroda salt works and the police have made preparations to meet any contingency there.

Police Halt Raid.

The third attempt to capture the Dharasana salt pans, made by followers of Mrs. Naidu without her personal leadership, was stopped by police today. The volunteers were halted in the road, as they were in the other forays, and surrounded by a cordon of officers. They showed passive resistance as in the other attempts, spinning cloth and singing religious songs.

It is understood that Mrs. Naidu, having begun the Dharasana campaign, feels that she need no longer stay at her camp, Untadi. That place will remain her headquarters but she will tour the country to promote the civil disobedience campaign and will leave the Dharasana movement in the hands of her council of war.

The immediate objective of Mrs. Naidu, who heads the entire civil disobedience campaign now that Mahatma Gandhi and Abbas Tyabji have been arrested, is declared to be Sholapur which is under martial law following riots last week.

Gandhi Caps Barred.

The wearing of Gandhi caps has been banned in Sholapur, and the resistance leaders are said to consider that order a challenge which should be taken up. Meanwhile police guards have replaced a large number of troops in Sholapur and the city appears to be calming down.

Contrary to previous reports, the 225 volunteers who were arrested yesterday at Dharasana have not yet been released. Of them 190 are charged with being members of an unlawful assembly. The other 35, led by S. S. Batliwala, son of Dr. Batliwala, former president of the Bombay municipal corporation, are charged also with violence.

Thirty of the latter group have been on a hunger strike since yesterday and charge that they were insulted by a police officer. The officer in charge today offered an apology in behalf on an absent colleague, but Batliwala would not accept it.

Bail was offered for all the volunteers but they declined it. A magistrate has arrived from Bulsar to conduct their trial.

RENO, Nev., May 17.—Mrs. Julia de F. Tiffany Parker, one of the twin granddaughters of the founder of the New York jewelry firm of Tiffanys, filed suit for divorce today against Guerdon S. Parker, New York architect, alleging mental cruelty.

Mrs. Parker says that her husband cursed and swore at her, that he nagged and found fault and that it became impossible for her to live with him. Custody of two minor daughters, 18 and 15 years old, is asked by Mrs. Parker. She specifically asks for no alimony or for any contributions toward the support of the children. They were married in New York Dec. 10, 1910.

lives, confided that he was investigating Charles S. Thompson, former narcotics agent here, and asked Lee and his friends to make affidavits that they had paid Thompson for protection.

Later, he said, the agent summoned him to the Federal Building, told him he was "hard up" and asked to borrow $300 for two or three weeks. Lin and Sheets agreed that Lin dictated the note which Sheets typed in duplicate and signed.

Defense counsel read the affidavit of Congressman Dyer, who said he had accused Sheets of "trying to frame my friend, Joe Lin," and had obtained an admission from Sheets that he had borrowed the money and intended to pay it back. Lin's character witnesses included James T. H. Nash, Immigration Inspector here; William H. Woodward, former assistant United States Attorney; Col. John A. Laird, former president of the Board of Police Commissioners, and several Secret Service agents and other Government employes.

Through the three days of the trial, Lin maintained true Oriental calm, hiding the emotion which burst out when the verdict was read. Smiles wreathed his face then and he threw his arms around Vance J. Higgs, his attorney and friend, then hurried to the corridor where he waited eagerly at the door to seize the hands of the jurors as they filed out.

"We just don't like frame-ups," one of the jurors volunteered to Lin, and to reporters who asked the reason for their decision. Four had voted for conviction on the first ballot but had been won over by the other jurors during three hours of deliberation.

Yee Nam Lee, who had professed complete ignorance of English though admitting 20 years' residence in St. Louis, slipped quietly from the courtroom, while the tearful Lin wiped his spectacles and talked with the jurors. During the trial, Lee's testimony had injected a note of humor into the proceedings.

The narcotics agents had testified that during the opium raid Lee started bribe negotiations by saying "I wanta fix 'em," and had asked permission, in English, to call Joe Lin, from his restaurant at 413 North Seventh street.

Tests Witness' English.

"Can you say 'I'?" he demanded. Lee assumed a puzzled expression and waited while Ward and an interpreter repeated the question.

"I," said Lee.

"Wanta," Lee testified.

"'Fix 'em'?" asked the prosecutor.

"Fix 'em," said Lee triumphantly, ignoring the interpreter.

"That doesn't prove a thing," ruled Judge Faris when laughter had subsided. "I can speak Chinese myself that way."

PUBLISHER OF SUPPRESSED PAPER EXPLAINS APPEAL

J. M. Near of Minnesota Says State Law Violates Guaranty of Liberty of Press.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—J. M. Near, one of the publishers of the Saturday Press, whose publication was suppressed under a Minnesota statute, today filed with the Supreme Court a statement showing the grounds on which he appealed to that tribunal.

Pointing out that his co-publisher, Howard A. Guilford, had failed to join in the appeal, Near insisted, as he did in the lower courts, that the Minnesota law under which he had been ordered to cease publication was unconstitutional. The lower courts held that the Saturday Press was a malicious, scandalous and defamatory publication, constituting a public menace, and the publishers were enjoined from publishing such a newspaper. Near insisted in his statement that the Minnesota statute violated the guaranty of the liberty of the press under the Federal and the Minnesota Constitutions.

STATE CHECKING ON QUALITY OF GASOLINE SOLD FOR AUTOS

Complaints Have Reached Oil Department Adulterated Fuel Is Being Delivered Here.

JEFFERSON CITY, May 17.—State Oil Inspector Henry Perriguey has issued a request that Missouri motorists forward to the State Oil Inspector in Jefferson City any complaints of suspected adulteration or dilution of gasoline sold as motor vehicle fuel. A check is being made by department chemists of the quality of gasoline sold at filling stations.

Perriguey said the chemists were sent to St. Louis recently after complaints had been received of dilution of gasoline with kerosene, as a result of their investigation, he said, complaints were filed against an oil company in St. Louis County, charging them with selling gasoline that was below the State standard.

The chemists will be sent to Kansas City in a few days for a similar investigation.

BELMONTS PLAN BILLION DOLLAR BANK COMBINE

Propose to Organize Holding Corporation With Ramifications All Over the United States.

NEW YORK, May 17.—The Belmont family, comparatively quiescent in financial affairs in recent years after generations of railroad builders and money barons, is planning to retread the stage of active finance through the formation of a $1,000,000,000 bank stock holding corporation to transact business in all parts of the United States.

The corporation will be organized and underwritten by August Belmont & Co., the Wall Street private banking firm founded by the capitalist of that name in the era of the elder J. P. Morgan, Jay Gould and the Vanderbilts. This corporation will exchange its shares for stocks of banks, or operate through regional holding companies.

Part of the capital stock will be offered to the public in the next few weeks, it was disclosed, but control will rest with the Belmont family.

The first step in the plan, according to the firm of Pomeroy & Salmon of New York, is that negotiations are under way for a group banking combination in Pennsylvania. The company will be known as the Western Pennsylvania Bancorporation. The underwriting will be handled by the Belmont firm, but management of the group will be in charge of the member banks, it was said.

To Go Ito Other States.

Similar organizations will be formed in other states with the same general plan, grouping banks with combined resources which are expected to exceed $1,000,000,000.

At the Pomeroy & Salmon offices, it was said that firm was acting merely as organizer in promoting the idea of group banking and bringing the banks in various states in touch with New York financial interests. It was declared that the plan was something new in banking and was not in any way an adaptation of chain banking. Such a plan, it was said, would provide protection for the banks in each state and prevent encroachment of outside interests, while providing a medium of profitable contacts with financial interests in New York and other centers.

Forty banks with total deposits of nearly $400,000,000 are expected to participate in the Western Pennsylvania Bancorporation, it was reported from Pittsburg.

Efforts will be made to provide a uniform and related banking service by all members and later groups will be organized in different states.

Exchange of Stock Planned.

Although it was admitted that the general plan for formation of a $1,000,000,000 corporation was correct, Morgan Belmont of the firm of August Belmont & Co. said he was not prepared to make any comment at present.

The general plan, it is reported, includes the exchange of stock between the holding company and the member banks on the basis of Class A convertible preferred nonvoting stock of the holding company equal to the book value of the shares of each bank, and in addition, Class B voting stock for the good will, based on earnings for recent years.

AMERICAN TO BE HANGED FOR KILLING IN NOVA SCOTIA

By the Associated Press.

SYDNEY, N. S., May 17.—Ingvald "Bing" Anderson, his last hope for life gone with rejection today by the Privy Council at Ottawa of his plea for clemency, will be hanged Tuesday for the murder of a Sydney hotel clerk.

Anderson, a former New England ski champion from Berlin, N. H., had sought commutation of sentence on the ground that he was insane when he beat to death Debiois Rehberg here a year ago last February. The Privy Council decided he was sane.

The council had before it in making its decision the reports of alienists, who said Anderson was sane and the affidavits of Anderson's mother and other residents of the little New Hampshire town that he was not. The affidavits from Berlin said Anderson had acted strangely ever since an operation in boyhood and that injuries suffered in ski jumping had affected his mind.

Anderson was convicted of the murder a year ago this spring. He carried the case to the Chief Justice of Nova Scotia, who decided against him March 14 and sentenced him to hang May 20. The Privy Council, holding its customary hearing on the case of a man condemned to death, was his court of last resort.

REPORTERS LEAD POLICE RAIDS

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., May 17.—Led by newspaper reporters, sent out to prove to authorities that stories of wide-open gambling were accurate, police squads this afternoon and tonight made nine raids in downtown Detroit and arrested approximately 300 persons. Most of the places visited were described as handbooks. The largest number taken into custody at one place was 90, at 25 Cadillac Square, half a block from the City Hall.

The police also reported finding black jack and other games in operation. The reporters, working for the Detroit Free Press, led squads of raiders from Police Headquarters to the raided places without telling the officers where they were going. The Free Press said that the raids came as a result of a statement of Police Commissioner Harold H. Emmons questioning the accuracy of stories of wide-open gambling which have been appearing in that newspaper. The Commissioner was told that reporters would show his men the places, and the challenge was accepted. The Free Press says the reporters and police found the gambling houses open to the public.

SAFETY ZONES LEGAL IF ONLY PAINTED LINES

Counselor Gives Opinion — Autos Must Not Drive Through Them.

Safety zones which consist only of yellow lines painted on the pavement adjoining street car tracks are legal under the new traffic code, City Counselor Muench has decided in an opinion asked for by Chief of Police Gerk. The police will begin enforcing the law accordingly at once, the Chief announced yesterday.

This means that this type of zone has the same status as the more complete type protected by mushroom markers or signs. Under the new law vehicles may not be driven across any sort of safety zone. This is a protection to pedestrians.

However, under this decision, vehicles may pass a street car that has stopped for passengers where there is a painted-line zone. Where there is no zone of any kind, a vehicle must halt behind the nearest door of a trolley that has stopped for passengers. Installation of the zones facilitates traffic movement, Muench pointed out. He held that the painted lines constituted official zones, being designated by the Street Department, and should be considered "unless and until judicially disapproved."

LUCY COTTON, FORMER STAGE STAR, TO SEEK A DIVORCE

Widow of Edward Russell Thomas Alleges Former Col. Ament Is Dictatorial.

By the Associated Press.

RENO, Nev., May 17.—Mrs. Lucy Cotton Ament, stage celebrity of a decade ago, will file a suit for divorce here next Tuesday against Lytton Gray Ament, former army Colonel, whom she met in 1927 during the visit of Queen Marie of Rumania to the United States. Col. Ament was one of the official escorts for the Queen.

Mrs. Ament is the widow of Edward Russell Thomas, former New York publisher, who left her a fortune. She was his third wife and he is the father of her 5-year-old daughter.

The divorce complaint, it was learned, will charge Ament with being indifferent, domineering and dictatorial. On the second night after their marriage, in Towson, Md., in February, 1927, Mrs. Ament alleges, her husband told her that no one could tolerate her, except for what they could get out of her. She will ask permission to resume her former name of Lucy Cotton Thomas.

FINAL REPARATIONS TRANSFERS

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, May 17.—Final transfers on the reparations account under the Dawes plan were made here today by S. Parker Gilbert, Agent General for reparations. With a joint report presented by the Reparations Commission and the German war-burdens commission, the Young plan, as provided in the Hague agreement of Jan. 20, came into force. A special committee examined the accounts of the transition period and notified Gilbert that the reparations account with the Reichsbank had been found correct and approved.

With the reimbursement to Germany by Gilbert of about 369,000,000 marks, accounts between the Agent General and the German Government were finally closed. A sum of 109,000,000 marks in foreign currencies deposited in England, France and New York, has been transferred to the bank for international settlements at Basel.

Dr. Nicholson of Mount Wilson Observatory Tells of Body's Strange Behavior.

By the Associated Press.

PASADENA, Cal., May 17.—Dr. Seth D. Nicholson, head of the solar department of Mount Wilson (Cal.) Observatory, thinks the so-called ninth planet or planet X, recently announced discovery of observers at Lowell Observatory, Flagstaff, Ariz., is an asteroid or possibly a comet.

Expressing conclusions reached by astronomers of Lick Observatory, as well as by his associates at Mount Wilson, Dr. Nicholson last night told the Astronomical and Physics Clubs of the California Institute of Technology that the new discovery "cannot be a planet in the same sense that the earth and the seven other major members of the solar family are planets, because it does not behave like a planet."

DANIEL M. GRISSOM, EX-EDITOR, 101, DIES

Daniel M. Grissom, who was 101 years old Jan. 26 last, died of the infirmities of age at the Old Folks' Home in Kirkwood late yesterday.

Mr. Grissom, a reporter, editorial writer and newspaper editor more than 75 years ago, had lived at the home 19 years. It was not until a week before his last birthday that he learned his right age. Until that time he had thought he was born in 1830. But a relative who had access to the old Grissom family Bible wrote him Jan. 22, saying he had been born in 1829 and had been 100 years old for more than 11 months without knowing it.

More than 100 friends and relatives gathered at the Home for the birthday celebration. Mr. Grissom, sitting among pillows in a wheel chair, cut the 32-pound cake decorated with 100 nodules of icing and a single candle symbolical of all the others that couldn't be crowded on a single cake. The Rev. J. Francis Bloy of Grace Episcopal Church, Kirkwood, spoke on the aged man's career as a reporter and editor.

Mr. Grissom last worked as an editorial writer on the St. Louis Republic. In his 80s and 90s he carried on a voluminous correspondence with friends and relatives, but when interviewed just before the birthday party he said:

"My pencil won't do what I want it to now. It wanders all over the page. I used to walk up and down the corridor here by myself up to the last 10 months, but I just can't make it alone any more. I'm getting old and my legs just won't support me the way they used to. I'm beginning to feel my years."

Funeral arrangements have not been made.

Distribution of the $14,000,00 trust estate of Ehrhardt D. Fran St. Louis grocer, is requested in petition filed in Federal Court yesterday by the trustees, G. A. Fran and G. A. Buder, with the indorsin signatures of 23 primary and secondary heirs.

The death of Mrs. Sophie Franz his widow, at Long Beach, Cal. April 14, opened the way to the request for distribution. She had life interest in the estate, her husband's will providing that it be divided among the 10 direct heirs after her death.

All the heirs have signed the petition for distribution, except one of the seven surviving children, E. W. Franz, and his two daughters. E. W. Franz is plaintiff in a suit for removal of the two trustees, which was decided in the trustees' favor by Judge Faris, but has been appealed. It was stated yesterday, at Buder's office, one of the trustees, that it is considered likely that E. W. Franz and his daughters will join later in the petition for distribution.

The petition for distribution asks the court to make the legal allowance of 5 per cent to the trustees on disbursements, and to set aside $25,000 to cover the expense of pending litigation.

Secondary heirs signing the petition are S. H. Kleinschmidt, Helen Kleinschmidt, Elenore K. Berger, Clara E. (Mrs. E. H.) Franz, William E. Franz, Ehrhardt D. Franz II, E. H. Franz Jr., Clara F. Burris, Ernestine Booker, Mildred F. Luckey, Walter G. Franz II, G. A. Franz Jr., Richard . Franz, Oscar E. Franz, Constance F. Beatty, Kathryn Franz and Nellie Louise Franz.

The Franz estate, as has been told, grew from a $21,000 investment made in 1896 in stock of the manufacturing concern which is now the Burroughs Adding Machine Co. of Detroit. The estate has been worth as high as $27,000,000, on the basis of market quotations, but shrank in the stock crash of last autumn.

Bradley Horses Never Contenders.

The famous Bradley colors, always Kentucky favorites, never showed conspicuously in the running, except for a brief early flash by Buckeye Poet. This colt finished thirteenth, however, while his stablemate, Breezing Thru, came along in eleventh place.

Similar disappointing fate befell the entry of the Three D's Stock Farm, carrying the Texas colors of W. T. Waggoner & Sons. Kilkerry, the stable's favorite, never was better than ninth and finished in that position, while Broadway Limited, appraised at $65,000 as a yearling, was fourteenth, escaping last place as Dick O'Hara, the entry of Patrick H. Other favorites have galloped home at Churchill Downs. More have gone down to defeat. Today, it was all Sande and Gallant Fox, even though it was a good half mile before the [illegible] son of Sir Gallahad III actually was pushed out to dominate the race.

Sande won his Derby in 1923, astride the noted Rancocas stable money winner Zev, and repeated in 1925 with Flying Ebony, carrying the colors of Gifford A. Cochran. Several times since then the great rider had sought the exclusive third triumph. He had come close, but today made sure of the honor and thereby equaled the record of Ike Murphy, Negro jockey, who rode winners in 1884, 1890 and 1891. It was a dramatic comeback for the little horseman, who, since his last Derby victory, had been almost killed in an accident, recovered and fought his way back to leadership.

Prelude Calm and Peaceful.

As Derbies have come and gone, this one furnished a comparatively calm and peaceful prelude to the excitement that even depressed times and a small field could not diminish, as today brought in the final rush and jostling jam of turf followers. Taxi drivers and even hotelkeepers, selling lodging at $20 a day, complained that business was not up to the level of former years. At the Downs, the $2 mutuel "Iron-Men" got the "play" from bettors who formerly marched up to the $50 windows. Fewer special trains brought their throngs of the faithful. Many familiar faces were missing.

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., May 17.—The prospective America's cup defender Enterprise again defeated the old cup defender Resolute, now owned by Commodore C. Walter Clark, and the Vanitie, owned by Gerard B. Lambert, in a resumption of the trial races of the new vessel against the older boats on Long Island Sound this afternoon.

The boats finished in a bad haze and early reports credited Vanitie with finishing second, though she finally trailed both of her rivals across the finish line. The Enterprise led the Resolute by approximately eight and one half minutes, while the Vanitie was another minute and 10 seconds farther astern.

The estimates of the time were all unofficial. One of the surprising results of the race was the fact that both the Vanitie and Resolute were both able to outdo the new prospective defender in pointing.

The sloops raced over a course of approximately 22 miles. The Enterprise was sailed by former Commodore Harold Vanderbilt. Vanitie was sailed over most of the course by her owner, though Cornelius Shields, another of the internationally known skippers, took his trick at the wheel. Another member of the Corinthian crew of the Vanitie was Gen. Cornelius Vanderbilt.

Lipton's Shamrock V Wins in Trial at Harwich.

By the Associated Press.

HARWICH, Eng., May 17.—The Shamrock V, Sir Thomas Lipton's new challenger for the America's Cup, won in its first race against big yachts today in the Royal Harwich Yacht Club's annual regatta. The Shamrock V. finished the course of 38 sea miles about one minute astern of A. U. Patons' Lulworth, the scratch boat, which had to give the Shamrock V. an allowance of eight minutes. Lord Camrose's Cambria took second place on the allowance and Lulworth third.

"The ambition of my life will be achieved in September," he said, "and the old mug will return to its home after a sojourn of nearly 80 years in America. I have a magnificent boat, a great captain and crew and the will to win."

Oil Well on Poor Farm.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Kan., May 17.—An oil well estimated to flow 20 barrels a day was brought in late today on the property of the Wyandotte County Poor Farm west of here. Frank Messler, of Tulsa, independent driller, said production could be increased to 50 barrels. The county is to receive one-eighth royalty.

NEW YORK HALTS MONARCH ROYALTY STOCK SALES

Five Brokers and Salesmen of Tulsa (Ok.) Oil Concern Also Enjoined by Court Order.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 17.—The Monarch Royalty Corporation of Tulsa, Ok., and five individuals were temporarily enjoined today from selling additional stock in the company.

The injunction was issued in Supreme Court on a motion by Assistant Attorney-General Washburn, head of the State Bureau of Securities. A hearing will be held May 27.

Washburn charged that the company appraised royalty interests in Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Arkansas, Louisiana and New Mexico at sums largely in excess of the cost price and market value, thus creating a fictitious surplus and permitting payment of larger dividends than were actually earned. He said the company represented that it had a surplus of nearly $1,000,000, whereas, in fact, there was a deficit of more than $1,000,000, which constituted a scheme to defraud.

The principal business office of the company is in Tulsa, with administration offices in Kansas City. The individuals named in the injunction are David Manesse, James A. Savage, Richard Shipmen, John M. Sheedy and Peter Minck, brokers and salesmen alleged to have been engaged in sale of the company's stock.

It was charged the company obtained its apparent surplus by appraising royalty interests at the estimated value of recoverable oil.

ST. LOUISAN GETS FELLOWSHIP TO STUDY AT MUNICH, GERMANY

NEW YORK, May 17.—Leonard Koester of St. Louis, holding a fellowship at Washington University, today received an exchange fellowship to study German language and literature at Munich, Germany, from the Institute of International Education.

Ninety-eight fellowships and scholarships to American students, graduate students and teachers for study in Europe are announced. Of the fellowships 57 are for studying in German universities and technical schools and cover a wide range of subjects from chemistry and economics to philosophy and theology. Most of the fellowships cover the next academic year, but there are 20 awards of scholarships for art study during the summer at the Institute of Art and Archeology of the University of Paris. This is the largest number of fellowships every granted by the Institute through its American German student exchange.

CITY ART MUSEUM COLLECTION NOW WORTH $5,000,000

It Cost $2,857,499 but Director Meyric R. Rogers Says Its Value Has Increased.

Although the art collections in the City Art Museum, Forest Park, are carried on the books at the original purchase value as $2,857,499, they are estimated to be actually worth $5,000,000 now. This statement was made to the Board of Control by Meyric R. Rogers, director of the museum, in connection with the annual report for the fiscal year ending April 30.

The book value includes gifts estimated to have cost $694,553, as well as purchases by the museum. It does not include the loan collections, notably the objects lent by Washington University.

Donated or bequeathed trust funds for the museum amount to $143,600, which, added to the book value of collections, makes the institution's wealth in art and funds restricted to art purchases $3,001,099, Rogers pointed out.

Nearly all important purchases of art objects during the last eight or nine years have increased "enormously" in value, some double or more, the director declares. This estimate he bases on Eastern market prices, auction prices and offers for objects owned by the museum. As examples, Rogers singled out the following:

Specimen Increases.

Gilbert Stuart's portrait of George Washington, for which $35,000 was paid in 1923, was the subject of a recent offer of $100,000.

Five choice Chinese art objects, which cost $27,800, have been estimated by an expert to be worth $97,000 now. They include a porcelain vase of oxblood red, which cost $10,500, but is valued now at $35,000, and is said to have only one counterpart in existence.

The museum owns a canvas, "The Reader," by Edouard Manet, which cost $25,000 in 1915. Dealers now are asking $50,000 or more for other paintings by the same artist which are considered to have no superiority over this.

Since 1910 the museum's income from the city tax of 2 cents on the $100 valuation which supports it has been almost $3,700,000, Rogers told the board, comparing this with the present estimate of a $5,000,000 value of collections. Rogers emphasized the stability and reality of art values, calling attention to the large sums obtained in Germany from the sale of art objects during the financial chaos there after the World War.

The fine things, which seem extravagantly expensive at the time of purchase, are the first to gain in value, Rogers added. A statement from the museum offices said:

Cultural Value Stressed.

"The museum's worth, from the financial viewpoint, is, in the opinion of the board of control, entirely a secondary matter and does not express the true function of the museum, which is cultural and not financial.

"During its 21 years as a city institution the museum has provided entertainment and instruction for 4,764,027 visitors, as shown by carefully kept attendance records. It has thus supplied a cultural influence in the community which cannot be computed in terms of money, and its rising attendance, particularly of those who come with the definite purpose of attending lectures, exhibitins and demonstrations, is evidence of the spread of this influence.

"There were 29,787 children and 11,609 adults, a total of 41,396, attending the special lectures and other activities of the museum's educational department during the past year. This was a gain of 3833 over the preceding year. The new series of Five European period rooms have been crowded with visitors since their opening in January. During the course of the great exhibit of modern European paintings in March and April, there were 53,811 visitors. Through these and related activities, the museum, in co-operation with museums in other cities, is exerting an influence that goes far toward making life richer and more enjoyable."

7000 MARCH IN PARADE IN MEMORY OF JOAN OF ARC

Her Entry Into Compiegne 500 Years Ago Re-enacted With Medieval Pomp.

By the Associated Press.

COMPIEGNE, France, May 17.—Joan of Arc's entry into Compiegne 500 years ago was commemorated here tonight by a re-enactment of the scene. It was before this city that Joan of Arc was captured by the Burgundians and the English in 1430.

The ceremonies were solemnly opened before the representatives of the French Government and members of the diplomatic corps of Great Britain, Belgium, Italy and Canada.

The Maid of Orleans, impersonated by Mlle. Nelly Wilhem, mounted and in armor, surrounded by her bodyguard, marched into Compiegne in the midst of a torchlight procession in which 7000 persons bearing lanterns took part.

The celebrations will be continued tomorrow, when there will be a daylight costume procession and a medieval tournament reproducing all the ceremonies as well as the combats of the days of chivalry.

DETROIT CITY OFFICIAL FIRED, REHIRED, FACES OUSTER AGAIN

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, May 17.—The experience of being fired on Wednesday, rehired on Saturday, and the certainty of being fired again next Monday has befallen Frank Couzens, son of the millionaire Senator of Michigan.

Last Wednesday Couzens resigned from the Street Railway Commission at the request of Mayor Charles Bowles, who charged that he had failed to cooperate with him and other members of the Commission. The Detroit Street Railway system is municipally owned.

The Mayor and his family left yesterday for the Derby at Louisville as did the four ranking members of the City Council. Councilman John S. Hall, a dentist became acting Mayor. On his first act was to reappoint Couzens.

Clark Branlon, the Mayor's secretary hesitated about delivering the appointment. The acting Mayor informed him, "I'm Mayor, and this letter is going out."

The Corporation Council thinks the appointment illegal and there the matter rests until Mayor Bowles returns to his office Monday.

YOUNG WOMAN KILLS HERSELF

CHICAGO, May 17.—Miss Dorothy Ellen Brown, daughter of A. G. Brown, wealthy architect for the Pure Oil Co., shot herself to death in her Glencoe home today. Her parents expressed belief she killed herself while despondent over the failure of a dress shop project she undertook several months ago.

St. Louisans Prominent In Society Gathered at Colorful Derby Scene

By MARGARET ALLEN RUHL.
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 17.—The Kentucky Derby, rendezvous for society and sportsmen from all over the United States, was the spectacle that is tradition in racing annals; but again it rained. The crowd, noticeably smaller than last year, roared its approval when Earl Sande flashed down the stretch to win with Gallant Fox, but it was a wet crowd and its enthusiasm was short-lived.

The rain, which began with an intermittent drizzle, fell harder after the finish, and when Sande rode the Belair entry into the enclosure where the Earl of Derby officiated at the cup presentation, only the veterans of many rainy racing days remained.

Everything from the stock market debacle of a few months ago to the inclement weather of this and past Derbys was blamed by Louisville residents as the reason for the diminished crowd. Other reasons advanced were the exorbitant prices charged by hotels, restaurants, taxicabs and what not. One late arrival Derby eve was loud in his protests at being charged $100 for a room. Taxicab drivers asked and received as much as $50 to haul their fares back to town after the race. The hotels were apparently filled, but not thronged as in previous years.

Scene's Most Colorful Touch.

As usual, it was the light, gay raiment of the feminine guests that gave the scene its most colorful touch, for they, despite the weather forecast, adhered largely to their original plan of costuming, and appeared in the newest spring styles at their most ornamental best. The rain seemed particularly unfortunate this season, for fashion has decreed very frivolous frocks which do not dampen successfully. Combinations of pastel shades predominated instead of the monotone that has prevailed in the past, with ciel blue the leading favorite. Of materials and styles there was a great variety. Filmy chiffons and tailored laces were smart enough to tempt superlatives, and knitted suits and printed silk ensembles were much in evidence. Capulets, jackets or boleros seemed to characterize almost every costume.

There were not as many St. Louisans present as in other years. Probably the largest group from Missouri's metropolis were debutantes and their escorts who arrived this morning in a private car for a two-day visit, chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas K. Niedringhaus Jr. The party was organized by William Brown Goltra and included Miss Jane Burns, Miss Lily Busch Magnus, Miss Mary Less Kennard, Miss Ellen Bates, Miss Anne Farrar Semple, a former Veiled Prophet queen; Richard Dana, Kent Ravenscroft, Herbert Jones, Benoist Tompkins and Howard O'Fallon Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Niekamp. They arrived at the Downs for the first race and were soon deeply engrossed in racing forms and the consumption of "hot dogs." Tonight they attended the Derby dinner dance at the Louisville Country Club, and tomorrow afternoon will be guests of honor at a tea to be given by Mrs. Charles Claggett. Mrs. Claggett, a sister-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. William N. Claggett, has visited in St. Louis frequently. While in Louisville, the party had accommodations in the car on which they made the journey.

Wendlings Give House Party.

Mr. and Mrs. George R. Wendling, almost as much at home in Louisville as in St. Louis, are hosts at a Derby house party at the home of her mother, Mrs. John Avery Haldeman, during Mrs. Haldeman's absence in Burlingame, Cal., where she is visiting another son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. George Leib. Mrs. Wendling, as Miss Jean Bruce Haldeman, was born, reared and married in Louisville. Their guests are Mrs. Charles E. Bascom and Sharp Ezzell of St. Louis, Mr. and Mrs. Craig Culbertson of New York, brother-in-law and sister of the hostess, and Elmore Hotchkiss of Richmond, Va. They attended the Robert and Sevier Bonnie breakfast this morning and participated in the many informal parties given during the Derby season by other Louisville friends. Mrs. Wendling looked unusually well as she played hostess in the Haldeman box today. Her costume was of coin dotted black silk, and she wore a large black hat edged with white hair-braid.

Two groups of socially prominent St. Louisans came by way of cabin cruisers on the Mississippi. Mr. and Mrs. John C. Roberts Jr. and Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Berkley arrived Friday on the Roberts boat, the Georgia Lee, and Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Butler, with Mrs. Butler's sister, Mrs. Frances Woods Kauffman, and Mr. Butler's sister, Miss Jane Butler, came later in the day on the Butler cruiser, the Take Your Time. Mr. and Mrs. William K. Norris gave a dinner for the party at the Seelbach Hotel last night. The Norris family, with Mrs. J. O. King and Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Torrance, motored to French Lick earlier in the week and came to Louisville for the last two days of racing. They were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Torrance in their box today.

Stafford (Casey) Lambert flew down in his new Lockheed Sirius in an hour and 45 minutes this afternoon, and planned to go to Indianapolis tonight to attend a party. He was accompanied by his cousin, Adolph Busch.

F. O. Watts Luncheon Host.

F. O. Watts entertained a group of St. Louisans at luncheon at the Jockey Club and later in his box in the upper tier near the finish line. The group included Mr. and Mrs. George Welch Simmons, their daughter, Miss Virginia Simmons, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Wright. Mrs. Wright, one of St. Louis' best dressed women, wore black and white printed silk piped in yellow, almost concealed under a cape coat of black with a rolled velvet collar and a broad-brimmed black straw hat banded in patent leather, a new fashion note.

Miss Virginia McVoy, debutante of last season and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. McVoy, appeared at the track with Curry Kirkpatrick, who is visiting his aunt, Mrs. Abbott of Louisville. The Abbott family is well known in St. Louis and Miss Katherine Abbott shared the honors of the debutante season with Miss Isabel Kirkpatrick a year ago. Miss McVoy is staying at French Lick Springs with a party of Derby enthusiasts, including Mrs. Neil O'Day and Stanley and Charles Wright.

Miss Betty Willson Niles, daughter of Mrs. Francis H. Niles, has been one of the most feted of the St. Louis girls since her arrival, several days ago, and was the center of an animated group today in the box of her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. C. Bruce Head of St. Louis and Louisville, who are entertaining at their country home Walleck, at Crestwood.

PROPERTY OWNERS DENY PLAZA BENEFIT

More testimony was heard by Circuit Judge Bader yesterday in the exceptions by property owners to benefit assessments levied against them for the Memorial Plaza. The plaza was included in the $87,000,000 bond issue for public improvements adopted in 1923, the sum of $6,000,000 being set aside for the purpose. However, the city established a benefit district in which it assessed property owners a total of approximately $1,000,000 for the plaza, but it is the contention of exceptors that the public, in voting for the bonds, intended that the entire project should be paid for from the bonds.

Missouri Pacific Denies Benefit.

Among the witnesses examined was F. P. Johnson, vice president of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Co., which excepts to an assessment of $48,425 on account of its new office building at Thirteenth and Olive streets, fronting on the site of the plaza. Johnson declared that the company's building would enjoy no special benefit. In fact, he said, it would be better if the space, instead of being vacant, was occupied with business property. The city contends that the open space, giving better air and light, would enhance the value of the Missouri Pacific and other surrounding property.

Several witnesses testified to conditions prevailing since the city has been acquiring property for the site. Some buildings have been wrecked, while others have been leased by the city to tenants for a period of three years or more. Not one sprig of grass has yet appeared on the plaza, Johnson said.

Complaint has been made that the wrecked buildings present an unsightly object, detrimental to neighboring property.

The fact that the city is using some of the property purchased for purposes other than a plaza would indicate that it has departed from the original plan, exceptors contend. This is another reason advanced why the benefits should be set aside.

Attorney Arouses Ire.

An attorney for one group of exceptors aroused the ire of Associate City Counselor Oliver Johnson by asserting that the city, in order to force some property owners on the site to sell cheap, had threatened to hang up condemnation signs declaring their buildings unsafe. The city's lawyer retorted there was no ground for such accusation, which, he said, made it appear the city was acting the part of a scoundrel. On his motion the charge was ordered stricken from the record by Judge Bader.

NYE WILL WATCH CLOSELY PRIMARY IN PENNSYLVANIA

Head of Senate Campaign Funds Committee Calls for Early Returns From Three Counties.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—Alarmed by "well-grounded reports' of an attempt "to alter election returns" in the Pennsylvania senatorial primary on Tuesday, Chairman Nye of the Senate campaign funds investigating committee today wired State's Attorneys in three counties to forward the returns immediately to Washington.

Final plans for a close checkup by the Senate committee of the election to decide the race between Senator Grundy and Secretary of Labor Davis for the Republican nomination will be determined at a special meeting Monday. It appears likely that Nye and possibly all five of the committee members will go direct to the polls at strategic points.

If conditions warrant it, Nye is ready to call immediate hearings next week. His fears of a scheme to alter the returns were expressed after a personal investigation this week but he would not amplify.

It was recalled by some committee members that the returns four years ago in the governorship election in Pennsylvania were not tabulated finally until Friday after the Tuesday elections. That was referred to in the discussion over the committee's request for a report by Wednesday night on the returns in three counties.

Meanwhile, it was decided to defer for at least another week the hearings in Illinois, where the committee intends to go to examine the expenditures in the recent primary race between Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick and Senator Deneen of Illinois for the Republican senatorial nomination.

Nye said he had heard some "rumblings" from New Jersey where the Republicans are engaged in a three-cornered race over the senatorship. He added, however, there were no plans at present for an inquiry in that State.

Gen. Pershing Thanks U. S. War Mothers in France

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, May 17.—It was the end of a thrill-packed day for the first pilgrimage of American war mothers when Gen. John J. Pershing, his eyes moist, thanked them in simple words for the mother love which sustained the American expeditionary forces 12 years ago they gave way to emotion. Many of the women wept as he spoke.

The talk was the highlight of a reception which followed the ceremony of laying a wreath on the tomb of France's Unknown Soldier at the Arc de Triomphe. At this ceremony Mrs. Sarah Thompson of New York laid a laurel wreath on the tomb, uttering the words: "I present this wreath from the gold star mothers of America to the unknown soldier of France with reverence."

Two other wreaths were placed by American women, one by Mrs. Annie R. Marks of Apalachicola, Fla., in the name of her State, and one by Mrs. M. Throckmorton in the name of Detroit gold star mothers.

Attending the ceremony were many French war mothers, Gen. Gouraud, Military Governor of Paris, and his staff; the color guard of Paris Post No. 1, American Legion; Col. R. Ellis, Col. G. G. Bartlett and other United States army officers in charge of the pilgrimage, and Commandant Berthier as representative of the French Minister of War.

Marcel Heraud, Under Secretary of State, welcomed the mothers to the reception following the speech. After the speeches most of the women filed by Gen Pershing to shake his hand. He had sympathetic words for all.

TWO PASSENGERS ARRESTED FOR BLOCKING DRIVER'S VIEW

The first arrests under the part of the new traffic code which specifies that it is a misdemeanor for the driver of an automobile to operate his car with his view obstructed by persons riding with him and a misdemeanor for a rider to obstruct the driver's view were made Friday evening at 10680 Riverview drive, when a roadster driven by Francis Bondurant, 19 years old, 6749 Page boulevard, struck another car.

With Bondurant were Joseph Mathews, 18, and Charles Close, 24, both of 730 Belt avenue, who also were arrested. Police say Bondurant was driving on the wrong side of the road and contend this is proof there were too many in the one seat of the vehicle. The young men were told to report at Police Court. The traffic code does not designate the number of persons which may ride in one seat.

CHILD KIDNAPED BY WOMAN POSING AS CHARITY WORKER

Daughter of Poor Parents in Chicago Has Been Missing Since Thursday.

CHICAGO, Ill., May 17.—Police are seeking a young woman who kidnaped 2-year-old Mary Agnes Morroney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Morroney, from her home Thursday. The Morroneys are poor and the little girl was kidnaped by a young woman who said she was Julia Otis, settlement worker, who had come in response to a call for help.

Information has been obtained that the child and her captor had been seen in the rest-room of a department store shortly after noon on Friday. Mrs. Elizabeth Mann, attendant in the rest room, said her attention was drawn to the young woman because the child cried constantly.

PRESIDENT TALKS OVER PROBLEMS AT CAMP

Has Cabinet Members, Senators and Congressmen With Him on Fishing Trip.

By the Associated Press.

ORANGE, Va., May 17. — The lure of trout fishing brought President Hoover to his Rapidan River fishing lodge today but problems of State trailed along.

The Chief Executive had as his guests the largest party that has visited the camp since Premier MacDonald was entertained there last fall. In the group of 13 were officials with whom the Chief Executive had an opportunity, during the three hour drive and tonight around the big log fire in the Community Hall, to chat formally about the problems of his administration as Congress approached adjournment.

Secretary Stimson, head of the American delegation to the London Naval Conference, and Attorney-General Mitchell were the cabinet's representatives. From the Senate, President Hoover had drawn Senators Capper of Kansas and Fess of Ohio, and from the House came Representatives Ramseyer of Iowa, Blackburn of Kentucky, and Free of California. Ogden L. Mills, Assistant-Secretary of the Treasury, and Theodore Roosevelt, Gov. of Porto Rico, filled out the list of officials.

The trip was a stag affair, Mrs. Hoover not having sufficiently recovered from a wrenched back to begin the summer journeys to the mountain retreat.

Arriving at the camp early today, most members of the party turned almost immediately for the trout streams, and good catches were general despite the recent rain.

Late today Secretary Wilbur and Mrs. Wilbur arrived at Orange and tomorrow they will drive up the mountain to inspect the lodge which is being built for them about two miles below that of the President. Work has been going forward rapidly upon the Interior Secretary's camp, and he expects it to be completed by July. A short distance away Secretary Hyde also is having a lodge built.

The President's party plans to spend Sunday resting, or riding horseback and hiking over the mountain paths about the lodge.

The return trip probably will be made late tomorrow afternoon, the President arriving home after dark. He will spend only 24 hours at the White House before he starts to Hampton Roads, Virginia, to board the cruiser Salt Lake City and review the naval fleet off the Virginia Capes.

MEYER CLASHES WITH CURATOR HE CALLED "SENILE"

Meyer two of the three members of the executive board present, Blanton and McDavid, said that Dr. Brooks had never shown the letter to them.

Still contending that his address was "in defense of his personal honor against persons who thought him morally unfit to teach," Dr. Meyer introduced as evidence editorials from Ohio newspapers likening his appointment for the summer session at Ohio State University to the Snook scandal in which the Ohio State University veterinarian murdered his student companion, Theora Hix.

Cites Experience in Chile.

Dr. Meyer also produced a letter from a "high official of the Chilean Government" whose name was not disclosed, in which the official said rumors of the sex questionnaire incident harmful to Dr. Meyer's reputation had been current in Chile. Dr. Meyer, by request of the Pan-American Union was a member of the faculty of the University of Chile, Santiago last year.

Dr. Meyer related how malicious rumors had subjected him to ostracism while he was in Chile and how they had interferred with his scientific work there and made his visit unpleasant.

Says His Reputation Was Harmed.

"My speech was an attempt to reach my colleagues to explain the truth of the case and possibly spread the truth to other members of the American society," Dr. Meyer declared. In his testimony, the witness repeatedly emphasized the point that he believed the "excessive punishment" given him by the board for his part in the sex questionnaire episode had served to give credence to malicious rumors about him and, at the same time, had made it impossible for him to correct them.

Questioned as to the nature of the rumors, he explained in detail that the rumors were that he had had improper discussions on intimate details of sex before a mixed class of boy and girl students.

More than 20 clippings from magazines and newspapers in Missouri and Ohio were introduced as evidence supporting his contention that his reputation had been harmed.

Knew of Attack in Advance.

Both Hazard and J. E. Goodrich, president of the board of curators, testified that several persons, including both of them, George C. Willson, St. Louis member of the board and Rabbi Mayerberg, of Kansas City, and knowledge of Dr. Meyer's intention to brand McDavid and Blanton as "mentally unfit" in his Nashville address previous to its delivery.

Hazard had told Goodrich, in an informal discussion in Kansas City, of the Ohio attacks on Dr. Meyer and of the psychologist's intention of answering them at Nashville, he testified. Hazard, however, denied Goodrich's statement that he had warned Meyer not to make the address, but said he had told Meyer "to present only the actual facts."

In the course of a 2000-word prepared statement which he read, Dr. Meyer said:

"If the Board of Curators desires to do me an amount of justice, which, though far from complete, I would at least consider as fair, the board would have to do at least these four things:

"1.—Give an official statement for publication to the press that I was 'neither the author nor even the instigator of the questionnaire.'

"2—Give an official statement for publication to the press that never in my life have I been found guilty or even officially charged with 'teaching immoral precepts,' that is, precepts subversive of the standards of American society.

"3.—Give an official statement for publication to the press that never in my life have I been found guilty or even officially charged with 'abusing my position as a teacher for making seductive advances to college girls.'

"4.—Give an official statement for publication that competent scientific and educational authority makes clear that the teaching done in connection with the so-called 'syllabus' was only such as my duties to a professional class required of me."

"Brooks Scared Out of Wits."

Dr. Meyer was asked to explain a statement in which he said he believed President Brooks was forced into his action against him during the "sex questionnaire" episode.

"Dr. Brooks was scared out of his wits," Dr. Meyer explained. "He was in a perfectly terrible condition. He knew at the time that he was in danger of losing his position. He simply was scared to death. He did not know what he was doing. The relations of President Brooks and the Board of Curators, I thought, was responsible for his terrified, even demented, condition."

As an explanation of his attitude toward the whole sex questionnaire episode and a justification of his Nashville address, Dr. Meyer introduced a letter which he had written as confidential editorial information to Bruce Blevins of New York, editor of the New Republic, on March 21, last year, following the recommendation for his dismissal by the executive board.

The text of the letter follows:

"The whole affair is a tragedy comparable to that which resulted from Desdemona's losing her handkerchief.

"Please do not overemphasize any faults of the university administration, which was between the devil and the deep sea. Criticise the method, if you wish, which makes the university administration an abject slave of the State Legislators (just in session).

"Criticise, if you wish, the intellectual level of a large fraction of such legislators and of the 'home folks' on whom they depend and who demand 'something be done.'

"This Stinking Town."

"Criticise the editor of a sensational local newspaper, who also competes with a paper issued by the School of Journalism of the university, for trying to 'police' the morals of the scientific staff of the university in carrying out their duties — in order to diminish such competition.

"Criticise business men of a town, who when scientific-biological matter falls in their hands, which they do not understand, call it obscene, make up a petition of 200 townsmen and 100 women, asking that those who within the privacy of the university community are trying to gather facts, be dismissed because of demoralizing 'the youth of the State.'

"It is the petition of these business men which makes it impossible for me to live in this stinking town any longer. I could make up for mutual misunderstandings. But to remove the university from a town of Babbits is, of course, impossible."

The Columbia newspaper referred to in the letter was the Columbia Daily Tribune, of which E. M. Watson is editor and publisher. Meyer criticised Watson in his Nashville address.

Mercer Arnold of Joplin was the only one of the nine curators who did not attend today's hearing. Blanton, because of the personal criticism of him, was excused at his own request from taking an active part in the hearing.

SIX KILLED WHEN DYNAMITE EXPLODES AT UNION, W. VA.

UNION, W. Va., May 17.—Two workmen, a youth and three children were killed today when six cases of dynamite in a blacksmith shop, used for road construction work on the Seneca Trail, exploded near here. The two workmen, Paul Shires, Union, and Oscar Johnson, Jacks Mills, were in the shop.

The bodies of three children of Mrs. Bella Wiseman, a widow living near by, were found near the building. A son of Frank Welle, Salt Sulphur Springs, who was employed as a water boy in the road construction, was the other victim.

EX-JUDGE CONVICTED OF KILLING STENOGRAPHER

J. W. Brady, 60, of Austin, Tex., Sentenced to 3 Years for Stabbing Woman.

By the Associated Press.

DALLAS, Tex., May 17.—John W. Brady, 60 years old, former Judge of the Texas Civil Court of Appeals, today was sentenced to three years in the penitentiary for the fatal stabbing of Miss Lehlia Highsmith, 28-year-old stenographer, at Austin, Nov. 9, last.

The sentence was fixed by the jury which convicted Brady on a charge of murder.

Attorneys for the defendant announced a new trial would be sought. In the event of an appeal, Brady could be allowed his freedom under bond pending a decision.

"I didn't do it; I didn't do it," Brady said, weeping when the verdict was read. "I do not deserve that sentence."

Evidence, undisputed by the defense, showed that he killed the young woman in front of her rooming house in Austin.

Brady did not testify at the trial, which was his second. The jury failed to reach an agreement in his first trial at Austin and the case was transferred here.

Opposed to the defense plea that Brady, once a leading lawyer and jurist of the State, had become mentally unbalanced from the excessive use of liquor and was not responsible for his actions when he killed Miss Highsmith, the prosecution contended he was sane and stabbed the young woman because he feared he would lose her to younger men.

It was testified that Brady had conducted an illicit relationship with the Highsmith woman for several years. In testifying for her husband, Mrs. Brady, 59, told of having obtained a position for Miss Highsmith as a court stenographer at the State Capitol. The wife said Brady had become mentally unbalanced from drinking. She said Brady and the young woman both had promised her before the stabbing that they would give up the affair.

Although much of the testimony centered about Brady's mental condition, no alienists were called as was the case in the first trial.

Comforted by his wife, Brady was returned to jail immediately after the verdict to await action of his attorneys. He has been in jail since the killing.

REPORT TO SENATE ON ROBERTS TO BE FAVORABLE

Possible That Judiciary Committee Will Approve Nominee for Supreme Court Unanimously.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—A unanimous report favoring the confirmation of Owen J. Roberts as Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court will be made to the full Senate Judiciary Committee Monday by the subcommittee appointed to examine his qualifications. It consists of Senators Borah, Overman and Hebert. It is possible that the full committee may report the nomination to the Senate immediately. That its action will be overwhelmingly, if not unanimously favorable, is assured.

A request that the committee ascertain Robert's views on such questions as public utilities' valuation, "yellow dog" contracts, and "in general the right of the Supreme Court to legislate" was received today by Chairman Norris from Norman Thomas, former Socialist candidate for the presidency and recent Socialist candidate for Mayor of New York. The letter, conspicously in tone, raised no objection to Roberts, but suggested the establishment of certain standards of fitness to which Supreme Court nominees should be required to conform in order to receive Progressive support.

It is not likely the suggestion will be followed. Norris and other Progressive Senators feel that the most they can hope to accomplish is the defeat of nominees whose records are flagrantly objectionable, as in the recent case of Judge John J. Parker of North Carolina. They are disposed for the present to be content to vote for such an "intelligent conservative" as they consider Roberts to be.

Thomas' Letter to Norris.

Thomas' letter to Norris follows:

"First, let me congratulate you on the great service you and others rendered by preventing the election of Judge Parker to the Supreme Court bench. Next let me raise the question whether the great end you had in view is adequately served by a negative victory. Merely to defeat judges with notably reactionary records is surely not enough. The whole question of the power of the Supreme Court to legislate for us must be faced. As one step in the process it is not necessary to set up standards to which judges must conform who would get the support of progressives.

"Let me illustrate what I mean by reference to Mr. Owen Roberts' nomination. Roberts is an able lawyer with the oil cases to his credit and no particular labor cases or other social cases, so far as I know, to his discredit. He is by reputation a conservative and a leader of the bar in an ultra-conservative city. But whether his reputation was conservative or liberal would it not be the fair and sensible thing to do to ask him questions to bring out his point of view on the power of the court.

An Impossible Basis.

"All intelligent men know what the best lawyers admit; namely, that our Constitution does not give us a set of absolute rules which have only to be interpreted logically in order to give us justice. On this basis the fact that a man should be honest and a good lawyer would be enough. But this is an impossible basis. Judges invariably read into the law their own social and economic philosophy. They express the rules of their own training and environment. It has always seemed to me a significant fact that a Supreme Court could find power, under the Interstate Commerce clause, for Congress to suppress the Louisiana Lottery, but not power to end child labor.

"Therefore, I respectfully suggest that yo and other competent lawyers of the Judiciary Committee might find a way to frame questions which would bring out the opinions of any prospective judge of the Supreme Court on issues such as were involved in the Red Jacket injunction decisions, on cases involving rates and the valuation of public utilities, and in general, the right of the Court to overrule Congress and the public in the field of social legislation.

"I do not mean that a prospective judge should or could be committed in advance on every specific point or that it is necessary that we should know his own personal convictions on every conceivable subject of social legislation. Short of this thought, it ought to be possible to find out his point of view on what I may call the right of Congress rather than the court to legislate for us.

Cites Sacco-Vanzetti Case.

"The power now asserted by the Supreme Court means the possibility of peaceful progress in the future in the field of social and economic legislation more than any other single thing. It is time we faced the fact. If the Court could stand as a safeguard of our liberties in time of hysterics then might more to be said for it. But the plain fact is that the same Court which has used the fourteenth amendment so successfully for the protection of corporate interests has found no way to use it or other amendments to protect individuals against the violation of civil liberties, or such a tragic fate as the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti and the continued confinement of Mooney and Billings. Even though I am a layman, I know the answer usually given by lawyers to this statement. It does not go to the root of the matter, which is that the oligarchic power of the Supreme Court historically has protected property far more than human rights and we know stands as a serious menace to political and economic democracy.

"There are great Judges who might remake our courts. Surely the Senate of the United States ought to be able to find out by questions whether the nominee for the Court will stand with these great Judges or with the reactionary friends of every conservative interest."

Although Roberts has been generally described as a conservative, actually he is known to his friends as being distinctly liberal in thought. To the extent that he has taken an active interest in Pennsylvania politics, he has opposed the rule of the Mellon machine, and voted for the progressive, Gifford Pinchot, for Governor.

His interests have been directed more to education and legal reform than to politics.

Child Chokes to Death on Pea.

NEW YORK, May 17.—Snatching a green pea from a market stand and hurriedly gulping it cost the life of Elaine Simon, 3 years old, tonight while on a shopping tour with her aunt, Mrs. Jennie Gold. The child choked to death at a hospital within 15 minutes, although a surgeon worked over her during that time. The little girl was opposite a vegetable stand when she persuaded her aunt to allow her to eat a pea. Within a moment she was seized with convulsions.

FOUR GET LONG PRISON TERMS FOR HOLDUPS

One Man Had Refused 12 Years on Plea and Got 30 From a Jury.

Six young men charged with robbery faced the Circuit Court last week, four receiving prison terms of five to 30 years and one being acquitted after a fourth trial. Another, previously convicted and sentenced to 15 years, won a mistrial.

Gus Walker of Sallisaw, Ok., who was offered 12 years in the penitentiary for two violations of the Henry law, robbery with a deadly weapon, demanded a trial on one charge. The jury gave him 30 years. He has still a charge pending. Charles Keeley, Cuckoo gangster, 510 Elm street, also asked for a jury. His punishment was fixed at 12 years in the penitentiary for the robbery of a restaurant at 909 North Eleventh street, in which $463 was taken. Walter A. Adams, 4102 Kennerly avenue, pleaded guilty on two charges of robbery with a deadly weapon and received a 10-year sentence, while Walter Rawlings, who pleaded guilty of robbery, without a gun, was permitted to take five years' imprisonment.

James F. Dunivan, who lately has been working steadily, was acquitted of a robbery charge by a jury in Judge Hamilton's court. In two cases he was tried four times, getting two hung juries and two acquittals.

Harry Nash, who lives in the vicinity of Eleventh and Chouteau avenue, was acquitted of robbery after a trial, but a jury several weeks ago assessed punishment of 15 years against him. He has two other charges of robbery against him and will be tried again.

Foreman Gets 6 Years.

Among those who have been fighting vigorously recently to escape punishment is Herman Pittman, a former superintendent of the St. Louis Rubber Cement Co., 3952 West Pine boulevard. Pittman was charged in four indictments with the larceny of over $12,000 of inner tubes which he ordered a subordinate to deliver to a customer after regular business hours. He fought two of the cases before juries and lost, receiving two two-year sentences in the penitentiary. Early in the week he entered a plea of guilty on two remaining charges and was given an additional two-year term.

Others who received penitentiary sentences during the week are Gus Pappas, grand larceny, four years; John Jaeger, burglary, two years, and Albert Shell, forgery, second degree, three years.

During the week several persons charged with major crimes were found guilty in lesser degrees and were permitted to plead guilty on milder charges. They were Louis Nordella, common assault, fined $50; Bernard Cross, felonious wounding, six months in workhouse, paroled to report for two years; Archie Hackman, carrying a concealed weapon, six months, paroled to report for one year; David E. Gamber, carrying a concealed weapon, $100 fine; Willie Wells, three months in workhouse and $100 fine; Lillian Page, receiving stolen property, one year, workhouse; James Ford, assault to do great bodily harm, one year in workhouse; Arthur Van Brunn, driving motor vehicle while intoxicated, $100 fine; Edward Smith, receiving stolen property, six months, workhouse; Bob Johnson and Frank Wilson, receiving stolen property, 90 days for Johnson and six months for Wilson; Sam Korn, possession of gaming device, $100 fine; Louis Jackson, malicious destruction of property, six months, workhouse; Robert Cage, larceny of motor vehicle, six months, workhouse, and Clyde Thomas, carrying a concealed weapon, 50 days in jail, paroled to report for six months.

Three Cases Nolle Prossed.

During the week three cases were disposed by nolle prosequi. They were against Forrest Ferguson, former president of the defunct Ferguson-McKinney Dry Goods Co., charged with false pretenses in relation to securing loans from banks by alleged false statements of credit.

The Circuit Attorney's office announced that evidence against Ferguson was insufficient to warrant the State trial, as the defendant had been tried three times in Federal Court and the Government had failed to convict on evidence which would have to be used by the State.

Cases against Clovis Dennis, charged with manslaughter, and Elmer Gutzman, charged with grand larceny, also were dismissed for lack of evi- against William Ellerbrake, formerly a local furniture manufacturer, was dropped because the defendant is dead.

ZEPPELIN FLIGHT TO BRAZIL TO BEGIN TODAY

To Make First Stop at Seville, Spain Where It Will Take on Passengers.

By the Associated Press.

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, May 17.—If weather permits the Graf Zeppelin will begin its flight to Brazil at 5 o'clock tomorrow afternoon (10 a. m. St. Louis time).

It will make its first stop in Seville, Spain, where a 50-foot mooring mast has been erected. The dirigible expects to reach there late Monday and remain all night, taking off early Tuesday morning for Pernambuco, Brazil, in its first flight across the South Atlantic and across the equator. It will stop at Rio Janeiro, then head northward for Havana and Lakehurst, N. J., where it will prepare for the return flight to Seville and Friedrichshafen.

Twenty-two passengers, including four Americans, will make the voyage. Among the latter are Mrs. Mary Pierce of New York, who was on the Zeppelin flight of last May that ended when the big airship became crippled and had to land at Cuers, France; George Crouse, a Syracuse, N. Y., business man who also has ridden on the airship before; Karl von Wiegand, newspaper correspondent, and Capt. Harry E. Shoemaker, United States Naval observer from the air station at Lakehurst. Mrs. Pierce will board the dirigible at Seville.

ST. LOUISANS PROMINENT AMONG SOCIAL SET AT DERBY AFFAIRS

Phelps Brown of Louisville gave a dinner for Miss Niles Tuesday night at the Pendennis Club. Sunday, Mrs. Head gave a tea for her, and last night she attended a jug-band dance, at which Miss Jessie Matthews was hostess. Tonight, Miss Niles was a guest at the Louisville Country Club party and tomorrow afternoon she will attend a tea to be given by Mr. and Mrs. E. J. O'Brien at their home in Anchorage, a suburb. Miss Niles' escort at the Downs for the last two days has been Jack Green, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Leigh Green of St. Louis, who also is a member of Mr. and Mrs. Head's party.

Their other guests include out-of-town members of Mrs. Head's family and Col. Lyman T. Hay and Bruce Campbell of East St. Louis.

A number of St. Louisans are guests in Louisville homes. Miss Mary Scudder Bond is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Seelbach Jr. and is participating in the festivities which include the St. Louis visitors.

Annual visitors at the Derby are Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sparks and Dr. and Mrs. Lloyd Tate of St. Louis, who joined a group of friends at French Lick Springs and motored to Churchill Downs for the races. With them are Mrs. Tate's sister, Miss Julia Nolan, and Mrs. W. N. Sutton of St. Louis; Mr. and Mrs. William Kurdle of Baltimore, Md., and Mr. and Mrs. Vivien Tupper of Nashville. Mrs. Sparks was smartly gowned today in a canary yellow crepe sports dress with bands of yellow and black print about the upper bodice, at the hips and edge of the plaited skirt. A black crepe cape coat and black silk cloche hat completed the ensemble.

Party at Pendennis Club. — Mrs. Tate's gown was yellow with touches of brown, with which she wore a brown baku hat and accessories. Mr. and Mrs. Sparks gave a dinner for the party tonight at the Pendennis Club. They plan to motor to St. Louis Monday.

A group from Webster Groves included Mr. and Mrs. Carl Lawton, Mr. and Mrs. P. R. King, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Warren and Mr. and Mrs. William Bechtold, who motored to French Lick Springs Thursday and will return to St. Louis tomorrow.

Ingram F. Boyd was another prominent St. Louisan at the Jockey Club, as was Thomas C. Hennings Jr., Dr. John R. Caulk, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Pierce, Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Taylor Spink. Mayor and Mrs. Victor J. Miller arrived early this afternoon, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. R. W. McMahon, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Miller and Carl Stifel. Another private car contained Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Peters, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Siegel, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hager, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Peters and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Peters.

A number of St. Louis stag parties were in evidence. One was composed of former Judge Rhodes E. Cave, A. O. Simpson, Ben Lang, William V. Wilson and E. P. Cave. Another was headed by Clarence Scharff and his brother, Dr. Scharff, and still another was composed of James E. Taussig, noted Derby host, who usually brings his private car, but who came this year with his son, and W. H. Williams and a party of five friends from Chicago. O. E. Rugg, with a group of friends, including George B. Logan, W. H. Humes, Horace Deal, August Wuest and Fred Schmoll. R. King Kauffman of Chicago, formerly a St. Louisan, was seen in the crowd.

St. Louisans seen about the Jockey Club included Judge and Mrs. Granville Hogan, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lesser, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Rothschild, Mayor Miller, Mr. and Mrs. P. B. Brown, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Heitzberg, J. L. Forrester, J. P. Connell, Fitzhugh Scott, G. J. Nooney, J. Lee Friedman and his brothers, Thomas and Morris Friedman, students at the Kentucky Military School and sons of Mrs. Anna Friedman of St. Louis; Mr. and Mrs. E. H. McReynolds, Miss Antoinette Meyer of Cape Girardeau, Miss Cecil Mitchell and Robert S. Mitchell of St. Louis.

Mrs. H. L. Smyser opened her home on Cherokee road for a house party of young St. Louisans, complimenting her niece, Miss Jane Messick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charlton Messick, and a popular member of last season's debutante set, who has been her guest for a week and who will prolong her visit for several days following the exciting week-end. Thomas Wright Pettus was the second member of the group to arrive and today they were joined by Miss Christine Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Norman Jones, Miss Cynthia Polk, daughter of Charles M. Polk, both debutantes of this season, and John Hayward.

An almost continuous round of parties is keeping them busy for the week-end. They were in the Smyser box today and have guest cards for the dinner dance at the Louisville Country Club tonight. Tomorrow afternoon, J. S. Middleton will be host at a luncheon for them at the same club, and in the afternoon they will attend the tea at which Mrs. Claggett will be hostess.

CAMPAIGN TO GET EVERYONE IN ON ST. LOUIS CENSUS

Chamber of Commerce Will Urge All Members to Find Whether Employes Have Been Counted.

Two of the 28 wards of St. Louis have been counted in the current census. Figures for the Fifteenth Ward were announced yesterday. It has 25,183 inhabitants. The Second Ward, for which announcement was made about two weeks ago, has 23,181.

All ward boundaries were changed in 1921, but the numbered wards remain in the same general localities. Direct comparisons with the 1920 census, therefore, are impossible. The old Fifteenth, which extended farther east than the present, had 22,669 population a decade ago. The ward has had much apartment house development in recent years, particularly in a compact area between Shaw's Garden and Vandeventer avenue, where excess land of the garden was subdivided.

Reservoir Park and adjacent apartment hotels also are in the ward, which is bounded by Kingshighway, California avenue, Lafayette and McRee avenue, and Accomac street, Hawthorne avenue and Magnolia avenue.

Commerce Chamber Committee.

The Chamber of Commerce, with approval of the Census Bureau, will mail letters shortly to all its members, asking them to inquire whether all their employes have been enumerated in the census in the city and St. Louis County. Those who may not have been counted will be named on blanks to be given the employers, which will be turned over to the local census supervisors.

It is emphasized by the chamber that there is no intention to check up the work of the census takers, but only the desire to see that all citizens are counted, with the object of giving the community the benefit of a full report. Population has a direct bearing on acquisition of industries and warehouses, the chamber points out. Whether St. Louis will rank as the sixth or seventh city in size may depend on this effort, the chamber asserts. The city was sixth in the 1920 census, having been fourth previously. Los Angeles is certain to go ahead of St. Louis, but it is not certain that Cleveland will remain ahead of this city.

"The higher we can place St. Louis in the rank of major cities," the chamber's letter to employers will say, "the higher your business will rank in the minds of strangers and prospective customers."

Chamber members will be asked to give names of any persons other than employers who may not have been counted.

St. Charles County Figures.

St. Charles County has 24,442 population, it was announced yesterday, compared with 22,828 in 1920, a gain of 1614. Almost half of its people are in the county seat, St. Charles, which has 10,486, a gain of 1983. Outside of this city, the county has 13,956, a decrease of 369. The next largest towns in the county are Wentzville, with 596, a gain of 82, and O'Fallon, with 586, a loss of two.

The Associated Press reports that the first 120 Missouri towns of more than 1000 population for which the census has been compiled have a total population of 497,263, an increase of 61,737, or 14.3 per cent. The larger the

The Associated Press reports that the first 120 Missouri towns of more than 1000 population for which the census has been compiled have a total population of 497,263, an increase of 61,737, or 14.3 per cent. The larger the place, the bigger the gain, as a rule. The 24 reported cities of 5000 or more have 303,607 inhabitants in the aggregate, a gain of 54,466 or 21.4 per cent, 20 of the 24 having had individual increases. Fifty-four of the 96 towns between 1000 and 5000 had gains and 42 had losses. They have 193,656 inhabitants, a combined increase of 8271 or 4.5 per cent.

Loss in Rural Districts.

Twenty-four Missouri counties, most of them in rural sections, for which 1930 census reports have been made, have 383,108 population, a loss of 6400, or 16.5 per cent, since 1920, the Associated Press found. There were decreases in 16 of these counties—Barry, Barton, Carter, Douglas, Knox, Lawrence, Macon, Madison, McDonald, Ozark, Perry, Reynolds, Ripley, Shelby, Stone and Wayne—and increases in eight—Boone, Mississippi, St. Charles, St. Francois, Ste. Genevieve, Scott, Taney and Washington.

Seventeen of these 24 counties had less population in 1920 than in 1910, and 16 of them had less in 1910 than in 1900. Most of the counties which showed gains this year did so as a result of the growth of comparatively large towns within their borders.

It is becoming increasingly apparent that whatever increase Missouri as a whole may have in population, as compared with 1920, will be in the urban districts, because of the continuing tendency of people to leave the country. The State had 3,404,055 population in 1920, a gain of 110,720, or 3.4 per cent, over that in 1910, while the gain between 1900 and 1910 was 186,670, or 6 per cent.

Recent census reports in out-State Missouri are:

Shelby County, 11,969, loss of 1648 in the decade; Knox County, 9179, loss of 1604; Macon County, 25,506, loss of 2012.

Tulsa Population, 140,531, an Increase of 94.9 Per cent.

Fresno, Cal., 52,553; increase of 7472, or 16.5 per cent.

Deactur, Ill., 57,378, increase 13,560, or 30.9 per cent.

Jackson County, Illinois, 35,437, a loss of 1645.

Local Supervisors to Announce Population of Big Cities.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—Announcement of the population of the country's largest cities will be made by the supervisors in charge of the count. Instructions to that effect, including an order that the supervisors of New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, Philadelphia and other cities divided as to district, must get together, add their separate totals and agree upon a final figure, have been sent out by Census Director William M. Steuart.

These orders countermanded previous instructions which ordered returns to be made separately to the Census Bureau for compilation here.

Director Steuart explained that the change of policy could also be interpreted as apply to states.

SUIT FILED TO BREAK WILL DISPOSING OF $35,000 ESTATE

Suit to set aside the will of Mrs. Anna Hunt, 76 years old, who died March 2, was filed in Circuit Court yesterday by Miss Mabel Eide, Elmer Eide and William Eide of Chicago, her niece and nephews. Mrs. Hunt, who lived at the Fairgrounds Hotel, 3644 Natural Bridge avenue, left an estate valued at $35,000 which she bequeathed to her nephew Joseph A. Tobermann, 4518 Harris avenue. She empowered him to make what disposition of the property he saw fit. The will was made July 15 last, two months, it is alleged, after Mrs. Hunt suffered a stroke of paralysis. It is charged she was unduly influenced.

According to Clem F. Storckman, attorney for petitioners, his clients seek to have Mrs. Hunt's property administered under a will made March 19, 1929, on which she made specific bequests totaling $21,500 to various relatives, including plaintiffs, and left the residue to the German General Protestant Orphans' Home Association, the German St. Vincent Orphans' Association and the St. Vincent de Paul Society. This will also included a bequest of $1000 for a memorial window in a Catholic Church in Pilzen, Czecho-Slovakia, but did not mention Tobermann as a beneficiary, Attorney Storckman said. Tobermann, who is named as executor, could not be reached.

CONSTABLE HANK WEEKE FILES

Seeks to Succeed Himself in Seventh District.

Hank Weeke, North St. Louis Republican boss and Committeeman in the Eighteenth Ward, filed his notice of candidacy to succeed himself as Constable of the Seventh District with the Board of Election Commissioners yesterday.

Unidentifed Man Hit by Train.

An unidentified man, in whose pockets were cards bearing the name, Frank Trester, 1411 Clinton street, was seriously injured early last night when he was struck by a train at Wood River, Ill. He was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital at Alton, with severe injuries to his head. A broken crutch was found at the scene of the accident.

NAVAL TREATY TO RECEIVE OK OF COMMITTEE

Poll Indicates Overwhelming Majority for Pact and It Likely Will Be Reported to Senate This Week.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—A favorable report on the London naval limitations treaty to the Senate by the Foreign Relations Committee sometime next week was confidently predicted today by its sponsors.

The first week of hearings on the pact has developed a sharp conflict of opinion among America's naval leaders on the merits of the agreements, but there are indications at the Capitol that this dispute is regarded more as a technical controversy among naval experts. However, pending completion of the hearings next week, no one is making any public claims on the outcome.

Chairman Borah of the Foreign Relations Committee, whose voice in the treaty discussions will go a long way, is definitely counted today among the advocates of the agreement.

Borah and Senators Robinson (Dem), Arkansas, and Reed (Rep.), Pennsylvania, of the American delegation to London, are regarded as forming a combination of orators that will give the treaty a distinct advantage in the prospective Senate contest.

Borah is taking the position that it would work more harm to the cause of disarmament to reject the limitations pact than it would to the exact make up of the American navy to accept it.

Three Republicans have voiced criticism of the pact in putting questions to witnesses in the first week of hearings—Senators Johnson, California; Hale, Maine, and Robinson, Indiana—but the foes conceded today that a fight against the pact was a losing one at the present time. However, they have not given up.

It is the intention of the Foreign Relations Committee to conclude its hearings next week. A similar program is in mind by Chairman Hale of the Naval Committee.

Chairman Borah is prepared to have his committee go into early session after the hearings to consider a report. Private polls of the committee show an overwhelming majority for the treaty.

Resuming hearings Monday the committee will conclude its examination of the Navy General Board. Its cahirman, Rear Admiral Mark L. Bristol, yesterday supported Rear Admiral Hilary P. Jones in opposition to the treaty provision on cruisers.

Admiral Jones and the General Board stand against Admiral William V. Pratt, commander-in-chief of the United States fleet, and chief naval adviser at London, on the value of eight-inch and six-inch gun cruisers for the American fleet.

Jones and the board contend America's fleet requires a predominance of eight-inch gun cruisers, whereas the treaty limits the American fleet to 18 of the eight-inch and 18 of the six-inch. They say Great Britain prefers the six-inch guns and that she has won a point in limiting America's eight-inch guns.

Admiral Pratt told the Foreign Relations Committee he was satisfied with the treaty and that he wanted an equal division of the eight-inch and six-inch guns.

Senators Reed and Robinson contended in the hearings, in responding to the criticisms of Jones and Bristol, that the General Board had actually recommended 21 eight-inch gunners and 16 six-inch gun ships and that the treaty involved a difference of only three ships and the manner in which they were to be armed.

There is still talk of reservations. One point raised is whether Great Britain would be allowed to replace her 186,000 tons of cruisers under the treaty with eight-inch guns instead of six-inch.

Admiral Jones says he thinks the treaty leaves that option. Secretary of the Navy Adams says that is a "legal point" and others of the American delegation stoutly deny that Great Britain could do such a thing.

HIGHER STANDARDS FOR BAR EXAMINATION

Applicants Must Have Diploma From University or Accredited High School.

New and stricter qualifications for applicants seeking admission to the bar formulated by the State Board of Law Examiners and approved by the State Supreme Court, were announced yesterday by J. Hugo Grimm, president of the examining body.

Where the board had formerly accepted certificates from public and private schools attesting that applicants for bar examination had completed courses in literature, history and civil government, it now demands a diploma from a university or college of good standing or of a high school accredited by the State University.

If the applicant is without such a certificate, he will be compelled to take an examination in the three subjects, probably at Jefferson City, before someone appointed by the board at some time previous to the State bar examination. There will be a fee of $5 charged to the applicant.

After the bar examinations in June, applicants for admission to the bar will be required to state their intention of taking the examination by filing 60 days before the bar examination. The examining board also has revised its application form, the new one calling for detailed information concerning the moral character of the applicant.

The examining board announces that at the last bar examination, held in February, 76 applicants passed and 112, or 60 per cent, failed. The board believes this points to the severity of the examination, and goes on to show that of 31 students representing the three Class A law schools in the State, those of Washington and St. Louis Universities and the University of Missouri, 10 failed.

'HONORARY' DEPUTY CONSTABLE RETURNS SUIT HE STOLE

The coat and trousers which William Lee, night watchman, robber and "honorary" Deputy Constable of St. Louis County wore when arrested recently were taken from him yesterday and returned to their owner, L. Gregory Dowling, bank president, 1204 Buckner avenue, from whom they were stolen in a burglary last December.

Dressed in a shabby suit which his wife took to him at police headquarters, Lee apologized for having burned Dowling's vest, which, he said, he did not like. The value of articles stolen by Lee in holdups and burglaries and recovered in the past week was estimated today $3160. Two women's wrist watches by Detective Sergt. Knackstedt at and a man's watch, found in Lee's home at 6342 Etzel avenue, St. Louis County, remain unidentified.

SUES OVER ESTRANGEMENT

Leonard D. Alkire, manager of the Cereal Meal Corporation, filed suit yesterday for $40,000 against Mrs. Carries Crews, 3644 Wyoming street, alleging that she induced his wife, Mrs. Mary L. Alkire, to leave him and sue for a divorce.

The Alkires were married Dec. 18, 1919. According to his attorney, Erwin F. Vetter, the divorce suit has not been tried. Mrs. Crews denied she was responsible for the separation or that she interfered with the couple in any way. She said that Mrs. Alkire was a niece of her husband, M. F. Crews.

The reign of the Reichert pair, Brown Wisdom and My Dandy continues. In spite of the burden of top weight, these two great racers again dominated the Saturday program at the Fairmount Racetrack, Brown Wisdom taking the Hotel Jefferson Handicap and My Dandy winning the third race. A crowd of 3500 witnessed the card.

A cold, driving rain, which fell all morning and did not abate until after the second race, saturated the course and resulted in numerous withdrawals, but the races were truly run, there being no marked upsets of form. Apprentice Jockey Melvin Meyers was again the star rider of the day, with two winning mounts, giving him six victories in two days. His success in winning twice was more meritorious than that of Garrity, who had two great horses under him in Brown Wisdom and My Dandy.

Brown Wisdom Shows Class.

It was not until Jockey Martin made his bid at the eighth pole with Beau Wrack that Brown Wisdom had an opportunity to show that he is a most unusual horse. With an apparently safe lead established in the back stretch Garrity was coasting when they turned for home, but Martin sent Beau Wrack up with a rush. The thrust was nicely timed and well executed. Garrity bore down on Brown Wisdom and under the strain of sprinting the Reichert horse bore out, leaving the avenue on the rail open. Martin headed Beau Wrack through the hole and it looked for a moment as though he would score the biggest victory of the day but Brown Wisdom somewhere found more speed, more stamina and displayed real courage in coming on again when the weight of 132 pounds must have begun to feel all too heavy. He drew away to win by two lengths.

My Dandy Wins by 10 Lengths.

A delay of seven and one-half minutes at the post gave the backers of My Dandy something to worry about for he had a heavy burden of 121 pounds on his back. He showed a great dislike for the stall barrier and refused for a long time to be led in. Whileaway was even worse and Starter Wingfield ordered him started outside the box. At the break, Meyers had Whileaway off in full stride and Garrity had to urge My Dandy to grab the lead. Before they left the back stretch it was apparent that My Dandy would win easily and it then became a question whether Meyers could keep Whileaway up in second place. In the stretch Whileaway folded up and was lucky to finish third, while Queen Towton took second place.

My Dandy won by 10 lengths. Extreme, which was expected to give the Reichert star a battle since the track was just to his liking, was far from at his best and finished last. Whileaway was ac-

Brown Wisdom showed the most speed in the going, set fast pace under restraint, withstood determined bid from Beau Wrack and drew away at the end. The latter in close attendance from the start, moved up around stretch turn, made game challenge but was no match for the winner. Thistle Fyrn raced evenly throughout. Good and Hot was always out run.

Johnson and Sherdel Or Haines to Oppose Cubs in Double-Header

By J. Roy Stockton.

Sylvester Johnson, who has humbled the Cubs twice this year, will try to pitch the Cardinals to their tenth straight victory this afternoon when he faces the National League champions in the first game of a double-header. Jess Haines or Bill Sherdel will be on the firing line for the Redbirds in the second contest.

Joe McCarthy's hurling corps has not been functioning very smoothly of late and he has been forced to overwork several of his veterans. It is probable that Charlie Root and Sheriff Fred Blake will be his starting pitchers.

Unless the weather interferes the double-header is likely to establish a new season's attendance record at Sportsman's Park. Nine straight victories, including two over the leading Giants, and Friday's thrilling triumph over the Cubs, will force the fans to take the Cardinals seriously. Already the pennant bee is starting to buzz. It won't be long now before Cheer-to-the-Finish clubs and Royal Rooters' organizations will begin to make their appearance. They're just like poker chips—always trailing along with a winner.

Look Like Contenders.

Of course it takes more than nine straight victories to win a pennant, but just the same the Cardinals certainly look like a real dangerous contender. There has been nothing lucky about their winning streak. They did cash in on an error in one of the Giant games, scoring five unearned runs after Eddie Marshall fumbled a grounder, but the inning included a single, two doubles and a home run and that proved that the Cardinals could take advantage of opportunity.

The pitching has been good through the winning streak and Manager Street has been very fortunate in his changes and selections for relief duty. Lindsey, working in the rescue role, has chalked up two triumphs and Hallahan won two of the nine games. Sherdel, Grabowski, Haines, Bell and Frankhouse each gained one.

Gelbert on Rampage.

Of outstanding importance during the winning streak has been the batting of Charley Gelbert. Charley was a better-than-average hitter in the International League, but last year he finished with a mark of .261, and this spring his punch was so weak that many persons had decided that the Cardinals would have to find another shortstop.

Gabby Street ordered morning batting practice for Charley, and that young man, always eager to do anything to make himself more valuable to the team, devoted an hour or more each day to the job of improving his batting.

The practice soon brought results and with Gelbert hitting, the Cardinals began to win. During the nine-game string of victories, Gelbert has made 17 hits in 33 times at bat, for an average of .515, and his hits have been good for 26 bases, the collection of wallops including a home run and six doubles.

Only twice during the streak has Gelbert been held hitless. Sweetland of the Phillies turned him back in three trips to the plate and in the second game with the Giants, Fitzsimmons, Hubbell and Parmelee whitewashed Charley.

Gelbert's best game was Friday's thriller when he hit three singles, a double and a home run to help beat the Cubs. He contributed one of the nineth inning hits which produced four runs to overcome a Chicago lead.

Cards in Second Place, Four Points Behind the Giants

WHILE the Cardinals were idle yesterday because of rain, they moved to second place, ahead of the Dodgers, who lost to the Phillies and now are only four percentage points behind the league leading Giants. New York, with 14 victories and 11 defeats has a percentage of .560 while the Redbirds, with 15 games won and 12 lost, have a mark of .556.

With both teams scheduled to play double-headers today the Cardinals can go into first place if they win both their games and the Giants lost one. A double-defeat for the Giants coupled with an even break between the Cards and Cubs, also would move Street's men into first place.

SIMPSON VICTOR IN FINAL SPRINT ON HOME TRACK

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., May 17.—The Wisconsin University track team today won the seventh annual quadrangular track meet with Ohio State, Northwestern and Chicago by scoring 72 points. Ohio was second with 56¾, Northwestern third with 26¾ and Chicago fourth with 20½ points.

Zeize of Wisconsin surprised everyone by winning a close victory over Dick Rockaway, Ohio State, national collegiate high hurdles champion, in that event.

George Simpson, Ohio State's record-breaking sprinter, running his last 100-yard dash on his home track, made the slowest time in the last two years. Allan East and Norman Root, both of Chicago, were defeated by three yards in the mediocre time of 9.9 seconds. Simpson was leading all the way.

Rut Walter, Northwestern, national collegiate quarter-mile champion, won his event by five yards from his teammate, McAuliffe, in the creditable time of 50 seconds flat. The mile run went to Earl Hanover of Marion, O., Ohio State runner, who nipped Coldsworthy, Northwestern, on the final stride after chasing him the entire last lap. The time was 4:27.3 seconds.

Simpson Sets Meet Record.

Running his last race on the stadium track, Simpson broke the quadrangular meet record in the 220-yard dash with the time of 21.5 seconds, and defeated Root of Chicago by seven yards.

Tom Warne, Northwestern's national collegiate champion pole-vaulter, stopped vaulting after clearing the bar at 13 feet 7½ inches for a new quadrangular meet record, in order to save himself for the Western Conference meet next week.

SETS WORLD RECORD FOR PREP SCHOOL MILERS

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, May 17.—A new world's interscholastic record for the mile run was made here today by Frank Crowley of Allentown Preparatory School, who covered the distance in 4 minutes 21 1-5 seconds. The former record of 4 minutes 22 3-5 seconds was made in 1924 by Bill Cox of Mercersburg Academy.

KRENZ SETS WORLD MARK IN DISCUS THROW

By the Associated Press.

STANFORD STADIUM, Palo Alto, Cal., May 17.—Eric Krenz, curly-haired Stanford giant, sent his own world's record in the discus throw crashing into oblivion here today as he hurled the platter 167 feet, 5¾ inches at the annual California intercollegiate track and field meet. Krenz set the unofficial world's record in March of 1929 with a heave of 163 feet 8¾ inches.

Southern California's powerful, well-balanced track and field team, scoring in every event, won the meet with a total of 78 13-15 points. Stanford University took second place with 62 1-15 points. California and the University of California at Los Angeles finished third and fourth, scoring 17 1-30 and 7 1-30 points, respectively.

The new mark of Krenz was duly checked by A. A. U. officials and the record will be applied for. Meanwhile, Krenz's former mark not yet having been acted upon, the recognized record is 158 feet 1¾ inches, made by Bud Houser in 1926.

The great Southern California Trojan team with which Coach Dean Cromwell will gamble for a third national intercollegiate championship was not to be denied in its drive for points today.

Krenz's performance overshadowed any other but noteworthy times were chalked up in several track events.

The expected duel in the 100-yard dash between Frank Wykoff, Southern California speedster, and Hec Dyer, Stanford's long-legged entrant, failed to materialize as Wykoff merely ran away from his rival. He won in 9.7 seconds. Dyer got away to the better start but the blonde Trojan star, who last Saturday set a mark of 9.4 in the century, picked him up half way.

The Stanford youth, however, gained his revenge in the 220-yard dash, when he led Wykoff to the tape by a yard. The time was 21.5 seconds. Dyer took the lead just after the start and maintained it throughout.

OKLAHOMA WINS BIG SIX NET TITLE

NORMAN, Ok., May 17.—The University of Oklahoma won the Big Six Conference tennis championship today, defeating Kansas University players, five matches out of six.

Mutuel Turnover $2,000,000; Sande's Forecast Comes True

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 17.—Money flowed freely at Churchill Downs here today for the fifty-sixth running of the Kentucky Derby. Close to $2,000,000 passed through the mutuel machines, of which one-half was wagered on the Derby alone.

The weather was a study in changes. The track was fast at noon. The sun shone. It showered and stopped. The track was soon thoroughly dry and the management began to figure on sending out the sprinkling cart battery.

Toward 4 o'clock it began to rain again and it looked as though it might settle down to a steady pour for the afternoon. Then it stopped, after 4 o'clock and the track was still in good shape.

At this time it appeared that the track would be in good condition no matter what the weather developed. Later the rain began again and when the race was run the track was two or three seconds slow in the opinion of experts. The time indicated this was correct.

Sande's Prediction Comes True.

Many here believe he will have to prove it later on when the many great 3-year-olds who were not in the Derby will be ready.

Derby and Darby.

"I am not responsible for the parentage of what you call a derby hat, even if my family is for our classic race," said Lord Derby in a little informal talk at the Downs.

He added smilingly: "We call this hat I am wearing a 'Billy-coke' in England. You call it derby. You may keep on calling it derby, but I'm hoping you will pronounce the race darby, with an a, not an e."

The Earl expressed appreciation of his entertainment here and expressed regret only over his failure to see Man O'War, which he called "a really great stallion." He half promised to send a horse or two to this country to carry his famous colors—black with white cap—over our tracks.

The opening race here today was the first he ever saw run over a dirt track and he expressed a preference for the turf courses of England. He was frank, too, in saying that the stall gates did not impress him.

He added that he was greatly interested in our racing methods and that he was green with envy over the big paddocks at the breeding farms here.

De Mar Defeats Jimmy Henigan In Marathon

By the Associated Press.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., May 17.—Clarence De Mar today won the annual marathon from this city to Woonsocket and back. Jimmy Henigan, Boston, was second. De Mar's time over the course, which was the regulation marathon distance of 26 miles, 385 yards, was two hours, 41 minutes and eight seconds.

Gallant Fox raced as if much the best. He was away with first flight and racing forwardly under restraint, took the lead when shaken up rounding far turn, and increasing advantage midway of the stretch, won with much in reserve. Gallant Knight, taken back soon after the start, raced under a snug hold until reaching far turn and, moving up with winner, closed courageously but was not good enough. Ned O., far back first seven-eighths, responded gamely when taken to outside and was going strongly at finish. Gone Away suffered from early crowding, improved position steadily when clear on inside, and closed good ground in the final eighth. Tannery, bothered from crowding first six furlongs, faltered badly when called upon for final drive.

$2 mutuels paid: Gallant Fox, win $4.38, place $3.78, show $3.42; Gallant Knight, place $14.60, show $7.78; Ned O., show $10.14.

By George Daley

Of the New York World Sport Staff.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 17.—Gallant Fox won the Kentucky Derby at packed, riotous and drizzly Churchill Downs, here today, as he did the Preakness Stakes a week ago—only more easily. His name, great in racing, now can be coupled with that of Sir Barton as the only horse ever to score the famous double of these two ancient and honorable fixtures.

Gallant Fox won galloping by two lengths and this popular favorite and almost idol paid $4.38 or almost 7 to 5 to win, $3.76 to place and $3.42 to show.

He ran the mile and a quarter over a track in fine condition but a shade dull from the drizzle of rain in 2.07 3-5.

Tannery Far Back.

Gallant Knight carried the colors of B. B. Jones into second place. He made a brave fight and beat G. W. Foreman's Ned O., son of Campfire, two lengths. He paid $14.60 to place and $8.75 for third. Ned O., one of the outsiders, rewarded his followers by paying $10.14 for third, or better than 4 to 1.

William Ziegler's Gone Away was fourth, earning the consolation award of $1000, while the others, including Crack Brigade and Tannery, the pride of Kentucky and the Middle West, came trailing home just sweepings in the dustpan of broken hopes.

Gallant Fox now has won $112,000 this year and the Derby brought his grand total to $131,000.

Lord Derby Presents Cup.

William Woodward, proud owner and breeder of Gallant Fox, outwardly calm and dignified but inwardly deliriously happy, accepted the gold cup, valued at $5000, from the hands of Lord Derby, and congratulations from Gov. Flem D. Sampson of Kentucky and others.

Indication Derby Winner Will Not Run at Fairmount

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 17.

GALLANT FOX, winner of the Kentucky Derby, will not be shipped to Fairmount race track for the $15,000 Fairmount Derby next Saturday, according to talk about the Belair Stud stable here this evening.

However, Gallant Knight, which finished second here today, positively will be shipped, according to attaches of the Audley Farm. Other contestants in the Kentucky event are entered in the Fairmount stake, but just how many will be shipped is not certain.

He said: "It's wonderful to own a horse like that." To Mr. Woodward, Gallant Fox contributed gold in the sum of $50,725, out of the $60,725 purse, but the glory was his own.

The Earl of Derby, seventeenth in the line of that distinguished family of England which founded and gave title to the Epsom classic, looked on and was pleased over this Derby of all American Derbies, which borrowed his name far back in 1875, and has come to be the most colorful and spectacular race of all the year.

He saw Earl Sande, with skillful hands and unerring judgment, guide and direct the truly good son of Sir Galahad III—Marguerite, to impressive victory and to win his third Derby—so equaling the mark set in another century by the then famouns Negro jockey, Isaac Murphy. As was the case when Sande rode Zev and Flying Ebony, he made no mistakes.

Sande Congratulated by Earl.

In excess of 50,000 men and women jammed elbow to elbow, stood on tiptoes for a better look at the heroic struggle, shouting madly. Hysteria gripped them.

The tense moment came at the top of the stretch and nobody could be nonchalant in the face of the gleaming spectacle. The blood of the thousands boiled as the horses raced through the stretch—down through a human lane of cheering, shouting near-maniacs. As the horses turned for home the shouts burst forth like the rattle of machine guns, then quickly merged into an explosive roar of greeting as Gallant Fox, after a brief struggle with Crack Brigade, drew out

Davis Cup Team Sweeps Series With Canadians

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, May 17.—The United States Davis Cup tennis team goes forth to meet the Mexican racquet wielders at Washington, D. C., next week with a clean record of five victories and no defeats in its elimination contest with the Canadian tennis players here this week.

After the United States team had won two singles matches and one doubles contest yesterday to earn the right to meet Mexico in the remaining American zone tie, John Doeg of Santa Monica, Cal., and Wilmer Allison, Austin, Tex., today added two more victories to the count.

Doeg defeated Dr. Jack Wright of Canada, 6-2, 6-3, 6-2, and Allison followed this up by winning from Marcel Rainville, Canada, 6-2, 6-2, 7-5.

The two victories today were not needed to give the Americans the right to meet Mexico, but they put all they had into their game and played as if the result of the meet depended on their performance. There seemed to be no doubt about the outcome of either match, although for a moment it appeared that Rainville would defeat Allison's ambition to win in straight sets.

In the three matches yesterday, John Van Ryn defeated Wright, and George M. Lott Jr. won from Rainville, and then Van Ryn and Allison won the doubles contest from Wright and Willard Croker.

The matches were played on the courts of the Philadelphia Country Club, and although nothing hinged upon the result, the largest crowd of the three days' play was out to see the matches.

The winner of the engagement at Washington next week will meet the winning team in the European zone play and, if again victorious, will go to France to meet the French team in the challenge round for the famous tennis bowl.

AUSTRIA ADVANCES

OSLO, Norway, May 17.—Austria advanced in the Davis Cup play today, eliminating Norway by winning the doubles match.

The Austrians won the first two singles yesterday. In today's play Mateika and Artens of Austria defeated Christoffersen and Jacob Neilson of Norway, 6—2, 6—4, 6—3.

HOLLAND LEADS FINLAND

AMSTERDAM, Holland, May 17.—Holland took a lead of two matches to one today in the second round of the Davis Cup series with Finland.

After splitting the opening pair of singles yesterday, H. Timmer and A. Diemer Kool of Holland came back today to win the doubles match in convincing fashion from A. Grahn and Granholm, Finland, 6—4, 6—1, 6—2. The deciding pair of singles will be played tomorrow.

WEBSTER GROVES NINE TO PLAY MAPLEWOOD

The Webster Groves High baseball team plays its semifinal game of the season tomorrow afternoon with Maplewood High of the County League on the Webster field at 4 o'clock. Although Maplewood has a slightly better percentage of games won, the Orange and Black team is favored to win, as it has had much more experience.

As yet Coach Gaines of Webster does not expect to make any changes in his starting lineup. Several changes will be made in the Maplewood lineup. Kippenberger will play second base instead of Miller, who covered this sack in the Jennings game Wednesday. Ker will be in right garden, replacing Blumer. Gottlob will hurl.

The probable batting order:

KANSAS BEATS MISSOURI ON TRACK, 67-64

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBIA, Mo., May 17.—The University of Kansas won its eighth victory over the University of Missouri in the twenty-ninth renewal of the traditional track and field rivalry of the two institutions here today, scoring 67 points to nose out the Tigers, who showed unexpected strength in amassing a total of 64 points. Missouri has won the dual meet 21 times.

Kansas, led by Jim Bausch, had an overwhelming strength in the field events, which more than made up for the unexpected talent of the Tigers in the track numbers. Bausch, scoring in five events, made 18 points.

Bausch won firsts in the shotput and the javelin throw, earned a tie for first in the pole vault, placed second in the high hurdles and third in the discus. His javelin toss of 178 feet 8¾ inches set a new meet record, beating that held by Brown of Missouri at 171 feet and 11¾ inches.

In winning the 220-yard high hurdles, Welch of Missouri was clocked in 24 seconds flat, cutting four-thenths of a second off the meet record set by Bob Simpson in 1916. Welch had a strong wind at his back. Klaner of Kansas, also aided by a strong breeze, tied the meet record in the 100-yard dash, making it in 9.8 seconds, which equals the time of Branham and Scholz, both of Missouri.

Missouri's sensational mile relay team had an easy time winning that event, but fell short of a meet record in running the distance in three minutes, 27.2 seconds. The Tiger quarter-mile stars had no difficulty in making a clean sweep of the 440-yard dash.

Jim Bausch fouled in tossing the shot 49 feet 8 inches or he would have set a new record. His best legal effort was 47 feet and ¾ inch.

The summaries:

100-YARD DASH—Won by Klaner, Kansas; Welch, Missouri, second; Sickle, Kansas, third. Time, 9.8 seconds. (Ties meet record).

MILE RUN—Won by Rockwell Swartz, Missouri; Fortune, Kansas, second; Richard Swartz, Missouri, third. Time, 4m 30.7s.

HIGH JUMP—Beardsless, Kansas, Stillman, Kansas, and Gladden, Missouri, tied for first. Height—6 ft.

220-YARD LOW HURDLES—Won by Welch, Missouri; Williams, Missouri, second; Klaner, Kansas, third. Time—24s. (New record.)

POLE VAULT—J. Bausch, Kansas, and Trublood, Kansas, tied for first; Rhodes, Missouri, third. Height, 11 ft. 6 in.

TWO-MILE RUN—Won by Fortune, Kansas; Mitchell, Missouri second; Weinkein, Missouri, third. Time—10 m. 18s.

220-YARD DASH—Won by Hursley, Missouri; Klaner, Kansas, second; King, Missouri, third. Time, 21.8s.

DISCUS THROW—Won by Thornhill, Kansas; Ward, Kansas, second; J. Bausch, Kansas third. Distance, 145 ft. 8¼ in.

120-YARD HIGH HURDLES—Won by Nichols, Kansas; J. Bausch, Kansas, second; Richards, Missouri, third. Time, 16.1s.

440-YARD DASH—Won by Dills, Missouri; Ulffers, Missouri, second; Hursley, Missouri, third. Time, 51s.

SHOTPUT—Won by J. Bausch, Kansas; Thornhill, Kansas, second; Ward, Kansas, third. Distance, 47 ft. 3¼ in.

BROAD JUMP—Won by McGuire, Missouri; Hodges, Kansas, second; Colham, Missouri, third. Distance, 22 feet 3½ inches.

JAVELIN THROW—Won by J. Bausch, Kansas; Eckles, Missouri, second; McGuire, Missouri, third. Distance, 178 feet 8¾ inches (new record).

MILE RELAY—Won by Missouri (King, Jackson, Hursley, Dills). Time, 3 minutes, 27.2 seconds.

Kearney Lucky If He Breaks Even On Derby, He Says

Tom Kearney, who conducts a nationally-known future book on the Kentucky Derby annually, last night said that he would be lucky to break even on this year's race.

"I'm still working on the books," Kearney told a Post-Dispatch reporter. "We had a heavy play on Gallant Fox and Sande, a combination that caught the crowd's fancy. But for today's play we might have beat the race a little but I figure I will not get out quite even."

Kearney was "nicked" for about $82,000 in 1924, the year Black Gold swamped all future books. All the books in the country faced a heavy setback this year due to the unexpectedly heavy play on Tannery, which was backed from 100 to 1 in the future books down to 3 to 1. When Tannery failed to run in the money, it saved the three or four future books of the country close to one million dollars pay-off, Kearney said.

"I stood to pay out nearly $250,000 on Tannery," Kearney said. "I ought to beat the race but I got caught on some big bets against Gallant Knight to place and show at 20 and 20 to 1, and also on Ned O to show at good odds. In addition, of course, everybody wanted Gallant Fox.

"I had to pay off on him at as high as 12 to 1. At one time he was equal choice with Dedicate, Flying Heels and Desert Light at this price, but after his Eastern races he was cut sharply. I had him down to 6 to 5, which was about his mutuel price.

"I knew he'd win, especially after the Eastern future book men, Tom Shaw and Frank Shannon, hooked me for some big bets on him. He's a great horse."

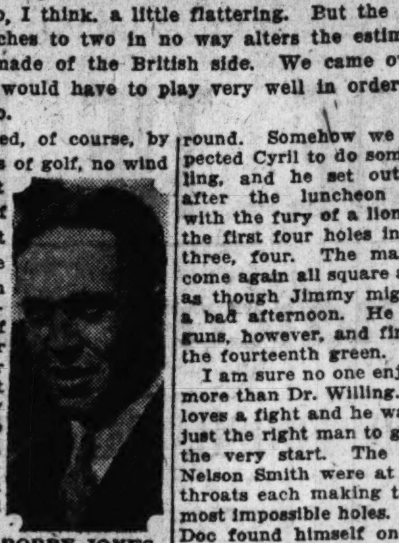
Moe's Sensational Finish Proved Feature in Walker Cup Victory, Jones Writes

By Bobby Jones,

Captain American Walker Cup Team.

SANDWICH, England, May 17.—The margin by which we have won the Walker Cup match is somewhat greater than our fondest hopes. It is also, I think, a little flattering. But the fact that we won by ten matches to two in no way alters the estimate which I had previously made of the British side. We came over here expecting that we would have to play very well in order to win and this we had to do.



BOBBY JONES

We were favored, of course, by two excellent days of golf, no wind and cheery bright sunshine most of the time. Apart from all that, the American team knew what to expect, and all of us were on our toes to play our very best. That we did so is fully evidenced by the scores turned in, although an accurate count with every putt holed is impossible in a match game. It is fairly certain that with no very generous approximations, seven of the American players scored 73 or better in the morning round. I believe that is the best golf that has yet been played in Walker Cup matches.

Von Elm Shoots Well.

George Von Elm again found himself mixed up in the most bitter contest of the day, playing the entire morning round with never more than a hole or two away from his opponent, Rex Hartley. George came in to luncheon all square, his opponent having played the second half in 34 without gaining so much as one hole. In the afternoon Hartley took the lead early in the game. George, however, overhauled him soon after they had passed the turn. The turning points of the match, I think, were the eleventh and twelfth holes. On the eleventh Von Elm holed a very mean putt of about five yards for a three to go one up, and at the twelfth he recovered nicely from a bunker behind the green and holed a putt of three yards for a half in four. This left him two up with six to play, and he was a very happy young man when he was able to come in from the sixteenth a winner by three and two.

Jimmy Johnston found his real game, playing good, steady golf all the way. He finished the morning round three up on Cyril Tolley and was able to stave off a brilliant rally by Tolley in the afternoon round. Somehow we always expected Cyril to do something startling, and he set out for Jimmy after the luncheon intermission with the fury of a lion. He played the first four holes in three, four, three, four. The match had become again all square and it looked as though Jimmy might be in for a bad afternoon. He stuck to his guns, however, and finally won on the fourteenth green.

I am sure no one enjoyed the day more than Dr. Willing. The doctor loves a fight and he was up against just the right man to give one from the very start. The doctor and Nelson Smith were at each other's throats each making threes on the most impossible holes. At the turn, Doc found himself one down although he had gone out in 32, the better ball of himself and his opponent, at this stage, totaling 28 strokes. I saw Doc at luncheon, and although he was down at this time, his face was wreathed in smiles, as though he were having the time of his life.

Moe's Sensational Finish.

The margin by which I won from Roger Wethered was a good bit larger than it had any right to be. Roger certainly had none the worst of the play on the first nine holes, but on the second nine, his driver began to misbehave and to make openings for me. I played on this nine quite satisfactorily and piled up a big lead which left Roger too much to do in the afternoon.

Don Moe has just come in to spoil my entire story. I had thought that all the rest of us had done very well but Don, coming in last, accomplished one of the most amazing things I have ever heard of in this queer game of golf. Beginning the afternoon round four down he lost three of the first four holes, his opponent, J. A. Stout, starting with four threes. Seven down then with 14 holes to play, Don began to set off some fireworks. He finished the round in approximately 67, almost holding his iron shot on the last green and beat his man one up. How he did it, I am unable to even imagine and I shall leave someone else to write about it.

to win by himself, with Sande sitting snugly and confident.

They threw a blanket or roses over the withers of the winner and handed the smiling, happy jockey a huge bunch of American beauty roses. As the horse was walked away, the blanket of roses was draped over the shoulders of Sande as he accepted congratulations from Lord Derby.

The boy's share of the prize was $5000. In just three races his gamble on taking 10 per cent of the purses rather than a flat retaining fee amounts to $11,000.

"Good Horse," Says Trainer.

In the background stood Jimmy Fitzsimmons, the trainer who prepared Gallant Fox for his three straight victories this year—his Wood Memorial Stakes at Jamaica, his Preakness in Maryland and his Kentucky Derby today. He was quite as proud an happy as Owner Woodward. He said in his quiet way: "He's a good horse. He did just what I expected."

Lord Derby stood in the drizzle to give his impressions of the gallant winner and spectacular struggle over the air in an international hookup.

Fifteen horses paraded in shiny new colors and it was a stirring sight. Busy was the only one to decline the issue. High Foot led the parade of restless, prancing horses. Bill Hamilton soon caught them in line and sent them off to a good start out of the stalls. A slight snarl and tangle in the first sixteenth unraveled quickly and the struggle was on.

Race Decided in Back Stretch.

Sande, alert at the barrier, got Gallant Fox off in full stride. He was outrun in the first furlong and was fifth going by the crowded stands the first time, but free from the trouble which dogged his steps in the running of the Preakness. Going around the first turn, Sande moved up to Alcibiades, Buckeye Poet and Tannery, the early pacemakers, took command half way up the back stretch and the race, as it turned out, was over then and there. Gallant Fox raced to the front easily.

Except for a sharp challenge by Crack Brigade, Gallant Fox just galloped along in majestic way with his blazed face and red hooded head nodding as if in play. He was much the best horse in a race truly run. The struggle was brilliant as it unfolded but lacked dramatic touch. Gallant Fox and Sande simply dominated.

Gallant Knight ran a steady even race. Schutte rated him patiently off the pace and brought him along in the stretch for a challenge which was bold enough, but futile.

Ned O Supplies a Thrill.

Ned O all but furnished the dramatic touch. Racing on the rail most of the way and far, far back for a mile, he closed with a great rush through the stretch to earn $3000 for being a creditable third.

Such confidence as men put in horses was outraged by Tannery, second choice in the wagering, on which E. F. Pritchard and his friends were reported to have stood to win nearly a million dollars. He broke well and Willie Garner placed him snugly in third place for half a mile. Te tried to go on when Gallant Fox moved to the front, but failing, dropped far back out of contention.

Crack Brigade, beaten less than a length by Gallant Fox in the Preakness, ran as if drugged by an overdose of racing. He broke slowly, gradually improved his position and made a run at his rival going around the turn, but then tired and finally wound up in fifth place. T. M. Cassidy accepted defeat gracefully but under the surface was hurt. He counted on seeing his horse win.

Little need be said of the others. They simply tried and failed to keep pace with such a good horse as the winner. Gone Away closed an immense gap to be fourth. He earned much of the credit.

"One of Finest Horses I Ever Rode"—Sande

By the Associated Press.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 17.

GALLANT FOX, winner of the Kentucky Derby, is, in the opinion of Earl Sande, who rode him to victory, "one of the finest horses I ever rode."

Sande, grinning happily over his victory and besieged by a large crowd of admirers, was enthusiastic in his praise of the Derby winner.

"I had to restrain him coming into the back stretch," he said. "He was full of run all the way.

"I got a good break in the race, except that I got in a tight place at the start. Gallant Fox was fourth and on the rail at the quarter. On the back stretch we moved up and took the lead. I didn't have a bit of trouble with Gallant Fox."

ARCHERS WILL SHOOT AGAINST PISTOL TEAM AT ARENA TONIGHT

Whether an arrow can be shot with greater accuracy from a bow than a bullet from a pistol will be decided at the Sportsmen's Show at The Arena tonight at 7 o'clock when a team of four archers will compete against a revolver team from the Officers' Reserve Corps of St. Louis.

Dr. E. S. Hodgson of East St. Louis, Albert H. Wyman, Nat B. Lay of Maplewood and Howard Spooner and William Mahoney, alternate, will comprise the team of archers.

Archer Gets Record Score.

Dr. Hodgson last night shot 618, the best score ever made in indoor archery in St. Louis, to win the championship in The Arena tournament. Other scores were: Wyman, 556; Lay, 552; Spooner, 549; Charles Cox, Memphis, 501; Thomas Mull of Holly Grove, Ark., 472; Fred Brown, Peoria, Ill., 438; J. L. Messing, 413, and Harold Plowe, Peoria, 393.

Cox is a 15-year-old school boy, Mull Southern champion and Brown Illinois titleholder.

Mrs. Ruth B. Lay of Maplewood led the women archers with 409 to win the championship of her division. Mrs. William Mahoney was second with 383. Other scores were: Mrs. J. H. Curd, 349; Miss Elizabeth Nicholson, 293; Mrs. Howard Spooner, 288, and Miss Shirley Snyder, 137.

Lieut. Boefer Scores 292.

Lieut. G. E. Boefer of the 308th Field Artillery scored 292 out of a possible 300 to take individual honors in the first day firing of the service match, which will be concluded tonight with the 406th and 407th Infantry and 527th Coast Artillery competing.

The Cavalry Reserve's No. 1 team led in the team event with 1090 out of a possible 1500. Cavalry Reserve No. 2 was second with 1007. Other teams finished in the following order: St. Louis Pistol and Revolver Club, 1005; 380th Field Artillery, 993, and the Ordnance Reserves 764.

The match was at 50 and 25 yards, shooting at the army target with 45-caliber automatic.

Horseshoes Final Tonight.

Frank Meyer and L. Meilert of the Sunsets and A. Hofmann and T. Burkhardt of the Free Juniors of the Municipal Horseshoe League will meet at 7 o'clock tonight in a round robin to decide the championship of the Sportsmen's show. Each will receive a trophy.

The four were the highest of the 22 players who pitched their 50 qualifying shoes in the tournament during the week. Meyer was the leader, with 102 points, getting 29 ringers for a ringer average of .58.

Schmeling Puts Out Two of Three Sparring Mates

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ENDICOTT, N. Y., May 17.—Max Schmeling made another slaughter of innocents here this afternoon and, as a result, two more sparring partners are about ready to toss up the sponge. Vincent Babin and Henry Girkin heard the birds chirping and smelling salts had to be used to bring them back from the land of Nod.

A long overhand right in the second round put Babin hors du combat and when the Teuton schlager drove home another left and right to the jaw, Babin sunk in a crumpled heap on the floor. The round was stopped with five seconds to go.

Gerkin fared even worse. Max took things a bit easy with him in the first round, but in the second unlimbered. An overhand right landed flush on Gerkin's chin and poor Henny was knocked colder than a landlady's heart. When Gerkin went down his head hit the floor with a thud and, despite the heavy padding, he was stunned so badly that it required a full minute's work by handlers to bring him around. It looked at first as if Gerkin was hurt, but five minutes afterward he was his normal self.

George Neron, Babin and Gerkin today all were instructed to use as often as possible an overhand right, the blow with which Jack Sharkey knocked out Tommy Loughran and jolted both Young Stribling and Phil Scott. None of them, however, could use the punch properly and Schmeling got little practice against the pet punch of the man he will face in Yankee Stadium on June 12.

Ticket Sale Opens Tomorrow.

NEW YORK, May 17.—The public sale of tickets for the world's heavyweight championship bout between Jack Sharkey and Max Schmeling at the Yankee Stadium on June 12, will open at Madison Square Garden at 9 o'clock Monday morning. Tickets will range from $5.25 to $26.25.

BROWN WISDOM WINS HANDICAP AT FAIRMOUNT

tually out of his class, but Meyers' superior riding transformed him into a serious contender as long as his stamina lasted.

By Product Takes Fifth.

The Reicherts tried to make it three in a row when they sent Wizardry after the fifth, the Ozarks Purse, but he was outclassed. By Product, running just the sort of race that made her one of the sensations of the New Orleans racing season, set the pace throughout and successfully withstood the challenge of Molehill in the stretch. J. Judy put everything he had into his work in urging Molehill to overtake the filly, but Meyers was equally energetic and By Product just lasted to win by half a length.

Jockey Meyers started right off with a victory in the opening race after having scored four times on Friday. He gave Jack Crain a faultless ride in bringing him around Watchword on the turn, swinging a bit wide to find a clear path. In the stretch, Goodrich, on Toltec, seemed to have the race won when he disposed of Robina Seth, but Meyers had Jack Crain coming up fast and Toltec was a beaten horse, despite the frantic efforts of Goodrich to get another move out of him.

G. Fowler's hustling ride had much to do with the success of Fig Leaf in taking the second race from Vagrant. The latter led all the way but Fowler forced Fig Leaf to the front just in time to get the purse. Western Princess was a fast moving third and apparently is ready to win a race.

Arrogant, for the second time in three days, beat President Seth in winning the sixth race. The McCuan gelding, ridden by Apprentice Green, was much at home in the mud, and won by half a dozen lengths. King Sport was third, making a bid for better position in the last quarter. The time for the six furlongs was slow. Arrogant refunded a little better than even money.

Hula coming around the two leaders at the stretch turn, pulled away to win by two lengths from Elfrieda G. and Punkie in the seventh race. The winner was ridden by C. Pegg.

Fairmount Notes.

George Cimerak led the riders in money earned for the first week of the meeting, with $303. M. E. Meyers was second. The first five were paid as follows: Cimerak, $303; Meyers, $296; H. Thomas, $218; E. Goodrich, $163; B. Hanford, $135.

The Reichert Bros. won $3080 in purses for the first week to top the list. George Collins was second with $2438 and Ed McCuan third with $2300.

Post time in the first race will be 2 p. m. for the balance of the meeting, instead of 2:15 as heretofore.

DIEGEL SHOOTS "BIRDIE" 2 ON FINAL HOLE TO BEAT MITCHELL

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, May 17.—Leo Diegel, with steady but not spectacular golf, today scored the first American professional victory in Britain this season when he defeated Abe Mitchell in a 36-hole match at Moor Park, one up.

The American professional champion, sent home a long putt for a birdie two to win at the home hole after the British pro had staged a rally which brought him from the rear. Mitchell at one time was four down.

Meanwhile the other American golf forces are moving to new fields.

The Walker Cup players, after taking possession of the international trophy at Sandwich last night, motored to London today to spend the week-end sightseeing.

Bobby Jones may play another match with the Prince of Wales and Monday the full Walker Cup squad will turn out at Sunningdale for a golf magazine's 36-hole medal competition.

This will enable Jones and the others to shoot at the 66—68 record Bobby established when qualifying there for the British open in 1927.

Early next week the American amateurs will move on to Scotland. Some of them will reach St. Andrews while Glenna Collett and the other American girls are paying their respects to the shrine of the ancient game.

The women players will visit Gleneagles and other famous Scottish golfing meccas before leaving next week for France to play another international match.

The Americans will spend most of next week practicing at St. Andrews for the amateur championship, opening May 26.

BROWNS KNOCK UHLE OUT OF THE BOX, BUT LOSE TO TIGERS, 12 TO 7

ALEXANDER AND FOTHERGILL RAP HOMERS; THREE ST. LOUIS HURLERS POUNDED FOR 13 HITS

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.)

DETROIT, May 17.—Detroit had its batting togs on today in its series-opener with St. Louis and set the Browns back right handily by a 12 to 7 count. Alexander and Fothergill featured the fracas with a home run apiece, the former lifting the ball over the left field fence in the third inning with a runner on, while "Ruby Bob" sent his outside the lot in the eighth inning with the bases packed.

Neither Crowder, nor Uhle, the starting pitchers, was able to go the route, Crowder passing out in the third inning in favor of Holshouser and Uhle taking the air in the eighth to let Sorrell finish. Holshouser was taken out for a pinch-batsman in the eighth and Stiely, a recruit southpaw finished for the Browns.

Detroit totaled 13 hits off the opposing hurlers while St. Louis made 10, Kress being the chief sticker on the visiting list with three in five trips while Alexander was the big noise for the Tigers with an equal number of blows.

Uhle had the situation well in hand the first seven innings and then wabbled in the eighth when he walked one batsman and saw three hit successively into the same spot in left garden. Sorrell came to the rescue and halted the St. Louis rally without allowing a run.

Blue Runs Wild.

After the Browns scored a run in the first inning due to some fine base running by Lu Blue, who scored from second base on an infield out, the Tigers counted twice on a walk, two singles and a sacrifice fly.

Two singles and an infield out gave Detroit another in the second, while in the third a pass to McManus followed by a home run by Alexander scored two more for the Tigers and finished Crowder for the day. Holshauser took his place.

The fourth, fifth and sixth innings were unproductive for either team. Kress opened the Browns' seventh with a double and came home on Schulte's single. The flare-up subsided right there, however, and when the Tigers came to bat they added three more to their total when Detroit attacked spiritedly and the Brownie defense cracked, Kress being charged with two errors which with three hits and a sacrifice scored a trio for the home club.

Homer With Bases Full.

Stiely went to the mound for the Browns in the last half and had a rough voyage, for Funk singled and when Stiely fell down trying to field Gehringer's intended sacrifice, there were two on. McManus tried to sacrifice, but the bases were filled when Melillo forgot to tag first after receiving the throw. That failed to rattle Stiely and he struck out Alexander, but Fothergill then walloped the ball over the fence for a home run and four runs went across the plate for Detroit.

There was a futile little effort on the part of the Browns in the ninth when they scored two runs on singles by Hale and Manush and Kress' double, but the rally fell some five tallies short of tying the score.

In order to complete the Inter-Park tournament before the individual Municipal championships begins there will be two divisions this year. One division to be known as the Northern Division will consist of the following clubs; Forest Park, Sherman Park, Fairgrounds Park, St. Louis Park, Baden Park and O'Fallon Park.

The Southern division of six teams will include Carondelet Park, Concordia Park, Marquette Park and Sublette Park, and the two clubs in Forest Park, Oakland and Kingshighway. There will be no play on Decoration day or July 4.

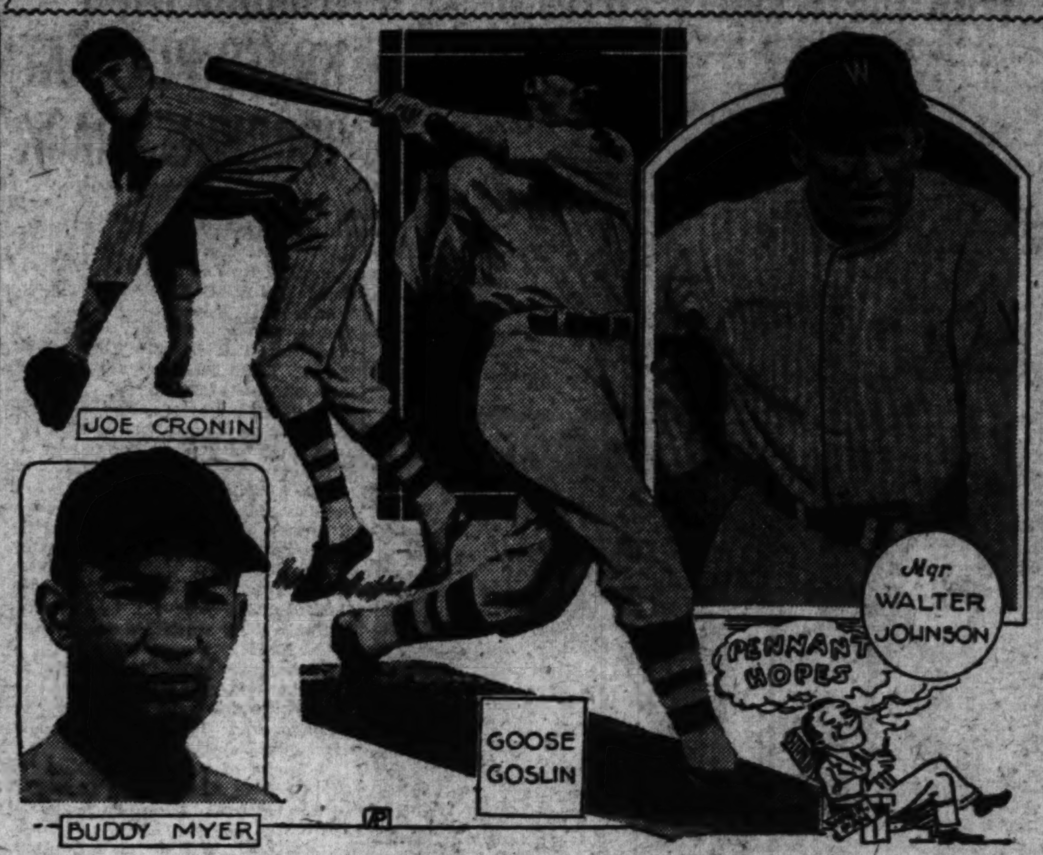
The Sensations of 1930



WASHINGTON, May 17.—Baseball fans of Washington are beginning to see things, among them a possible pennant for the Senators of the American League, led by the old favorite, Walter Johnson. The Senators, away to a good start, went to the top of the league by steady play in the early stages of the season. Then they fell off a bit and sagged to second, only to recover their form and, by handing the Athletics a double-defeat, regain the first rung in the percentage-ladder.

What especially pleases the fans and strengthens their flag-hopes is the showing made by Johnson's team against the world champions. Last year the champions owed much of their early lead to their ability to trounce the Senators. All told, the A's won 16 games from Washington. This year, however, with the Washington machine working smoothly and, so far, unhampered by injuries, Walter Johnson's men have won seven of the eight games played against Philadelphia.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Dempsey the Fighter Passes.

JACK DEMPSEY, the promoter, has closed his Chicago office and is through with fight producing for the year, at least. Jack Dempsey, the fighter, has just undergone an intestinal operation and is through with fighting. And so passes the mighty mauler as a ring figure for this year—probably forever.

For a time there was a brief hope that Dempsey would become either a Tex Rickard in promotion, or return to claim the championship of the world as a fighter. The first hope is now in the 1930 discard; the second has anchored in the port of What Might Have Been.

Dempsey had intended promoting a Schmeling title fight or one in which Carnera would figure, had the giant made good. He also had hinted that if be could regain fighting form he might battle Schmeling himself, in case the German defeated Sharkey, or the giant Carnera, in event the Italian defeated some men of quality first.

The public would have packed the park for Dempsey either as promoter or fighter and enriched him mightily. It seems too bad such a splendid opportunity had to be wasted.

Might Have Regained Title.

DEMPSEY, except for the operation, probably could have attained physical condition good enough to enable him to last three rounds with anybody. And in three rounds Dempsey ought to be able to sink the Colossus of Venice and perhaps Schmeling. That would have meant retirement with the title and a fortune greater than Gene Tunney took out of fight circulation when he quit.

• • •

It's Referee Dempsey Now.

HENCEFORTH it is highly probable that Dempsey's appearance in the ring will be confined to introductions and refereeing. Dempsey has made a really considerable sum in this capacity, and the best part of it all is he makes a fine official.

There hasn't been a squawk against him since he began refereeing. Promoters say he knows his stuff, acts with decision and stands for no "monkey-doodle business."

Fighters, above all, respect him and try to follow his suggestions. That's where Jack has a mighty margin on all official rivals.

Even though he never fights again, he can come back as a referee, for two or three more years before the novelty wears off. For refereeing Jack gets a percentage or a guarantee just like a fighter, and in many cases his share has been more than the main eventers were promised. But he doesn't always take it. On one occasion, in St. Louis, when the promoters lost money, Jack waved aside a check for $2500.

"I don't want a cent. I didn't make anything for you fellows; why should I take it?" Jack said.

Try to duplicate that in the present-day sport world.

DEMPSEY probably has made from $60,000 to $75,000 this year acting as referee, which is enough to keep the wolf from the door.

Jack needs it—no foolin'. You know, he told Madison Square Garden officials, in refusing their offer of $30,000 a year to become their matchmaker and promoter, that he "couldn't live on $30,000 a year," and was forced to decline.

Seventy-five thousand a year is pretty good interest on a little capital, consisting largely of popularity.

Temperature Is Low.

THE Schmeling-Sharkey battle, which is officially to be recognized as a world-title fight, is not causing any feverish excitement. In fact, the excitement may never come. Publicity sources are still congealed. The army of correspondents has not yet moved on the training camps, but may be expected to do so with the derby out of the way.

There is nothing to become excited about in this affair. This writer believes that there will be no million dollar gate because:

First, the pugilistic color is not there.

Second, neither fighter has a much better claim to the title than several other heavyweights.

Third, there is a low ebb in the financial affairs of fight fans reflected in the ring and other sports.

It will be surprising if the receipts greatly exceed $500,000. If they do it will be a tribute to the charity, promoters, or a sign that the boxing game is coming back.

Hitless, but No Wonders.

BILL KILLEFER'S Browns must be causing their manager acute anguish. Nothing akin to the weak hitting displayed by the club on its Eastern trip can be recalled since the war. In 12 games the team made some 67 hits, or just a trifle over three times as many as the Cardinals made in a single game last Friday. The club's batting average for the Eastern trip was .183, which probably is a modern low record.

With it all the Browns have been an interesting, fighting team and have made it tough for enemy clubs, at times. Their pitchers are good enough to win for a team that could hit—and even for the Browns, when that outfit decides to start smacking the ball.

Think of a club which, in the middle of May, is batting only .215 as a team, with a high average batter at .280, and a near-champion hitter with a mark of .250! Not one .300 hitter, regular or substitute is shining for the club.

It is Killefer's luck to start his managerial career with an outfit that is not hitting within 50 points of its team capabilities.

Yet, rightly or not, it will reflect against his team management.

Killefer and the club can blame in part the holdouts who hampered the training work of the club by late reporting. Manush, at least, has caused the team its greatest handicap and he is not really in shape to go his best now.

It is small wonder that club owners complain when their team's progress and prospects are held up by holdouts.

The right of a player to discuss his salary with a club owner is unquestioned, but he has no right to let himself deteriorate during the discussion and to be unfit to perform his duties when he does report.

Club owners have many baseball sins to answer for; but the ballplayers, in some instances, have not been fair with the club owners.

The result inevitably will be that club owners will work together to the defeat of the players and to the reduction of their demands to a more reasonable basis. Watch what happens at the next winter meetings of the league, especially in contract wording.

BRITONS, WITH TILDEN ON TEAM, LOSE TO FRENCH

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, May 17.—Despite the whole-hearted and formidable assistance of big Bill Tilden, England was able to gain only the short end of a 5 to 4 score in nine matches of an inter-country tennis tournament with France today.

Already Americans are visualizing a final battle for the French hard court championship between Tilden and Henri Cochet, ace of the French Davis Cup squad, now that Rene Lacoste seems definitely out of the year's play.

Big Bill paired with Bunny Austin, young British star, in the featured doubles match of the series and was the strongest player on the courts in beating Cochet and Jacques Brugnon, who will team in the Davis Cup doubles final round, 2—6, 6—4, 6—4. Tilden never lost his service and played as brilliantly as in the heyday of his career. Cochet also was superb.

Aside from the doubles conquest of Tilden and Austin, England's victories were scored by I. G. Collins and J. C. Gregory, who beat Jean Borotra and Rene de Buzelet, 6—2, 7—5, and in two singles. Austin defeated Brugnon, 8—6, 6—2, and Nigel Sharpe beat Pierre Landry, 6—4, 6—3.

For the French, Borotra turned in a singles victory over H. G. N. Lee, 8—6, 6—1, 6—4, and De Buzelet defeated Gregory, 6—3, 8—6. Antoine Gentien beat Collins, 8—6, 6—3. Two French veterans outscored their British rivals, Roger Guillemaut nosing out M. J. G. Ritchie, 12—10, 6—4, while Francois Blanchy, champion of France in olden days, won the contest for veterans over 40 years old from A. L. Kingscote, 6—3, 4—6, 6—1.

White Sox Defeat the Indians Twice

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 17.—Four White Sox pitchers held Cleveland batsmen to eight hits in two games today as Chicago won both ends of a double-header, 4 to 1 and 6 to 2.

After Ted Lyons had stopped the Indians with five hits to win his sixth victory of the season, in the opener, Cecil Pat Caraway, Ted Blankenship and Hal McKain came out in the second game and held the Indians to three safeties. All were gleaned off Caraway in his five innings of service.

After starving for hits most of the season, Smead Jolley, Sox outfielder, connected for a pair in the second game.

YALE'S VARSITY CREW CAPTURES CARNEGIE RACE

By the Associated Press.

PRINCETON, N. J., May 17.—Yale's varsity crew defeated the eights of Cornell and Princeton today to win the Carnegie Cup regatta for the sixth time in its nine-year history.

The Yale eight beat Cornell's heavy crew by three lengths with Princeton another length behind in third place.

Yale also rowed away with the honors in the junior varsity race, finishing two lengths ahead of Princeton. Cornell, with its No. 3 man, H. O. A. Geitinger of York, Pa., rowed completely out and unable to pull his oar at all for the last quarter mile, trailed Princeton by three and a half lengths after looking like a winner in the early stages.

Princeton's freshman crew finished four full lengths ahead of Cornell in the opening event. Yale finished three and a half lengths behind Cornell.

In the varsity race Princeton got the jump but soon fell back, and Cornell, rowing a short quick stroke, held a quarter of a length lead over Yale at the half-mile point.

Yale passed Cornell at the half mile mark and held a slim quarter length advantage at the mile. From that point on to the finish of the mile and three-quarter pull, Yale fairly shot ahead.

For the benefit of the 7000 persons clustered around the finish line, Stroke Tappen put on a great closing sprint at 38 strokes to the minute. Yale's time of nine minutes 20 3-10 seconds is the fastest ever turned in over the Carnegie Lake course in this regatta.

Yale Freshmen Win New York Regatta

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 17.—In the first intercollegiate freshman lightweight crew regatta on record, Yale's yearling 150 pounders defeated Princeton and Columbia in a one-mile race on the Harlem River today.

The Eli Frosh led Princeton to the finish line by two lengths, while Columbia was a poor third, about four lengths behind Princeton. The times were: Yale 4:26 3-5; Princeton 4:32, and Columbia 4:44.

Navy Crew Wins Quadrangular Regatta

By the Associated Press.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 17.—The Navy crew won a four-cornered regatta here today on the Charles River. Massachusetts Tech finished a half a length behind the Middies. Harvard a length behind M. I. T. and Pennsylvania trailed the Crimson by four lengths. The water was rough and the race rowed in the twilight. It being delayed several hours because of water conditions.

The Harvard freshman crew ran away with the one-mile and three-quarters race with the yearlings of Tech and Pennsylvania. The Crimson boat led Tect by six lengths to the finish and the Pennsylvanians trailed Tech by three lengths. Harvard's time was nine minutes and 17 seconds.

The M. I. T. junior Varsity crew repeated its win of two weeks ago by beating Harvard and Pennsylvania to the finish in nine minutes and 26 seconds. Harvard finished eight seconds after Tech and Pennsylvania trailed the Crimson.

BRAVES WIN BOTH ENDS OF DOUBLE BILL FROM GIANTS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 17.—The Boston Braves opened their long series against the Giants here today by taking both ends of a double-header, both games by 4 to 3 scores. The first game went ten innings before Boston pushed over two runs and held the Giants to one to win.

Walter Berger, young Boston outfielder, provided the hitting feature by hitting two home runs in the first game and one in the second to bring his total for the season to eight. Harry Seibold avenged an earlier defeat in the opener, pitching the entire distance in a tight battle against Hub Pruett. The Giant southpaw weakened in the tenth, giving two passes and two hits, and was removed. Bob Smith hurled the second contest for Boston and did well in the pinches, the only scores against him were on home runs by Terry, Hogan and Ott.

WHITNEY TWO-YEAR-OLD SHOWS CLASS IN BEATING HAPPY SCOT; BANGLE IS STEEPLECHASE VICTOR

Equipoise, a high-class horse, suffered slight interference just after the start, recovered to close gamely on the inside and was going at end. Happy Scot, a fine looking colt, displayed good speed and held on gamely. Avaricious, well up to final furlong, bolted from the middle of the track to inner rail and almost lost the show money.

Odds paid: Equipoise, win 3-5, place 1-5, show, out; Happy Scot, place 1-3, show, out; Avaricious, show, even.

NEW YORK, May 17.—Harry Payne Whitney's penchant for developing great two-year-olds appears to have carried over into 1930 with the brilliant showing of Equipoise, a chestnut son of Pennant-Singing.

The fleet colt picked up 122 pounds today, and under Sonny Workman's masterful ride accounted for the $7625 purse in winning the Keene Memorial Stakes over the Belmont Park turf. In his recent race at Jamaica, Equipoise defeated the unbeaten Vanderpool, but was disqualified for fouling. Today, however, there was no question of the Whitney youngster's superiority over the classy field of juveniles that chose to accept the issue over four and one-half furlongs.

Speeding down the Widener straightaway in 52 3-5 seconds, Equipoise led Samuel Ross' Washington-owned Happy Scot to the finish line by three lengths. Ten lengths back of the Ross colt trailed James Outler's Avaricious, which bolted at the furlong pole, but recovered quickly to show a clean pair of heels to the remainder of the field.

The two veterans of the cross-country field met in the Coligny Steeplechase over the two-mile course, with the Dorwood stable's Bangle finishing a head in front of Mrs. Payne Whitney's Jolly Roger. Cloverdale was third. The race was strictly a two-horse affair, with Bangle holding the advantage throughout. Pat Donoghue, son of the famous English jockey, Steve Donoghue, was astride Bangle for his first victory on American turf. Donoghue is under contract to Victor Emanuel to ride the Dorwood stable jumpers.

Walter J. Salmon's Snow Flake, which finished third in the Preakness came back to the races and added the Ladies Stake to her credit by defeating a big field of fillies and mares at a mile. Dust Em All was second and Flimsey third.

The start was bad. Half of the field was practically left. Flimsey got away running and led to the top of the stretch where Snow Flake slipped through on the inside and drawing away won by a length. Dust Em All beat Flimsey five lengths for the place. The race was worth $4375 and the mile was run in 1:40.

FAIRMOUNT TO CONTINUE MEET, EDDY DECLARES

"Absolutely ridiculous," was General Manager Robert Eddy's comment on the report published in Belleville that the present race meeting at Fairmount would be abandoned.

"On the contrary," added Eddy, "we are laying plans for a busy meeting. Our condition books for the next two weeks of racing are going to press this morning. We are not only not disappointed in the attendance, we are delighted."

A comparison of attendance and program sales reports for the first five days of the present meeting and the corresponding days of the spring meeting last year show a daily lead of nearly 1000 persons this season. Eddy spread these attendance reports on his desk in proving his statement that there had been an increase in patronage. He requested, however, that the actual figures should not be published.

"We knew pretty well what the daily attendance and mutuel department business would be," he added. "We would not be surprised to find the betting light, in view of the upset condition of business all over the country, but, frankly, we are quite pleased with the situation here.

"We will go right through with the meeting as planned. We are not even contemplating reductions of purses, or anything of that sort.

"So far as I know the State of Illinois would not even consider a request from a track for a refund of the daily tax if a track wished to close. The suggestion that we intend to curtail the meeting is aboslutely without foundation."

Arrogant, favored by the going, and racing as if much the best, sprinted into a long lead to win in a canter. President Seth outrun during the early running, gained rapidly after going a half, outstayed King Sport but was no match for thhe winner. The latter raced evenly throughout. Morton quit. Shasta Lad disliked the going and was done after going a half. Uncle Parks was a distant trailer from the start.

$2 mutuels paid: Arrogant, win $4.36, place $3.78, show $2.23; President Seth, place $7.02, show $3.04; King Sport, show $3.50.

SEVENTH RACE—$800, claiming, 3-year-olds and up, mile and one-sixteenth: Start good, won easily, place driving. Went to post, 5:17. At post 3 minutes. Winner, ch. f. 4, High Noon-Keepsake. Hula, hard urged from the start, gained rapidly after going a half, drew by the leaders after reaching the final eighth, to win going away. Elfrieda G., prominent from the start, set a good pace, but failed to withstand the winner when challenged. Punkie had no mishap. Lansquenet, away slowly, was taken under restraint and, racing wide throughout, closed an immense gap and might have been a keen factor with a more energetic ride. Cho Cho San went well. Piute quit. Tarnish was done after going a quarter and was eased up during the stretch racing.

$2 mutuels paid: Hula, win $8.46, place $4.54, show $3.40; Elfrieda G., place $12.24, show $4.28; Punkie, show $2.54.

ARCHERS WILL COMPETE TODAY IN TOURNAMENT

Those who have followed breathlessly the adventures of bold Robin Hood and his green-clad adherents of Sherwood Forest will be given a chance to see how Robin conquered the Sheriff of Nottingham with his lusty yew bow when the Mound City District Archery Federation holds its open spring tournament at Forest Park today, on the Triple A golf course. The tournament, which will start at 9 o'clock this morning and continue after a recess at 2 p. m., has drawn 43 entries, including men and women archers of national reputation.

If Robin were living today he would find plenty of competition in the York round of shooting for the men this morning, for he would be shooting against such champions as Tom Mull of Holly Grove, Ark., the second ranking archer of the American round of the United States, and against Carl Thompson of Pinehurst, N. C., formerly of New York, who last year won the Metropolitan championship of New York, the Eastern championship at Deerfield, Mass., and the Mid-Western at Grand Rapids, Mich.

Nat B. Lay, who won the Missouri Valley championship at Centralia, Ill.; "Big Bill" Mahoney, the local indoor titleholder; Howard Spooner, the outdoor champion; Dr. E. S. Hodgson of East St. Louis, and A. H. Wyman are other prominent archers who would contest Robin's accuracy at 100 paces.

Indiana, Illinois, Arkansas, Missouri, California and North Carolina will be represented by well-known archers.

This afternoon, after having completed the York style the archers will compete under the American Round, a form of shooting with which Robin would not be familiar. Tom Mull is probably the leading exponent of the American round of shooting.

The list of accurate women archers is almost as impressive as that of the men. Mrs. Ruth B. Lay, who in her first year of shooting won four titles—the Missouri Valley, the Mid-Western, the Mound City and the Peoria Open—heads the group.

The meet, which is the first ever held in St. Louis, and the greatest outside of champion competition, has been arranged after five years of hard work. Admittance will be free today and if enough enthusiasm is shown, another meet may be held next year.

With Gallant Fox nominated b not likely to start, and Tanner High Foot, Ned O., Breezing Th and 32 other horses nominated, t Fairmount Derby, to be run ne Saturday, May 24, may develop in the best race in the five years' hi tory of the stake. In spite of t fact that the added money offere by the Fairmount Jockey Club ha been reduced from $25,000 to $15, 000, Racing Secretary Julius Reeder has obtained the nomina tion of some of the best horse entered in the Kentucky Derby where the prize is over $50,000.

Winners of the Fairmount Derby have in the past gone on to wi a place among the outstandin stake winners. Haste, ridden b Earle Sande, carried off the majo prize in the first year, 1926; the came Buddy Bauer, which score an upset in 1927; Misstep in 192 and Karl Eitel last spring.

Seven contenders for the stake have been on the grounds here for some time and will have had the benefit of actual competition in preparatory races before Derby Day. Among them are George Collins' Thistle Ann, which beat the very highly regarded Niato of the Whitney Stable, in the Ashland Oaks at Lexington recently. Thistle Ann also finished a strong third in the Versailles Purse, which was won by Dedicate. She is considered one of the fastest fillies in training and with her weight allowance of five pounds, may be considered a formidable contender.

Good and Hot, which turned in some very fine races at Agua Caliente, is here and is fit and ready. Theo Rochester, in the hands of the very capable B. B. Rice, has rounded to form after a none too impressive winter season at New Orleans.

Reveille Boy, owned by J. A. Best, is another of the lesser lights that might make trouble and By Product, of J. G. Demarest's Stable, has a fair sort of record, although beaten off by Patricia Marian in a mile and a sixteenth race on opening day here. That first start over a strange and slow track may not be very significant. By Product is really a high-class filly.

The late receipts of nominations for Tannery and Breezing Thru put a new aspect on the Fairmount classic. While it is acknowledged that there will be wholesale withdrawals from the list of 36 nominees, there should be no less than a dozen starters and among this number should be some good ones. There is little doubt that the Audley Farm, which has a branch of its large establishment running here now under the direction of Kay Spence, will send Gallant Knight here. He is the winner of the Breeders' Futurity, won seven races in 19 starts and is in every way one of the outstanding 3-year-olds of the season.

Weather and track conditions probably will have much to do with the outcome, as well as with the number of starters. Thus far, the track soil has been of a loose nature which gives the soft track horses an apparent edge over these which go best over the lightning fast track.

COACH GLENN FILLEY RESIGNS AT M'KENDREE

LEBANON, Ill., May 17.—Glen Filley, the director of athletics and head football, basketball, track, tennis and cross-country coach, as well as the physical instructor of McKendree College, tendered his resignation to the board of athletes of McKendree College this morning, it was announced by Dr. Cameron Harmon, the chairman of the board and the president of the college.

The report greatly surprised not only the student body and the faculty but sporting fans of McKendree as well, most of whom were expecting the youthful mentor not to sever his relations for a score of years at least.

When Heydler Has Umpires Well-Trained They'll Be Fit for Diplomatic Service

By Herman Wecke.

NEED ANY HELP OUT THERE ?
WAKE ME UP WHEN THEY BRING IN THE VERDICT
C'MON PLAY BALL!
WHO'VE YOU GOT IN THE THIRD RACE
WHATCH GONNA DO FORM A UNION
YOU SHOOLDA SOLD THAT STOCK LONG AGO
DON'T BE ALWAYS ASKING ADVICE ON DECISIONS

After his many years in baseball, John A. Heydler, president of the National League, is convinced that players and fans have little use for the umpires. Heydler just about says so in his "special instructions" to the officials.

If there is any doubt about it, read as follows, and find out for yourself:

"Study the rules daily. A thorough knowledge of them is your greatest asset. Be courteous and firm and so compel respect from all, and never lose sight of the fact that friendship for the umpire, appreciation of his arduous duties, and practical co-operation in his troubles rarely extend outside of this office."

YEP, THE BURGLAR

Another thing. Heydler likes umpires who are able to "stand on their own feet" and are not everlastingly appealing to a fellow-mate to make the decision in some intricate play. He wants them to be in the right spot at the right time and get their OWN PLAYS. Instructions regarding this feature read as follows:

"If you are sure you got the play correctly, do not be stampeded by the players' appeal to 'ask the other man.' With a little study and patience each team (umpires) can work out a simple set of signals, so that the proper umpire can always right a manifestly wrong decision when he feels convinced he has made an error. If you are not sure of your ground, you have the right to ask one of your associates, but do not carry this to extreme. Be alert and get your OWN PLAYS."

Heydler also wants his umpires to remember to always KEEP THEIR EYE ON THE BALL. This latter seems to be a very important feature, as seen by the following:

"Keep your eye everlastingly on the ball while it is in play. It is more vital to know just where a fly ball fell, or a thrown ball finished up, than whether or not a runner missed a base. Do not call the plays too quickly, especially at first base; or turn away too fast when a fielder is throwing to complete a double play. Watch out for those dropped balls after you have called a man out."

All of which indicates that Heydler is anxious to have his umpires hesitate just a bit before calling 'em. That, however, is apt to get an official into a great deal of trouble should he hesitate too long. Just try to figure what the fans and the opposing players are apt to do should an umpire stand around at first base scratching his head and trying to decide what to do after a very close play.

If Heydler's bulletin means anything then the visiting of club offices, no matter for what business, is a bad practice for the umpires. They are reminded that they represent the whole National League and are not to stir up a lot of squabbles. This is explained as follows:

"Avoid visiting in club offices, or stopping anywhere in the grounds to enter discussion, no matter what their character. There is no surer way to start gossip than by thoughtless familiarity between umpires and attaches of contesting clubs. When you enter a ball park YOUR SOLE DUTY IS TO UMPIRE A BALL GAME as the representative of the entire National League, and so in all your actions and conduct keep in mind that your position calls for the settling of controversies on the ball field only, and not for starting them elsewhere."

The National League president also asks his umpires "to keep the game moving. A one-sided game is often helped by the energetic and earnest work of the umpires."

Heydler himself admits that the arbiter sometimes has a pretty tough time on the field, as witness: "You are the only official representative of the league on the ball field. It is often a trying position, which requires the exercise of much patience and good judgment; but do not forget that the first essential in working out of a bad situation is to keep your temper and self-control."

Maybe Mr. Heydler decided on this rule after Umpire Bill Klem recently ejected Jesse Haines, Cardinal pitcher, for giving him a "dirty look." And Haines was fined $25 for that look.

PHIL PERKINS LOSES TO PLATT IN FINAL ROUND OF TOURNEY

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, May 17.—J. Wood Platt, Philadelphia, today defeated T. Phil Perkins, former British amateur champion, three up and two to play, to win the Baltimore Country Clubs' seventeenth annual invitation golf tournament and the Maryland Cup. Platt was two up at the turn. Erratic putting beat the Briton.

TIETJEN, WEISE LOSE IN FINAL OF NET PLAY

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 17.—Warren Byrum of Western State Teachers' College, Kalamazoo, Mich., today won the Central Intercollegiate Conference singles tennis championship by a five-set victory over Frank Brody of Drake University at the Chicago Town and Tennis Club.

After dropping the first two sets Byrum rallied to take the match, 4—6, 2—6, 6—2, 6—0, 6—0.

Bert Riel and Gus Bergherm of Northwestern University won the doubles championship, defeating Haold Wiese and Vernon Tietjen of Washington University, St. Lous, in another five-set battle. The scores were 2—6, 6—4, 3—6, 7—5, 6—3.

Tietjen and Wiese, lobbing accurately and mixing their game well, were off to what looked like an easy victory when they won the first set while allowing their opponents to take only two games. Riel and Bergherm, playing much the same type of game, evened the count by taking the second set, 6—4.

Service gave the St. Louisans victory in the third set by a three-game margin, and they took a three-game lead in the early stages of the fourth set. The Northwestern pair spurted up, however, to tie the count at four games apiece and then by steady play won three more games while the losers were taking one.

In the final set, which went to Riel and Bergherm, 6—3, Wiese and Tietjen lost many of their own points by netting and driving outside.

Mrs. Gaut Wins Southern Title For Fourth Time

By the Associated Press.

GREENSBORO, N. C., May 17.—Mrs. Dave Gaut of Memphis, Tenn., ambled around the Valley Brook course of the Sedgefield Country Club here today and putted her way to her fourth women's Southern golf championship.

She defeated Miss Ann Kennedy, diminutive Tulsa (Ok.) flash, eight up and seven to play, to win the title after a lapse of seven years.

Mrs. Gaut's coolness and steadiness under fire told. Against this combination the youthful, ambitious Miss Kennedy never had a chance.

SUTTER, TULANE, WINS SOUTHERN NET TITLE

NEW ORLEANS, May 17.—Clifford Sutter, Tulane, successfully defended his title, defeating Donald Cram, Vanderbilt, in straight sets, 6—4, 6—4, 6—0, to win the singles in the Southern Conference tennis tournament today.

162 ATHLETES TO COMPETE IN PREP LEAGUE TRACK CARNIVAL

With an entry list of 162 athletes, the largest in the history of the event, the sixth annual Preparatory League track and field meet will be run off on Wednesday and Thursday at Taylor Field. The finals in all events will be held Thursday, with preliminaries in the 100 and 220 yard dashes and the 120-yard high and 220-yard low hurdles scheduled for Wednesday. While the meet should be close, a survey of entries and past performances seems to indicate that Western and Country Day have a slight edge on the other league schools.

The Western Military squad, winner of last year's meet by a large margin, is sending a formidable outfit of 38 men. Included in this number are Jackson, winner of the polt vault in 1929, who is again entered in this event, and Niehaus, who is an entrant in the shotput, which event he won last season. Both Niehaus and Roehl, who tied for third in the high jump at last year's meet, are down to compete in the same jump Thursday. Again this season the Cadets appear to be strongest in the field, and a few places in the various track events should enable them to capture first in the meet.

Country Day Has Strong Squad.

Country Day, which finished third in 1929, has shown the greatest development of any of the league schools, and should run the Westerners a close race for the honors. The Codasco outfit seems assured of points in the pole vault and javelin, in which events Thompson, Lehman and Morton placed in the district meet last week. Amadee Shields, who took second in the high jump last year, will compete this season in the same jump, while Richards, who placed in the district 440-yard run, and Bell, are expected to gather points in the 100, 220 and 440. Country Day, with 34 men, has the second largest entry list in the meet.

St. Louis U. High has entered 33 contestants, but the Junior Billiken strength is unknown. Curran, who took second and third in the low and high hurdles in 1929, should come through with places in these events Thursday, as should Roberts, who placed second in the javelin. Courtney, the Blue and White sprinting star, is a threat in the dashes, but aside from these men the St. Louis chances are uncertain.

C. B. C. Hurt by Graduations.

With 31 and 26 entrants, respectively, C. B. C. and McBride trail the other schools. The Brothers last their real star, Bob Nevin, by graduation, and seem to have little chance of taking the meet. Dowd, a jumper, is the only man who appears certain of capturing points, although Schmeid may come through in the mile. The Colonnaders' prospects are equally uncertain, although Roelle and Cundiff, who took second places in the 880 and mile, respectively, last year, should produce in these events this season also.

The Entries:

SWIDERSKI TO MEET LARRY JOHNSON AT CHICAGO, MAY 28

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 17.—Paul Swiderski, Syracuse light heavyweight, who floored Mickey Walker four times in their Louisville, Ky. match last night, was signed tonight to meet another puncher, Larry Johnson, as an added attraction to the Von Porat-Gagnon 10-round bout at the Chicago Stadium, May 28. The Swiderski-Johnson bout also will be a 10 rounder.

Middle Age Is No Bar to Golf Success, Roger Lord, Veteran Player, Declares

By W. J. McGoogan.

That a man 45 years of age can learn just as much about golf as one 25 years old if he has the proper teaching and will practice, is the belief of Roger Lord, Algonquin Club star, who has been in the game for 35 years.

ROGER LORD.

Lord won the championship of the St. Louis District about 15 years ago and this season he is out to recapture the crown. He has been playing very well all spring and as the tournament is held over his home course he will have a fine chance to win.

During a warmup for a recent tournament, Lord took time out to discuss some of the changes in the game around St. Louis which he has noted during recent years.

More Good Players.

"There are more good players here now than ever before," Roger remarked. "I notice in each district tournament how much faster the field is than in the previous one. Anyone who wins the district championship now has a job on his hands.

"Golf equipment, golf courses, greens, all are far superior to what we had some 15 years ago. Of course, it is still necessary for a player to know how to hit the ball properly to score. Even with fine clubs, a shot which is not hit properly won't go anywhere.

"Those professionals who talk of putting being the only thing in the game may be talking correctly of their own class where nearly all of the players are of equal strength. With them it is only a question of who is getting down his putts as to who will win, but with a field of average amateurs it is a different proposition. The average golfer has to learn to hit the ball off the tee far enough to give him a chance to get on with his second, if he be playing a 4 par hole. Then, of course, he must learn how to approach and how to putt al..

"What I said about there being a big improvement in the golfers around St. Louis doesn't alter the fact that in my opinion the greatest golfer ever developed here is Chris Kenney, now of Sunset Hill Country Club. A few years ago Chris had everything. He hit a fine long tee shot, he could approach and his ability with a putter was uncanny. A little more attention to the game when he was in his prime would have made Kenney a nationally known player."

Helping Out.

While Lord may believe that Kenney is the greatest golfer in this district, Roger has been doing his share with the junior players around Algonquin to help them become more proficient and to become what Kenney might have become, a national star.

Cardinals Stronger Club Than Eastern Experts Figured, McGraw Writes

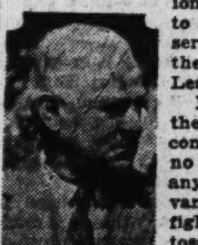
Manager New York Giants.

NEW YORK, May 17.—The intersectional games just ended with the return home of the eastern clubs of the National League and the western clubs of the American give no evidence of any outstanding club in either league, with the possible exception of the Philadelphia Athletics. Connie Mack's team has delivered its punch regularly and has kept a steady stride since the beginning of the season.

The Yanks, however, are coming slowly but steadily and, in my opinion, they are still to be regarded a serious factor in the American League race.



John McGraw.

In the National, the Western trip convinced me that no one club has any particular advantage and the fight will be a toss up between three or four clubs. It is certain now that the champion Cubs have no cinch. They miss the punch of Hornsby and will have to fight every inch of the way to repeat. Their pitchers seem in no better shap than the general run of them this spring. In fact, the general unsteadiness of pitching in both leagues is the outstanding feature of the two races. The clubs won't get fixed in their proper places until these pitchers settle down to their real form. This pitching defection is noticeable in the big hitting and big scores. Much that I attribute to the lively ball, but it also is true that few of the recognized star pitchers are quite right.

Cards Have Good Club.

Of the Western clubs the Pirates are particularly unfortunate in having lost Lloyd Waner and Pie Traynor. Even though it may be temporary, it will be difficult for them to overcome the handicap. That pair of players are a big factor in the Pirates' punch as well as defense.

The St. Louis Cardinals have a stronger club than many fans of the East seem to think. They have punch, speed and good defense. Their chances are entirely with the pitchers.

Our club has been a slugging outfit right along but we also have pitching worries.

I am not surprised at the punch shown by the Cleveland club. In fact I called attention to it before the season opened. Peckinpaugh's club will cause a lot of trouble for contenders in the American League and I expect the Tigers also to step out soon. There is a club with a punch.

Of our Eastern clubs the Brooklyn team made a particularly good showing against the strong Western teams and is bound to be an upsetting factor all season.

The Washington Senators seem to be one of the few clubs favored with steady stretches of pitching. Their veterans like Rice, Goslin and others have been hitting in mid-season form.

Many Good Youngsters.

This season, young as it is, has brought out an exceptionally large number of good young players. On nearly every team some youngster has bobbed up to win himself a regular job. Despite the general weakness in pitching this spring several youngsters have stood out as real comers. Of these there are Frey, of the Cincinnati Reds; Gomez, the Yankee youngster; Brown of Cleveland; Heving and Parmalee of the Giants, and Hogsett of the Tigers. Hallahan of the Cardinals also seems to be in for a good year. He is settling down into a really good pitcher. All of these men need experience, but that will come.

In St. Louis Orsatti is going great as a first baseman for the Cardinals. He is of the old-time type of player who loves the game and has that natural fighting spirit. There are many others, but those are enough to show how rapidly baseball is filling up with new men of ability. That alone will help made the season a hummer. It gives just the element of uncertainty that the game needs.

UNIVERSITY CITY TO BUILD 9-HOLE FEE GOLF LINKS AND PLAYGROUND

By Damon Kerby.

University City will have a municipal nine-hole golf course, construction of which was started Friday, with completion expected next spring. The links will be a fee course, and so far as University City Park Board members know at present, will be conducted on the same system as that used at Forest Park.

The new course is several blocks south of the Olive Street road and is bounded by McKnight road, old Bon Homme road and Groby road, and is located in a 72-acre tract known as Ruth Park, named for Mayor Eugene D. Ruth Jr. of University City. The length of the course will be 3013 yards, with a par of 34 strokes.

In addition to the golf course, a part of the tract will be used for a playground and five tennis courts. A house now located on the grounds will be used as a temporary clubhouse, in which shower baths and other facilities will be installed.

A. E. Veith, president of University City's Park Board, declined to say whether the course will be open to St. Louis as well as University City golfers. The holes have been laid out with a view to avoid congestion around the first greens as much as possible. It is considered likely that nonresidents of University City will be allowed to play on payment of the usual fee.

Construction of the new course was made possible by the $450,000 bond issue in University City which was passed two years ago, Veith said. The amount to be expended on the project was not announced. All money derived from the golf course in fees will be put back into a fund to improve the course.

J. M. Hord, park superintendent of University City, who was in charge of construction work on the Triple A and North Hills courses, is in general charge of construction on the new course. German bent grass, said to be the best obtainable, will be used.

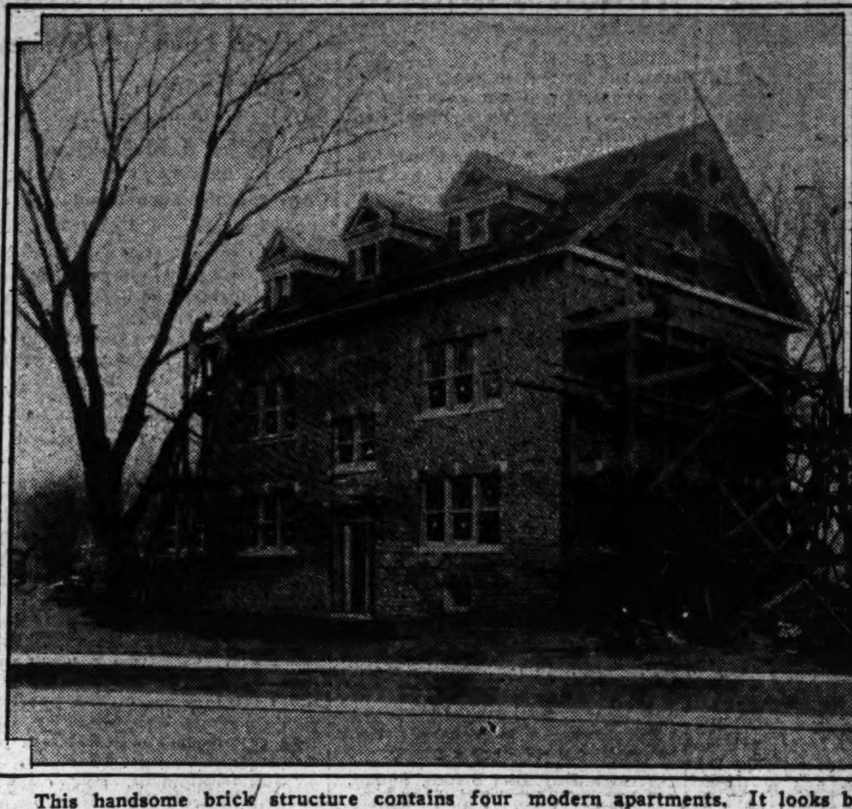
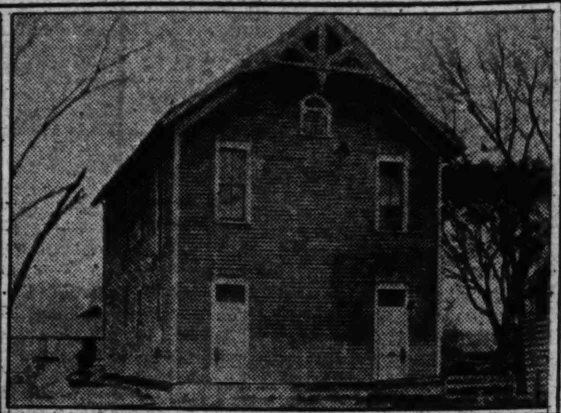
Thirty-Nine-Year-Old Building Remodeled





This handsome brick structure contains four modern apartments. It looks brand-new, but the building has really seen 39 years of service as a public school as the picture of the original building indicates.

A NEW ROOF DRESSES UP AN OLD HOUSE

One of the easiest and most satisfactory ways of improving the appearance of an old house according to A. C. Wagner, Secty. & Treas. of the Keystone Roofing & Mfg. Co., is to give it a new roof over the old shingles.

The extra insulation afforded by the old roof makes the house warmer in winter and cooler in summer plus the money saved by avoiding the cost of tearing off the old singles.

Recovering the roof and sidewalls of a residence with shingles, not only renders the house attractive and distinctive but also increases its value as a shelter from cold, heat and weather extremes and reduces fire hazards as well, for shingles, nowadays, are treated with chemicals that render the wood as fireproof as human knowledge and human effort can make it.

When an old house is treated to a new dress of shingles from the roof down to the ground, insulation is provided against heat and cold, making the home warm in winter at reduced heating costs and cooler in summer.

Another distinct advantage in new shingles is that they are made to last for many years and their distinctive colors will survive both sunshine and inclement weather.

The increase in property value following modernization of an old house with up-to-date shingles of jade green, or two-toned blend of red, green or brown, results immediately should the owner prefer to place the property on the market rather than keep it for a permanent home.

Study Each Room.

Each room in its turn deserves careful study. The windows, their number, and location must be considered. Have plenty of natural light, but let the windows effectively balance the wall space.

Modernizing a Home Does Not Mean Remodeling It

Oftentimes the Exterior of a Dwelling May Be in Good Condition, But the Interior Needs to Be Done Over.

The home modernizing movement is a broad and comprehensive program to make modern and up-to-date each part of the house.

Very often the remodeling of the house is the outward evidence of the modernizing but it must be understood that remodeling is only one phase of the movement.

The outward lines of the home may be modern—in keeping with the architectural practices of today. From the standpoint of the passerby this home is modern and complete. It does not need modernizing.

Yet an examination of the interior of the dwelling may show that the heating plant is inefficient, causing unusually high fuel bills. Or it may disclose that there are a lack of electrical outlets in rooms where they are badly needed.

The interior decorations probably are old-fashioned and the woodwork generally needs a new finishing coat of paint and varnish. The wall paper is in need of replacement and the hardwood floors of refinishing.

The bathroom after five years' constant usage will be all the better for the replacement of fixtures.

Modernization Needed.

In such a home remodeling may not be necessary but modernization is needed for no home is modern that is in need of improvements.

Modernization embraces many factors. The outward lines of the house, the interior arrangement of the rooms, the conveniences and accessories of the home, the environment of the dwelling, all may need improvement. And if such be the case, modernization is more or less necessary.

Times change and the average house grows old. Every home that was built five years ago is lacking in some improvements that aid in giving comfort or in satisfying the desire for beauty.

Fixtures Grow Out of Date.

Electrical fixtures such as the chandeliers of the living or dining room may be giving good service yet be slightly out of date from the standpoint of looks and style. Like styles in garments the various appliances of the home change from year to year. Newer models vary in appearance from those of yester-year.

More efficient methods of performing the household duties come into being. The older types must be discarded in favor of the new. Electric washing machines take the place of the older hand operated washers. Electrical thermostats now regulate automatically the heating plant, varying the temperature of the interior of the home as needed. Vacuum sweepers aid in cleaning the rooms.

GRASS EASILY GROWN

Velvety Lawn Effective Setting for a Residence.

Success is easy in making a velvety green lawn, says a professional landscape gardner who has issued this helpful statement of "do's" and "dont's."

Spade the soil and work it until it is fine and crumbly. If it happens to be of the stiff clay type, add sand or sifted ashes to loosen it up.

Level the seed bed in a gentle slope away from the house. This gives better drainage.

Most new lawn failures are due to a lack of nourishment. For full, vigorous development, grass needs a complete plant food. Unfortunately, most soils in cities and towns do not provide all of the needed elements of nourishment in the right proportion.

GARBAGE INCINERATORS

When modernizing a home through the introduction of modern household equipment, many householders give thought to the disposition of the family garbage and of the trash and rubbish which accumulates in even the best regulated homes.

OLD PUBLIC SCHOOL NOW AN APARTMENT

All Building Activity Helps to Relieve the Unemployment Situation.

The demand for three and four room apartments in cities has caused many old buildings to be remodeled and modernized into apartment buildings.

These old buildings, soundly constructed in a workmanlike manner but now obsoleted by the requirements of a new generation, are purchased by investors and reconstructed into useful groups of homes.

Before the carpenters and contractors touched them, these building were of little value, commanding only a slight price on the market. Often the buildings were purchased at a figure that barely covered the value of the ground upon which they stood.

But modernized, they proved to be a sound investment and paid substantial returns in dollars and cents. Their value as producing property leaped to a remarkable extent because they were profit producers.

An Illustration.

Above is an illustration of a building which will soon be the home of four families. Sturdy and upright, the building carries an air of dignity and worth. The white limestone trim relieves the monotony of the brick veneer and conveys a spirit of quiet reserve.

On close inspection, the new apartment house will be found to bear a resemblance to the old school building through the fan-like decorative design in the gable and the outline of the old frame that enclosed the number of the school and the date of its erection, 1891.

New Brick Veneer.

In making over the old school house into an apartment the entrance was transferred to the side of the building. The window arrangement was entirely changed and dormer windows were let into the roof.

Insulating material was used on walls and ceilings and roof to make the building comfortable for the prospective tenants.

Modern plumbing and heating systems were installed. New floors and inside trims and up-to-date interior decorations made the apartments as attractive as any apartments of the type in the city in which they are located.

STOCK WEEK COLORLESS WITH CREDIT ABUNDANT

WEEK-END TRADE IS SMALLEST SINCE 1928

Such Issues as General Electric, American Can, Radio, U. S. Steel and American Smelting Surrender Leadership.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 17.—The stock market was all dressed up with no place to go this week.

Credit was abundant, with call money holding at 3 per cent, and short maturity time loans getting down to that level. Readjustments after the break a fortnight ago appeared to have been completed.

News developments, however, failed to provide a vehicle to carry share prices generally in either direction. Late last March the market set out to scale the peaks all by itself, but after the unpleasant consequences of that adventure, it would prefer now to be carried along by definite business developments.

Trading was at the lowest levels for this time of year in about two years, late in the week. Bears were cautious, as it is an old axiom in Wall street never to sell a dull market short, and bulls were unable to find good excuses for bidding stocks higher.

On the whole, the list showed a firm tone, although a few weak spots were uncovered. The price index of 90 representative shares showed a gain for the week of nearly a point. Several of the utilities made fair progress, and the index for 20 issues of this group rose 3 7-10 points.

Some Investment Demand.

There was also some investment demand for dividend paying rails, reflecting the current low money rates. The index for 20 rail shares, however, gained less than a point, and that for 50 industrials was practically unchanged.

Utilities were moderately stimulated by the offer of United Corporation to acquire a 25 per cent interest in Columbia Gas. Wall street expects several important utility mergers will be announced before the next Congress convenes.

While copper and some other nonferrous metal prices were inclined to rally, continued softness in the market for both finished and unfinished steel, with some descriptions touching the lowest levels since 1915, was a counterbalancing factor, as far as the market was concerned.

Dividends Are Cut.

The market found it still had to contend with unfavorable first quarter earnings reports. Auburn Auto and National Supply declined to new low levels for the year in bear selling following their first quarter statements.

Nor does the market appear to be out of the woods yet in the matter of dividend reductions. The American Locomotive rate of $8 annually was reduced to $4, and reductions in some other dividend rates are still expected. On the other hand, there is talk of increases in the payments on some of the specialty issues.

The weekly brokers loan statement showed a drop of $67,000,000, on top of the previous week's reduction of $200,000,000. More than 25 per cent of the gain in loans from December to April has now been liquidated.

Dull Saturday Session.

The stock exchange all but took a vacation today. There was probably more interest in the Kentucky Derby and a brokers' week-end outing than in trading and the market called it a day after only 790,950 shares had changed hands. It was the smallest volume since August, 1928, and a fitting climax to a colorless week, as well as a sharp contrast to May 3, which set a new high record for Saturday business.

Such stock as General Electric, American Can, U. S. Steel, American Telephone and Radio were extremely dull and surrendered such leadership as there was to the

LOCAL STOCK TRADE QUIET DURING WEEK

Closing Market Generally Higher but Gains for Most Part Are Small — Several Shoe Issues Off.

A light, irregular trade marked the week on the St. Louis Stock Exchange, but final prices were generally net higher. The net gains on the whole were not large. The dullness was similar to that which prevailed on the New York board. Among the stocks to record net gains as result of the week's trading were Key Boiler Equipment, American Investment "B," Coca Cola Bottling, National Candy, Laclede Steel, Moloney Electric "A," and Dr. Pepper Co. Wagner Electric closed unchanged after being up early in week.

Brown Shoe was higher, but International Shoe, Hamilton-Brown and Johnson-Stephens-Shinkle were on the lower side of the market at the finish.

rails, the packing shares and a few specialties in which feeble pool operations were resumed. If the market had a definite trend, it was upward, but in only a limited number of instances did the gains in the active issues run beyond a point or two.

Two or three items in the day's news proved of interest. One of these was the situation in the Santa Fe spring oil field, where efforts to curtail production in accordance with schedule seemed to have struck a snag. The cut in California crude oil prices, an outgrowth of the developments at Santa Fe springs, led to mild unsettlement in the oil shares, but the selling was small.

A 12 per cent gain in the value of planned construction, as measured by S. W. Straus & Co., over the March total was somewhat encouraging. Check payments for the previous week also made a gain, but bank clearings for this week showed a material decline.

In addition to the oils, the amusement, aviation and utility shares met moderate pressure and Warner Brothers Pictures, Radio Keith Orpheum, National Air Transport, United Aircraft and Public Service of New Jersey eased.

Rails Are Bought.

Buying of the rails embraced mostly the dividend payers, New York Central, Atchison, Southern Pacific, Canadian Pacific, Illinois Central and Union Pacific responded with gains of one to two points, while Lehigh Valley spurted 2¾ and Norfolk & Southern rose 4.

American Tobacco shares attracted some support, advancing about 4 points each. Cudahy Packing, Armour of Illinois preferred, Armour of Delaware and Wilson & Co. improved moderately. Miscellaneous strong spots included Vanadium Steel, Canada Dry, Worthington Pump, Rossia Insurance, A. M. Dyers, Columbian Carbon, Manhattan Electrical Supply and Fairbanks Morse, the last named making a new 1930 high.

Commodity prices held steady. Wheat advanced ⅜ to ½ cent. Corn was slightly higher. Cotton improved slightly and sugar was dull.

STANDARD OF CALIFORNIA CUTS CRUDE OIL PRICE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 17.—Petroleum circles were absorbed with renewed price slashing in California and Pennsylvania in further efforts to force curtailment of production.

After several ineffectual efforts to bring all of the smaller Santa Fe Springs producers in California into the agreement to restrict output to 57 per cent of potential, the Standard Oil Co. of California has cut prices for crude 75 to 90 cents a barrel, stating that present conditions do not justify prices which encourage overproduction.

The South Penn Oil Co. announced a further reduction of 25 cents a barrel in the price of Pennsylvania crude, after a similar reduction of May 1. The cut is attributed to excessive production. Prices for Pennsylvania crude, used largely for high-grade lubricants, have been declining since July of last year, and the price now averages about $2.50 a barrel, against $4.10 a year ago.

The new cuts in crude prices are in contrast to firming tendencies in the gasoline markets. Oil circles here are inclined to regard them as due to isolated conditions. There has been no talk of a cut in Mid-continent crude prices, since the upturn after the price-cutting war earlier in the year. In fact, there has been considerable talk of further increases.

WEEKLY COPPER REVIEW

NEW YORK, May 17.—After a good volume of buying in copper had developed at 12½ cents for Electrolytic, the price was advanced to 13 cents delivered in the Connecticut Valley. Toward the close of the week buying tapered off at the new level, after sales for the six days ended Wednesday totaled 196,000 tons, said to be the largest week's business on record. Sales to consumers thus far in May, estimated at 275,000 tons of which the home trade is credited with taking 205,000 tons, are said to have reduced the amount of unsold refined copper to 120,000 tons. A fair volume of foreign buying continues, with demand coming largely from the continent.

The tin market was fairly steady with price fluctuations rather narrow. There was rumor that a contract had been placed for a fair amount of tin for delivery extending up to the end of the year.

Lead was firmer. Recent strength abroad did much to stiffen sellers ideas here. There was a better consuming demand, with the feature the call for prompt shipment.

FINANCIAL NOTES

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 17.—Total melt of 15 United States sugar refiners from Jan. 1 to May 10 was 1,670,000 long tons, against 1,825,000 in the same period of 1929. Deliveries were 1,460,000 long tons, against 1,605,000 in the same period a year ago.

The Porto Rican American Tobacco Co. has proposed to stockholders a plan to change the Class A common from 100,000 shares of $100 par to 500,000 no-par shares. Two no-par shares would be exchanged for each of the present shares. It is also proposed to increase the authorized Class A shares to 500,000 shares from 300,000.

World output of copper in April totaled 143,798 short tons, compared with 148,005 short tons in March, the American Bureau of Metal Statistics reports. The monthly average for the first four months of the year was 146,441 tons, compared to an average of 178,034 for the entire year 1929.

The Albany Perforated Wrapping Paper Co. has offered stockholders of record May 23 rights to subscribe at $10 a share for the Class A participating shares of the American Public Welfare Trust, on the basis of one share for each of stock held. Rights expire June 14.

BUSINESS INDICATOR

WASHINGTON, May 17.—The country's building construction program lost ground sharply during the week ended May 10. In a report filed with the Census Bureau of contracts executed in the region east of the Rocky Mountains the following figures are given for comparable periods:

Week ended May 10, $18,818,000; previous week, $21,041,000; same week last year, $20,199,000.

Record Porto Rican Sugar Crop Estimated.

SAN JUAN, Porto Rico, May 17.—A Department of Agriculture estimate issued by Commissioner Carlos E. Chardon says that Porto Rico's sugar crop, now being harvested, will reach 836,890 tons.

Not only is this the largest crop ever produced but it exceeds by about 100,000 tons the crop estimate of last December at the opening of the season, and is more than 230,000 tons in excess of the last harvest.

Heavy yields of cane as well as high content are the chief factors in the large increase.

Figures compiled by Felix Hilera, secretary of the Sugar Producers' Association, show that about 500,000 tons of sugar had been made by May 1. Because of the large crop many of the centrals will continue grinding through June and some will continue well into July.

ANNOUNCE GROUP BANKING COMBINATIONS NEGOTIATIONS

NEW YORK, May 17.—The firm of Pomeroy & Salmon announced today that negotiations were under way for group banking combinations in Pennsylvania and "several other states," the combined resources of the banks in the separate states to be from $100,000,000 to $500,000,000.

The groups will be under management of member banks. The underwriting will be undertaken by financial groups in New York. The combination in Pennsylvania will center in a company to be known as the Western Pennsylvania Bancorporation, and the underwriting, if the plan is consummated, will be handled by the Belmont banking interests.

"It is purely for the protection of the banks in each state," Pomeroy and Salmon said, "to prevent the encroachment of outside interests and otherwise protect themselves."

It was understood that if the plan went through about 50 Pennsylvania banks would be grouped in one holding company, and similar large numbers of institutions in the other states affected.

BOND PRICES ARE SLIGHTLY IMPROVED

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 17.—Bond prices in the listed market showed a slightly improved tone today. The trend continued mixed but recessions which have been general the past two days were fewer as investment issues gained some firmness.

Sales for the half day session were only $3,500,000, about half the normal volume for a half day. Trading was confined to a small list, the greatest activity being in convertible issues whose tone was slightly irregular. Foreign bonds showed most firmness and some of the leading Government issues gained fractionally.

Chile 6s, Brazil 6s of May '61, the new Japan 5½s, French 7s gained from ¼ to ⅝ of a point.

SMALL NET CHANGES ARE SHOWN IN COTTON MARKET

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 17.—An early decline in cotton in response to lower Liverpool cables than anticipated was followed by a rally today on further rains in the cotton belt states and on a forecast for quite general showers over the entire belt on Sunday. There were slight reactions under profit-taking but at the close shorts were again buyers and final quotations were near the best of the day. July advanced from 16.30c to 16.42c and closed at 16.40c while new October advanced from 14.99c to 15.13c and closed at 15.10c. The general market closed steady at 3 points lower for May and 1 to 6 net higher for the other months. Spot cotton 16.50c.

The opening was steady at a decline of 3 to 10 points under moderate local selling inspired by the easiness in Liverpool but prices failed to show a full response to the decline abroad owing to the overnight reports of further rains. Buying orders appeared in moderate volume from some of the sections in the South which have been complaining of too much rain and there was also more or less trade buying and local covering. May advanced from 16.20c to 16.27c and new December from 15.10c to 15.21c. There appeared to be moderate liquidation in the old crop months and the July premium over the new crop positions was slightly lower.

The weather seemed to be the dominating feature and, while traders were evidently anticipating further May notices during the coming week, more attention was being given to the new crop development although it was admitted that the season is still too early to form any very definite conclusions. Liverpool cables reported prices there being influenced by selling for Bombay accounts as well as local liquidation, while cloth sales were said to have been moderate. The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 75,000 bales against 88,000 last year.

BOND PRICES ARE SLIGHTLY IMPROVED

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 17.—Bond prices in the listed market showed a slightly improved tone today. The trend continued mixed but recessions which have been general the past two days were fewer as investment issues gained some firmness.

Sales for the half day session were only $3,500,000, about half the normal volume for a half day. Trading was confined to a small list, the greatest activity being in convertible issues whose tone was slightly irregular. Foreign bonds showed most firmness and some of the leading Government issues gained fractionally.

Chile 6s, Brazil 6s of May '61, the new Japan 5½s, French 7s gained from ¼ to ¾ of a point.

Railroad bonds did not vary more than half a point. Chicago Great Western 4s and Erie 4s, appreciated slightly. M. K. & T. 5s, Missouri Pacific 5s, Northern Pacific 4s and Southern Railway 4s held steady. St. Paul 5s and San Francisco 4½s dipped fractionally.

In the industrial group, Certainteed 5½s yielded more than two points for a new 1930 low. Silesian 7s climber to 96⅜, the year's peak. United States Governments were quiet and steady.

CURB PRICE CHANGES ARE UNIMPORTANT

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 17.—The curb tape pursued a halting and dilatory course today, printing sales totaling only 366,600 shares, and showing price changes of little consequence. In fact, it was one of the dullest days on the curb market in two years.

Some of the utilities were moderately active, but trends were irregular. United Light A sold up moderately to a new 1930 top at 56, then lost its gain. American Light shares, however, eased in dull trading. American Gas and Electric sold up a couple of points, and Electric Bond and Share lost a point.

A feature of the Natural Gas issues was Lone Star, which sold up more than 3 points, to within about a point of its peak. Appalachian and United Gas were active, but closed unchanged. Oils were dull and failed to make any notable response to the crude price cut in California. Cities Service sold up a fraction in a fair turnover, while Gulf lost ½ point.

Industrials and specialties were inclined to sag, although some of the aviations were firm, including Irving Air Chute and New York, Rio and Buenos Aires. Driver Harris and Deere lost nearly a point. Weak features were Foote Gear and National Tile, both reaching new lows, the latter dropping 7⅝ to 16. National Steel gained more than a point.

New York Sugar.

NEW YORK, May 17.—The raw sugar market was quiet today and no sales were reported, although it developed that late yesterday operators purchased 21,000 bags of Cuban for June shipment and 21,000 bags of Philippines for June arrival at an advance of 1.32c, or or at 3:27 delivered. Local refiners were still inclined to hold off, probably awaiting the outcome of the tariff situation which is expected to be settled on Monday. There were liberal offerings today at 3:27c, with no buying interest.

Opening advances were followed by reactions under realizing and Cuban selling in raw sugar futures, with the market closing 1 point higher for the spot month, but net unchanged to 1 point lower on later deliveries. The fact that refiners failed to show any increased interest, despite the steadier tone discouraged aggressive fresh buying and after opening unchanged to 4 points higher on covering and some buying by houses with European connections offerings increased. At today's best level, the market was 14 to 17 points above the low records of the season of only two days ago, and the upturn had probably weakened the technical position and there was a disposition to even up for over the weekend and await fresh developments. Sales were 30,650 tons. There were no transactions in the No. 2 contracts with closing quotations 1 point higher to 1 net lower. Closing prices: No. 1 May $1.42; July $1.50; Sept. $1.58; Dec. $1.67; Jan. $1.69; March $1.76; May $1.82; No. 2 May $3.22; July $3.38; Sept. $3.47; Dec. $3.58.

The refined market was quiet as far as new business was concerned, with withdrawals were of moderate proportions. Prices were unchanged with refiners quoting $4.90, but second hands availagle around $4.65.

HOG MARKET AT SAME LEVEL AS WEEK AGO

NATIONAL STOCKYARDS, Ill., May 17.—A moderately liberal run of cattle early in the week afforded buyers the opportunity to again hammer values of steers, mixed yearlings and heifers. Another contributing factor to the bearishness was the slow and draggy demand for the dressed product at Eastern consuming centers and a declining price level was the natural result. Some recoverey to live values was brought about before the end of week, however, when supplies became sufficiently curtailed to enable salesmen to score a talking point and stop the recession which has been going on for some time. Vealers were an outstanding bright spot in the trade, these registering advances almost daily. Compared with a week ago, steers and cows closed steady to 25c lower, spots of more on lower grade steers; mixed yearlings and heifers mostly 25c lower, some 50c off; cutters, low cutters and bulls steady; vealers $1 higher; stocker and feeder steers and cows 25c lower; feeding heifers 25c to 50c lower. Tops for week: 825-lb. yearling steers, $12.25; 566-lb. mixed yearlings, $12; 1289-lb. steers, $11.90; 578-lb. heifers, $11.75; cows, $8.75; sausage bulls, $7.75; vealers, $11.50. Heavy steers were entirely absent. A few loads of 1257 to 1289 lb. medium weights cashed at $10.25 to $11.90, while about 10 cars of 1103 to 1161 lb. averages went at $9.50 to $11, bulk $9.85 to $11. Lightweights ranged from $7.75 to $12.25, the majority $8.50 to $10.75, while bulk of all steers registered $8.50 to $11. Most of the fat steers commanded $10.75 to $11.50; fat mixed yearlings and heifers $10 to $11, medium kinds $9 to $9.75; cows largely $6.75 to $7.75; low cutters $4 to $5. Medium bulls wound up with a top of $7.65, while vealers remained at $11.50 for best kinds.

The corresponding week a year ago bulk and top prices were as follows: Steers, $12 to $14, top $14.60; fat mixed yearlings and heifers $13.75 to $14.75, top $15; medium kinds $12.25 to $13.25; cows $9 to $10.75, top $12; low cutters $5.75 to $7; top sausage bulls $9.75 and top vealers $14.50.

Hog Market Unchanged.

Supplie of hogs at National Stock Yards this week approximated 73,800 as compared with actual marketings of 82,218 last week and 74,251 corresponding week last year. The bullish influence of lighter receipts was neutralized by diminished shipping outlet and for the Saturday to Saturday period all weights and grades were practically unchanged. Top price was set at $10.25 the first two days of the week, jumped to $10.30 on Wednesday and dropped back to $10.20 on Thursday and Friday. A nickel advance on Saturday pushed the top back to $10.25 while bulk of 160@240 lb weights cashed at $10.15@10.20. Throughout the entire week packers bought quite freely and general trade was active each day. Weighty butchers were in light supply and sold unevenly, largely because marketings were too scanty to encourage orders. A few 260 to 280 lb. butchers sold late at $9.90@10.10 with occasional lots of extreme heavies down to around $9.75. Most 130@150 lb light lights sold all week at $9.75@10.10 and desirable 100 to 130 lb. slaughter pigs claimed the $9.25@9.75 terms. Packing sows bulked at $9@9.10.

Lamb Prices Down.

Sheep and lamb receipts this week totaled approximately 8000 head as compared with actual arrivals of 7136 last week and 10,347 the corresponding week last year. With a slight increase in receipts and an easier trend in dressed lamb trade, live prices continued the downward course which started at the close of last week. Spring lambs suffered the long end of the decline and prices fell $1@1.50. Clipped lambs dropped 25@50c. Wooled lambs displayed such variety of weight and quality that accurate comparisons were impracticable. Sheep were in light supply and held steady. While odd lots sold early in the week as high as $13, practical top on spring lambs was $12.50 on Monday. On later sessions packers bought most of the good kinds around $11 while choice sorted kinds in odd lots were salable up to $11.50 to city butchers. Medium grade Southwestern springers sold late at $10.25. City butchers paid a top of $9.75 for clipped lambs while shippers paid as high as $9.50 and the packer top was $9.25. Bulk of clippers went to the latter interests at $8.75@9.25. Wooled lambs sold from $9.25@9.75 with two doubles scaling near 100 lbs. at $9.50. Clipped ewes bulked at $4@5.

WEATHER IS BULL FACTOR IN LATE WHEAT TRADE

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 17.—Jack frost chased the wheat market uphill toward the last today, more than overcoming downturns that had followed successive advances during the last four days. Speculative sellers of wheat were put on the run by reports of sub-normal temperatures, snow and sleet in various sections west and northwest. On the resulting late bulge in the market, wheat values touched the highest point which has been attained in several weeks.

Closing quotations on wheat were nervous ⅜-⅝c a bushel higher than yesterday's finish. Corn closed ⅛c to ⅝c up, oats unchanged to ¼c down, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 2c.

Announcement that export purchasing of North American wheat today amounted to 1,000,000 bushels and that the aggregate in the last three days is about 4,000,000 bushels helped the upward swing of prices near the end of the day. Profit-taking at the finish took off some of the edge of the advance, but the market at no time showed any heavy selling pressure except on the extreme upturns. Some early selling, however, which attracted special notice was attributed to foreign sources.

Transient early downturns in wheat prices were given some momentum report that Central Europe crop growth is one to two weeks ahead of last year. There were also unofficial reports from Canada that general moisture conditions in the prairie provinces are showing marked improvement.

Corn prices developed a good deal of strength at times as a result of report of frost, especially in South Dakota and Iowa. Besides, the forecast was for continued cool weather and rains next week.

Many May Weddings In New York Society

NEW YORK, May 17.

WEDDINGS of their friends and the charity affairs they gave for "the other half" took society into another whirl of festivities this week, as the season drew to a close. May weddings have been more numerous than before.

Between times they hurried into the country for a round of golf or a glimpse at the races at Belmont Park, returning to town for small luncheons, teas and charity affairs.

The bride wore a gown of ivory satin modeled on empire lines, one of this spring's most fashionable vogues, made with the low square neck, short sleeves and high waist, reminiscent of the days of Empress Eugenie. The costume was enveloped in the long tulle bridal veil and a shower bouquet of orange blossoms completed the ensemble.

Another recent wedding was that of Miss Alice Bigelow Lee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ivy Lee, and Chandler Cudlipp, which took place in the Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church. The bridal gown was of ivory satin trimmed with rose point lace, while the veil was a combination of rose point and tulle, and the bouquet was of lilies of the valley and white sweet peas.

The matron of honor wore yellow chiffon with a hat to match, and the bridesmaids blue chiffon with sun-tanned hats trimmed in blue velvet. Two small flower girls added a picturesque touch in their old fashioned costumes of ruffled pink chiffon and wide garden hats, carried as basket filled with spring blossoms.

Tuesday afternoon society members gathered for tea in the New York home of Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt, where two floors were used to exhibit handicraft from the Val-Kill Shop in which Mrs. Roosevelt is interested. The Val-Kill industries were originated primarily to provide an opportunity for the boys who work part time on farms in Duchess County to work by hand on fine woods.

A charitable affair for the buttons and desk boys of the merchant marine took place Friday afternoon when a benefit bridge tea was given on board the Pennsylvania. The funds were turned over to the special work of the Young Men's Christian Association which provides trips for boys who arrive at the port with scant funds for their amusement hours on American shores.

A bazar and tea were given at the Ambassador this week in aid of Madonna House. Funds from the sale were turned over to the Madonna House day nursery, kindergarten and fresh air home.

Their bit for charity taken care of, society found some time to its own gaieties, which included several final luncheons and teas before they depart for the summer resorts.

The recent tea which the Marquessa de Belmonte de la Vega Real gave at the Delmonico in honor of Senora Alejandro Padilla, wife of the Spanish Ambassador, was a "black and white" affair, even the costumes of the hostess and guests being of that color scheme.

The Marquessa wore a frock of sheer black chiffon, with a scarf of the same material wrapped loosely about the throat, while her close-fitting black hat was accented by a touch of white. Miss Nina do Belmonte, daughter of the Marquessa, chose a black crepe de chine gown, patterned with tiny white flowers and trimmed with white frills at the sleeves, while Mrs. Adolph Ladenburg completed her black costume with a sable straw chapeau topped with a crown of white flowers.

Thursday society members turned to Belmont Park for the opening of the racing season. Gray skies did not deter the horse lovers from motoring out to the track to spend the day, for nowadays the fashionables possess just as smart clothes for a rainy day as any other. Silk raincoats of rose and blue and green, topped by snug little hats, water-shedding tweeds and chapeaux were the order of the day, and added to the brilliance of the gallery's array.

Many of those who witnessed the races motored back to town early, however, to leave at once for Louisville to attend the Derby at Churchill Downs on Saturday. Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt is among society's members whose stable is represented in the great American classic.

Mrs. Gann a Daily Horse Show Visitor

WASHINGTON, May 17.

SOCIETY was in sporting spirit for four days this week for the horse show. Vice President Curtis, who likes a horse race a little better than anything else in the sports category, was seen at the show with his sister, Mrs. Edward Everett Gann. She attended the show every day, her box occupying the front center of the grand stand with Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson on her right and next to him Mr. and Mrs. Larz Anderson.

With Mrs. Gann the first day were Mrs. William M. Jardine, wife of the former Secretary of Agriculture, and Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose of Kansas City and Washington. She left the grounds with the ceremony usually accorded the wife of the President—officials of the horse show having her car backed down near the steps to avoid a long walk over the uneven ground. This courtesy was shown Mrs. Hoover last season, and Mrs. Coolidge.

The Vice President with his sister and brother-in-law will change residence in June, leaving the Mayflower Hotel for the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gann in Cleveland Park. They plan to reside there at least until late autumn or until Congress reconvenes.

The Hunt ball took place tonight and was opened by Vice President Curtis and Mrs. Gann. The Hunt breakfast followed shortly after midnight.

Within a week society will attend another big sporting ball—the annual polo ball at the Willard, when horses in stalls at one end of the ball room will look out upon the revelers.

Major-General E. E. Booth officially will open the ball. The ball room will be decorated with saddles bridles, crops, mallets and other accessories of the game, while goal posts and other suggestions will transform the ball room into a polo field. Members of the War Department polo team will wear their polo togs.

Diplomats are undecided about plans for the summer months. Courtesy demands they remain at the capital during the residence of the President and his wife at the White House and thus far no announcement has been made of the time the President will leave. It is probable, however, that the British will take their usual residence on the north shore of Massachusetts. Many will go to Newport, while others will select Bluemont and Blue Ridge summit, closer to Washington. Social programs for the spring have not been curtailed, and one of the largest social affairs of the year will be given at the Cuban Embassy by the Ambassador and Mme. Ferrara to celebrate Cuban independence May 20.

LINDENWOOD TO DEDICATE NEW LIBRARY ON MAY 30

Dedication of the new Margaret Leggat Butler Library of Lindenwood College, St. Charles, will take place Friday, May 30, with Prof. A. H. Fairchild of the department of English of the University of Missouri making the dedicatory address. Approximate cost of the building, which was designed by La Beaume and Klein, St. Louis architects, was $200,000.

Situated on the campus just east of Roemer Hall, the building consists of a 54-foot central tower with reading-room wings to either side, a stack room extending to the rear. It is of Tudor Gothic design, harmonizing with other buildings of the campus, and will house a collection of 60,000 volumes.

Space also is included for a college club room, and storage vaults for the archives of the college have been constructed in the basement. The building is named for the late widow of Col. James Guy Butler of St. Louis, one of the noted benefactors of the school.

A fireplace built in the Missouri State Teachers' Association Building at Columbia, Mo., as a memorial to Miss Mary J. Brady, a teacher in the St. Louis public schools for many years, was dedicated yesterday afternoon with exercises in which many of her former associates participated.

The memorial was built by these associates in co-operation with the Primary Council Groups of Missouri and the National Council of Primary Education. Miss Brady was one of the three first primary supervisors in the United States.

One of the features of the dedication program was the reading of poems which Miss Brady had marked during her years as a teacher. These were read by Miss Lillie R. Ernst, assistant superintendent of the St. Louis Public Schools and a close personal friend of Miss Brady. Henry J. Gerling, Superintendent of Schools and for years a co-worker of the teacher, delivered a short address, setting forth his impressions of her character and ability. Mrs. Fannie L. Lachmund of Harris Teachers' College told "How the Memorial Came to Be."

BANKRUPTCY TRUSTEE FOR LOAN FIRM ASKED

Stockholders of Reliable Concern in Court Action to Continue Its Affairs.

The Reliable Loan and Investment Co., which instituted voluntary bankruptcy proceedings May 7, filed in Federal Court yesterday schedules showing assets of $322,422 and debts of $133,749.

At the same time a suit seeking dismissal of the bankruptcy action, on the ground it was brought fraudulently to defeat the jurisdiction of the Circuit Court in a receivership suit by certain stockholders, was filed by Joseph Boxerman, representing the stockholders.

The stockholders' suit alleges that directors and officers of the company have agreed that Jacob A. Bialack, secretary, should be appointed trustee in bankruptcy and that Bialack, in turn, has agreed with Louis Goldberg, president ,to conduct the affairs of the company in the same manner as has been done heretofore.

The suit for receivership and an accounting had been filed by Boxerman in Circuit Court prior to the bankruptcy action. Mismanagement was charged.

At the time the bankruptcy petition was filed, directors of the company stated that, as there were not sufficient liquid assets to meet demand notes of $130,000, it was deemed advisable to seek liquidation through the bankruptcy court. The listed assets include real estate valued at $118,367 and bills, notes and securities of $200,460. The largest claim is that of J. Goodman, Leadwood, Mo., for $115,000.

The company, capitalized at $200,000 under the Missouri loan and investment law, has been in business 10 years. Its offices are at 909 Pine street.

PROF. REED BETTER; RESUMES WORK ON CITY-COUNTY UNION

Leaves St. Mary's Hospital but Still Is Confined to Hotel Room.

Thomas H. Reed, consultant of the City and County Metropolitan Development Committee and professor of political science at the University of Michigan, has resumed his work on the proposed consolidation of St. Louis and St. Louis County following a serious illness.

Suffering from a gastric ulcer hemorrhage, he was taken ill the night of April 26 when about to address a meeting of county officials in University City. Three blood transfusions were made at St. Mary's Hospital, but an operation proved unnecessary. Reed left the hospital Thursday, but is confined still to a room at Hotel Statler. He is working with others on the draft of the proposed constitutional amendment to enable a vote on the merger.

Reed has been giving a course at Harvard this semester and coming to St. Louis every fortnight.

Ancient Roman Counterfeiters.

TREVES, Prussia, May 17.—Money forging was a flourishing business among the ancient Romans, judging from finds here of tools and matrices for the coining of denarii. Excavations brought to light a great many matrices and castings made of bronze which were used to manufacture these silver coins. Proof that these implements, dating back to between 260 and 300 A. D., were tools of money forgers, is established by the fact that there was then no official mint at Treves.

STOCKARD CHECKS UP ON YOUNG'S SALESMEN

Says They Must Make "Proper Showing" to Be Relicensed by Him.

JEFFERSON CITY, May 17.—Former stock salesmen for the defunct firm of W. H. Young & Bros., Inc., of St. Louis, whose high-pressure operations were terminated last March by court action taken by stock purchasers, must make an extra good showing before they will be relicensed as stock salesmen, under a policy adopted by the State Securities Department.

Since the collapse of the firm last March, with liabilities now placed at $2,368,322, several inquiries had been received by Securities Commissioner F. T. Stockard, he said today, from brokerage firms and the salesmen themselves, as to whether former members of the Young staff would be relicensed.

Stockard said he informed the brokerage firms making the inquiries that such salesmen would be relicensed, if they could make a proper showing, but added that he had advised the firms that they must vouch for the applicants, after a thorough investigation.

The Commissioner said he had told two or three former Young salesmen that he would not relicense them to sell stock for other firms, but declined to disclose their names. He said his theory in connection with these salesmen was that if they had been illegally selling Young Bros. preferred stock, with knowledge that it had not been registered as required by law, they had been parties to illegal transactions.

As has been told, Young Bros. sold $1,307,000 of their own preferred stock. A considerable part of this was sold in Missouri, where it had not been registered, and such sales in this State were contrary to law. Commissioner Stockard has admitted that he was "talked out" of issuing a cease and desist order against the firm last October, after threatening to do so, because of its illegal sales of unregistered stock.

After talking the commissioner out of the threatened order, which was the only known gesture of the department against Young Bros., despite repeated requests of the St. Louis Better Business Bureau for an examination of the firm, the Youngs continued their stock selling. Attorneys for creditors charge that in the ensuing five months stock purchasers paid approximately $500,000 for stocks which were not delivered, and for which no stock certificates or cash equivalent have been found in the company treasury.

Stockard said four of the former Young Bros. salesmen had been relicensed to sell stock for other firms, but declined to make public their names, with one exception. The salesman he named as having been relicensed is M. L. Barrett of St. Louis, who, Stockard said, is a brother-in-law of an officer of the St. Louis Better Bureau. Stockard said Barrett's application was held up temporarily but a license was issued after he produced numerous recommendations.

"I will license the Youngs' men if they make the proper showing," Stockard said, "but it will have to be a pretty good showing."

Whenever a stock salesman leaves a brokerage firm to be employed by another firm, he must be relicensed.

Enjoins Sale of F. C. Young's Home to Satisfy Mortgage.

An injunction forbidding the sale by foreclosure of Fred C. Young's $75,000 home on Clayton road, west of Ballas road, was issued by Federal Judge Faris yesterday on the application of F. E. Williams, receiver for the bankrupt brokerage firm of W. H. Young & Bros., Inc., of which Young was vice president.

The home, mortgaged for $65,000, had been advertised for sale at Clayton Courthouse next Saturday under a $30,000 fourth deed of trust. Receiver Williams seeks possession on the ground that the home was purchased with the company's money. The equity value, deducting the mortgages, is estimated at $10,000.

INQUEST IN DEATH OF BABY AFTER FUMIGATION OF HOUSE

Hearing Opened and Then Postponed Pending Examination of Viscera.

An inquest in the case of Jacqueline Schaeffer, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Schaeffer, 4032 Shreve avenue, who was found dead Friday following the fumigation of the house, was continued yesterday until Tuesday, pending an examination of the viscera by the Gradwohl Biological Laboratories to determine if fumes from a preparation of hydrocyanic acid had caused death.

When the inquest was opened, Schaeffer testified the house was fumigated Thursday, the family being instructed not to return until 2 p. m. Mrs. Schaeffer and the child entered at 10:30 p. m. after the house had been aired. An hour later the baby was taken to a physician for relief of a coughing spell, returned home and again was taken to the doctor at 4 a. m. Schaeffer and his wife suffered irritation of the eyes and throat.

Feed Them Right and How They Grow

Two years ago the lad was two inches under average height for his age—and even ten pounds under weight for his height. But now he's up to normal in height and even a few pounds over average in weight. How did this boy make this astonishing progress?

Just one simple change accomplished the whole thing. Instead of urging him to drink a glass of raw milk two or three times a day mother added two teaspoonfuls of Thompson's Chocolate Malted Milk to the raw milk. After that he needed no urging.

The added food value in Thompson's gave this boy the extra nourishment he needed to grow at the proper rate. Sturdier bones and stronger muscles came naturally. His stomach very easily handled the additional food in this form, because Thompson's "Double Malted" process makes the most quickly digestible food.

Serve it at Home

Thompson's now prepare a special "Double Malted" Malted Milk already mixed with powdered chocolate to serve at home in a jiffy. Two teaspoonfuls in a glass of milk—a little shaking—that's all. Your druggist or grocer will be glad to deliver right now, today, the one pound can of this new Thompson's Chocolate "Double Malted". Order it now.

Give it to your children for luncheon. It's so delicious it will make them eager for that best of all foods—milk. And it will do wonders for their health because Thompson's adds 76% to the food value of milk. 'Phone your druggist or grocer now.

Quality of Broadcasts To Be High All Summer

Assurances Are Given That Chains and All Larger Stations Will Not Permit Any Let-Down in Programs — Brightest Radio Stars to Continue on Air During Warm Weather.

By MARTIN CODEL.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 17. — Broadcasting enters the summer with assurances that the chains and the major stations throughout the country will not permit any let-down in the quality of their programs.

In fact, the radio impresarios insist that broadcasting no longer knows any seasonal variations, although the fact remains that the radio audience becomes smaller in the summer, while static becomes more acute, especially for distant reception. The radio audience will be retained to some extent by the increasing use of speaker systems at picnic and camping grounds and the growth in the summer of automobile radios.

Summer vacations will take some radio stars away from the studios, but such stars as Amos 'n' Andy and Rudy Vallee will continue on the air at their usual hours. Will Rogers' contract holds for at least two months more, and Columbia now has Chic Sale signed for a series of broadcasts. Few, if any, of the sponsors drop or curtail their programs during the summer, although the Atwater Kent hour is annually cut from one hour to one-half for the warm weather.

Emphasis is laid on the lighter types of programs during the summer months. There will be plenty of dance music for the stay-at-homes and the summer vacationists. Politics will command many hours of radio time, for the campaigns for seats in Congress and for state and local offices have already gotten under way and radio will be employed until the elections in November. The big news events will be covered by the chain announcers as usual. This aspect of network broadcasting has become institutionalized with the appointment of special "news editors" by the chains for the handling of current news broadcasts.

William S. Paley, president of the Columbia System, plans to go to Europe this summer and will negotiate with European broadcasting systems for more international exchanges of programs.

M. H. Aylesworth, president of the National Broadcasting Co., who visited Europe for the same purpose last year, will remain at his desk this summer.

Now that the National Broadcasting Co. is a 100 per cent subsidiary of the Radio Corporation of America, significance may attach to the proposed European visit in July of David Sarnoff, president of the R. C. A.

The R. C. A. is negotiating to acquire Columbia Gramophone, Ltd., a British concern. If these negotiations are carried out, another big amusement unit may be added to the "family fold." Just as the National Broadcasting Co. benefited in acquiring rights to many stars by the merger of the Victor Talking Machine Co. with the R. C. A. last year, so the Columbia Gramophone deal may bring additional broadcasting and recording artists under its wings. Columbia Gramophone is in no way related to the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Rumors of a merger of the two big chains are unfounded. They are vigorous competitors, and there is every indication that they will continue so.

Faust, Charles Wiggins, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. A. Vesper, Mrs. Alexander N. DeMenil, Mrs. Thomas G. Ratcliffe and Mrs. M. A. Goldstein, all of St. Louis; and Mayor and Mrs. Albert I. Famous Pianist Plays Over KSD Tomorrow Night

Ossip Gabrilowitsch, Soloist in Air Recital—Other Radio Events of Week.

A speech by U. S. Senator William E. Borah, delivered at a session of the annual convention of the Advertising Federation of America at Washington, will be broadcast by the NBC at 1:30 tomorrow afternoon, probably over KWK, and also over the CBS chain.

Oliver Smith, the St. Louis tenor who sang for so many months with the A. & P. Gypsies and since has been on a number of broadcast programs, is to sing with Vaughn de Leath in the Firestone concert over KSD at 6 o'clock tomorrow night.

Ossip Gabrilowitsch, internationally known pianist, who is conductor of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, is to play five piano pieces during the General Motors concert at 7:30 tomorrow night over KSD. His program is announced to include Chopin's Nocturne in D-flat and Waltz in A-flat, the Gluck-Brahms Gavotte in A-major, Schubert's "Moment Musicale" and the Brahms Rhapsody in E-flat.

Mme. Metzelthin, a Baltimorean who has studied medicine and lectured in the universities of France and Germany, is to speak in a Women's Radio Institute broadcast over KSD at 9:35 Tuesday morning. She will tell the part that Vitamin D plays in health and how sunshine or the ultra violet rays create it in the body. She will give five rules for taking sun baths and tell how to use the artificial violet rays.

Baby Rose Marie, 5-year-old prodigy of radio, vaudeville and motion pictures, will be featured in a Pure Oil program Tuesday evening at 6 o'clock, over KWK. She will appear with the orchestra under Vincent Lopez. She has to her credit a six-months' vaudeville tour and a contract with the National Broadcasting Co. Her favorite type of song is the "blues" variety, with ballads as second choice.

Sophie Braslau, justly famous contralto, is to sing in a Libby concert over KWK at 6:30 Tuesday evening. She has programmed songs by Tschaikowsky and Rachmaninoff.

An Eveready broadcast at 7 o'clock Tuesday night over KSD will depict episodes in the life of Antonin Dvorak, the Czech composer of "The New World Symphony," who for several years lived in this country. Of all great composers Dvorak was perhaps least the scholar. To him music was but sweet sounds, and a symphony was but something into which he could pour the songs of his people and ours.

Secretary of Labor James J. Davis is to speak in a broadcast from the convention of the Advertising Federation of America at 12:30 Wednesday, over the NBC Blue chain and the CBS net.

KSTP, the big St. Paul station, is to furnish the artists and entertainers for the Evening Stars program at 1:30 Wednesday afternoon over KSD.

An elaborate program to welcome WPG, Atlantic City, into the Columbia System is to be broadcast over the CBS chain at 8 p. m. Wednesday night.

Old Spanish Trail Provides Picturesque Tour Route

It Is Growing in Popularity with Motorists of Middle West—One of Most Scenic and Historic Highways in United States, Yet Little Traveled Heretofore.

By JAMES P. WELSH.

THE Middle West has found a new touring paradise and motorists from Missouri and Kansas, Indiana and Iowa are traveling a section of the country they hardly knew existed. All because the Old Spanish Trail—U. S. Route 90—has in the past year grown in popularity among Middle Westerners to a great degree. Hundreds of cars from this section daily are exploring the charms of one of America's most picturesque areas and the travelers are encountering spots whose historic appeal can scarcely be described verbally.

For Old Spanish Trail— 2743 miles of it from St. Augustine, Fla., on the east to San Diego, Cal., on the west—is the path over which breast-plated conquistadores tramped westward in search of gold and glory, over which cowled monks moved on their Christian pilgrimages. It is a stretch bathed in the blood of the daring, over which five flags have flown.

From one end to another the trail is of breath-taking beauty. There is the savannah country of Florida, the lowlands along the Mississippi Gulf Coast, the ancient charm of New Orleans, the rice-producing areas of Louisiana, the somnolent Teche country in which the Acadians found refuge, the ever-intriguing desert, the mountains of West Texas and the swing along the Pacific and the glories of Southern California.

Start at St. Augustine.

From now until the middle of June Old Spanish Trail is a mecca for motorists and those who travel it will find joys never dreamed of in the national parks along more northerly trails.

We will start at St. Augustine and pick up momentum as we go. All main highways into the south are in better condition than ever, due to the realization of the various states that tourist travel means dollars and cents. The motorist may travel southward over whatever trunk road is nearest and strike the trail at any of a half dozen points. He may reach the transcontinental route at Jacksonville, Mobile, New Orleans or San Antonio. The history of the country traversed by the trail is not easily gathered, for many of the records are in Spanish and much of the legend has been handed down to succeeding generations by word of mouth, leaving the seeker for information without written chronicles to guide him.

St. Augustine, or San Augustin, was settled in 1565, the oldest town in the United States. Ponce de Leon sighted Florida in 1512, the De Narvaez expedition landed at Tampa Bay in 1528 and in 1539 De Soto joined the ranks of the explorers. De Narvaez and De Soto fought their way westward over what is now the Spanish Trail to the Tallahassee country, where De Narvaez turned south to escape by sea and De Soto turned northward to wander through the south and west.

Pay Visit to Wishing Well.

St. Augustine is the first of five great centers of missions and colonizations along the Old Spanish Trail. The others are San Antonio, El Paso-Santa Fe, Tucson-Nogales and San Diego. There are records of 38 missions established out of St. Augustine.

We have seen the oldest house in America, built in 1571, and we have made our wish at the famous Wishing Well. Now we are off through the eastern coastal section of the United States, a section of palmetto-studded country little changed by man save in the urban centers. Palmettos and palms, oaks and pine line the road. Hibiscus and bougainvillea flame out, and along the roadside are miles of wild primroses and Cherokee roses. Here and there little waterways wind their way to the sea and we even see an occasional alligator sunning himself within a stone's throw of the highway.

Into Jacksonville we roll and on through Tallahassee and Chattahoochee, Marianne and DeFuniak Springs into Pensacola. Here we find more color and romance, for it was here that De Lune landed in 1599 with the greatest force that ever attempted the conquest of Florida. Indian enmity and bloody disasters in time forced De Luna to flee the peninsula, but not before he had written brilliant pages into the history of the new world.

Through the pinelands of Northwestern Florida we roll and across the great Cochran Bridge over the Mobile and Tombigbee Rivers into Mobile. Once more we encounter romance and charm, for five flags have rippled over this age-softened city.

Mobile was founded by the French in 1711 and Fort Louis de la Mobile was built on the spot where the city hall now stands. In the very heart of the town stands a huge granite cross in honor of Sieur de Bienville, who founded Mauvila, Spanish form of the name.

Pass Along "American Riviera."

Next day we are off bright and early for the swing through the great potato and Satsuma orange area of Alabama to the Gulf Coast, "America's Riviera." Along this coast is where visitors find all-year golf, fishing, swimming and boating.

Through Grand Bay and Pascagoula we roll, through Ocean Springs and into Biloxi, the first French settlement in Old Louisiana, founded in 1699, two years before Mobile. It was here the French made their headquarters while they sought to subdue the Indians, whose friendship ultimately was won. On the shores of beautiful Back Bay of Biloxi stands a towering, rustic cross marking the spot where D'Iberville landed.

Touring Bureau Makes Highway Maps Available

A FIFTY-PAGE auto trails atlas of the United States and Eastern Canada, showing the conditions and numbers of the highways and the mileage between towns, is being distributed by the Post-Dispatch Resort and Travel Bureau. The price is 50 cents and 60 cents, if mailed.

St. Louis and vicinity maps show all towns, roads, rivers, streams and lakes within a radium of 50 miles of St. Louis. They sell for 20 cents, 24 cents mailed. Individual State maps are 10 cents and 12 cents mailed. These are full-size, but fold together compactly.

City guides giving the location of streets and street car and bus lines, churches, hospitals, theaters, office buildings and containing a map of the city, cost 25 and 30 cents.

Maps of St. Louis and the suburbs, showing the streets of St. Louis, East St. Louis, Madison, Venice, Clayton, Ferguson, Kirkwood, Webster Groves and University City, sell for 40 and 45 cents.

On we drive, through Gulfport and Pass Christian—it was here that President Wilson found relief from world problems during his administration—and into the rolling pinelands of Western Mississippi and the near-tropical country of Eastern Louisiana. Across Heney Island, a four-mile stretch of highway along which alligators and turtles sun themselves, and where one can sight scurrying foxes and opossums, and we come to the great Pontchartrain Bridge, a five-mile ribbon of concrete across the lake of the same name.

With our speedometer registering 652 miles, we come into New Orleans on historic Canal street.

New Orleans a City of Legend.

A day or a week even might well be spent in exploring the charms of this ancient city, but suffice to say that this old city is surrounded with a picturesque atmosphere that is perhaps unrivaled in the entire country. Here it was that Jean and Pierre Lafitte and their swashbuckling band of pirates made merry. Here it is that Dominique You, Lafitte henchman, sleeps in one of the ancient cemeteries, a Masonic square and compass engraven on his tomb.

Here is sleepy Bayou Barataria, beside which, the natives will tell you, sleep John Paul Jones and Napoleon Bonaparte, the Lafittes and, possibly, John Morgan.

Napoleon does not rest in Des Invalides in Paris, the old-timers will say, nor does John Paul Jones at Annapolis. Mention either of these facts and you will receive a surprised and pained look.

Somehow you will find yourself almost persuaded that the rust-eaten little hand-wrought crosses beside the stream do mark the graves of these two notables.

We now head west through the "sugar bowl of America" and through the world's largest shrimp and oyster section. We arrive at Morgan City, on the shore of Berwick Bay. A ferry carries us across and there, stretching along the white-shell highway is Bayou Teche, silvery in the sunlight and winding in the manner of the snake for which it was named.

Scene of Refuge of Acadians.

Bayou Teche is the stream up which the Acadians, fleeing British oppression in Nova Scotia, sent their flat-bottomed boats in 1755, and it was at St. Martinville, then St. Mar, that the original of Longfellow's Evangeline lived, loved and was buried. Beside the little Catholic Church rest the ashes of Emmeline Labiche, whose life story furnished the material for this deathless poem. In real life, there was no happy meeting of the lovers, but poetry is poetry!

We are now in the great rice-producing section, Rayne, Crowley, Menmentau and Welsh and Lake Charles. As far as the eye can see are miles and miles of ricelands flooded with water pumped from the bayous and canals.

We pass over the three-mile bridge across the Sabine River and we are in Texas. The Sabine area is one of the great oil-producing districts and we are about to enter the fruit and vegetable sections. Next to Louisiana, Texas is probably more colorful historically than any other state along the Old Spanish Trail.

At Houston our trip meter reads 1052 miles and we are in a town of rare charm, the old contrasting with the new. San Jacinto battlefield is here, where Sam Houston and his followers destroyed Santa Ana and his army won Texas freedom from the Spanish yoke.

On and on we drive, over concrete and smoothly graveled roads, through Sugar Land, Rosenberg and Eagle Lake into Columbus, which might well be called the "city of oaks," because of the ancient liveoaks which grow in profusion. Under one of these trees the first District Court in Texas held forth.

On into San Antonio we travel, with the mile register at 1270. Here is the historic Alamo, one the Mission of San Antonio de Valero. Here also is the ancient Mission

Trip Through Illinois Over Slab May Be Made in Day

From East St. Louis the Route Is South by Way of Cape Girardeau, and Return Journey May Be Made Through Southeastern Missouri, Ferrying Mississippi at Chester, Ill.

AN interesting tour of Southern Illinois and Southeastern Missouri, traversing four strips of paving on the Illinois side, opened late last fall, crossing the Mississippi by bridge at Cape Girardeau and by ferry at Chester, Ill., can be made in a day or, at most, a day and a half.

Leaving St. Louis the suggested route is over the Municipal Bridge, terminating in Tenth street, East St. Louis; three blocks north on Tenth to Bond avenue, turning right into that avenue, which leads out to the highway through Centerville Station to Belleville; following the Route 12 markings through that town and on to Mascoutah. Between Belleville and Mascoutah a short side trip can be made over concrete to Scott Field, the huge hangar and signal towers of which are visible from No. 12.

At Mascoutah turn right into the newly opened Route 150 for a run of 22 miles to connect with Route 13 at the edge of Marissa. On this stretch the traffic is light and, if speed is an object, it is necessary to slow down only once, in passing through the village of Fayetteville, on the bank of the tree-fringed Okaw, which is crossed at that point on a rebuilt bridge. The road skirts St. Libory and Darmstadt, quiet and quaint villages like Fayetteville, but there is a spur of pavement, less than a mile, to each, and it is worth while to turn aside and visit them. St. Libory with the clock chimes in the tower of its old Catholic Church and Darmstadt in the throes of what is expected to be an oil boom. All three are very old villages that were important before the railroads came through Mascoutah and Marissa, taking away the trade. St. Libory was a recruiting station during the Civil War.

Follow No. 13 Three Miles.

Route 13, on which traffic is heavy, need be followed only three miles, to the junction with No. 152, near Tilden, although if preferred it can be followed six miles south to Sparta and another 19 miles to Pinckneyville. Between six and seven miles are saved, however, by turning into No. 152 at the junction and going through Tilden and Couletrville and skirting Swanwick and Winkle to Pinckneyville, and there is the additional advantage that traffic is light over this recently opened strip.

The marked route through Pinckneyville turns right at the courthouse. At the far edge of town, approaching the railroad track, the pavement ends abruptly and caution is needed to avoid running past the detour, which is narrow and not visible for any distance. The detour crosses the railroad a little further on, and connects again with the paving.

Through Pinckneyville and for six miles beyond, Routes 13 and 152 are merged. At Pyatt they separate, 152 turning off to Duquoin and 13 continuing through Matthews, Vergennes and Hallidayboro to Murphysboro, which is 23 miles from Pinckneyville.

Route 13 passes through the center of Murpysboro turning left after passing the courthouse, turning right a few blocks further and passing out of town through a depressed roadway under railroad tracks and over the Big Muddy bridge. The eight miles to Carbondale afford a foretaste of the scenic undulations that become more pronounced on the southward journey.

In the center of Carbondale, where there is a stop-go signal, a turn is made to the right into Route 51 (U. S. Highway 2), which is followed, with a jog right past the Southern Illinois Normal College, on toward Cobden and Anna. The route is through the great apple and peach belt of Southern Illinois. The trees are bare now, but even so the miles of orderly orchards, rows on rows to the horizon, enhance the attractiveness of the scene. At intervals there are roadside markets offering the fruits of the orchard. The road is mostly hills and curves, which militate against speed, but offer abundant scenic compensation for any time that may be lost.

Side Trip to Giant Park.

Eight miles south of Carbondale, if there is time, a short side trip can be made by turning right at a marked intersection, through Makansas to Giant City Park, which abounds in impressive rock formations, but it is a rough road and

Traveling on a rigid schedule, calling for definite appearances each day and night, a representative of the Elks-Viking prosperity tour passed through Missouri last week-end, stopping over in St. Louis Monday. W. B. Hart was the driver of the Viking car. He was accompanied by Victor Lazo, representing the Elks Magazine.

Hart presented a letter from President Hoover, urging St. Louis Elks to join the movement to reduce unemployment, to Mayor Miller, who is a member of the local Elks lodge. A. L. Schweitzer, Fred Gehner and Charles J. Dolan, Elks members, took part in the presentation which was made on the steps of the City Hall. Following this, the Viking tour car, attractively decorated in the Elks colors of purple and white, was escorted by nine Viking Sedans on a tour of East St. Louis and other cities across the river.

With three other cars, traveling separate routes, Hart is on his way to Atlantic City, N. J., where the Elks convention will open July 6.

While in the St. Louis district, Hart was accompanied by A. C. Williams, local zone manager of the Olds Motor Works, and other zone officials.

Battery Clamp Said To Reduce Corrosion Invented in St. Louis

A battery post terminal clamp which is said to eliminate acid corrosion and to be easier adjusting, has been patented by George W. Hebbeler, 4114 North Kingshighway boulevard, a mechanic.

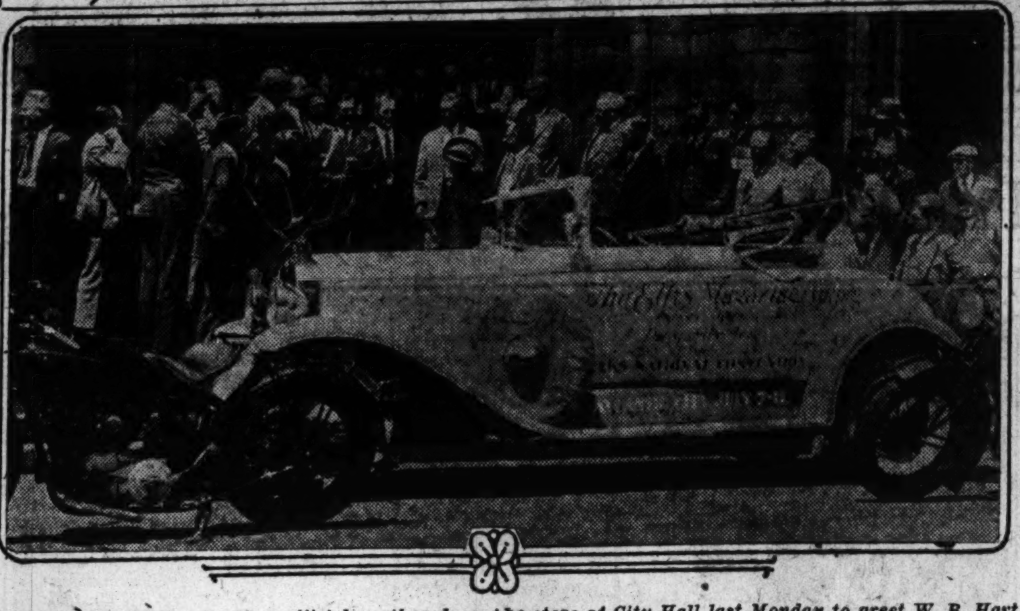
According to Hebbeler, the terminal fitting has been in use continuously on two Chevrolet cars and found to be successful. One car, fitted with the battery clamp, was driven for 10 months and the other for 15 months, at the end of which periods the terminals were found not to have been corroded.

The clamp is completely protected by a rubber composition cover from hydrogen gas, which causes the corrosion. A patented device also provides easier adjustment to the battery terminal post, it is said.

Dirtiest Parts First.

Because the hood and fenders usually are the parts of the car covered with the deepest traffic film, the motorist should tackle them first when cleaning the car.

City Officials Welcome Elks' Continental Tour Car



MAYOR MILLER and other officials gathered on the steps of City Hall last Monday to greet W. B. Hart, driver of the Elks-Viking tour car, who is on his way to Atlantic City, N. J., for the annual Elks' convention in July. The Mayor was given a letter from President Hoover.

THE factory branch of the General Motors Truck Co., 2640 Washington boulevard, has just delivered one of its 1930 model T-42 chassis and cab to the St. Louis Gasoline and Fuel Co., 4159 North Union boulevard, distributer of Continental oils and gasoline. The tank has a capacity of 825 gallons in three compartments. The truck will be used to deliver gasoline to filling stations in Greater St. Louis.

Coast-to-Coast Highway Planned.

The Government of Mexico has plans for a coast-to-coast highway from Matamoros on the Gulf Coast to Mazatlan on the Pacific. The vast project will require three years to build, and cost 10,000,000 pesos, or about $5,000,000.

Week-End Automobile Trip Through Southern Illinois and Missouri

the hills are steep and it might better be reserved for a special visit at another time.

Makonsa Hill, on the paved road, is probably the longest and steepest down-and-up passage in Illinois, but it is not as appalling as it looks from the top, and, with the momentum gained in the descent, the opposite ascent is made without difficulty.

In fair weather, when dirt roads are good, a side trip should be made to Alto Pass, four miles from the pavement, for the sake of the magnificent views from the ridges that the road follows. Instead of returning to the paved highway by the same route, another road, affording even better views, may be taken, picking up the paved road again at Cobden, and on to Anna, five miles further.

At Anna, a turn is made to the right, crossing the railroad and proceeding to the sister city of Jonesboro, adjoining. The road from Jonesboro, through Reynoldsville and McClure, 20 miles, to the new Cape Girardeau bridge, is surfaced with gravel and, since the opening of the bridges, has been well maintained, and is in better condition this winter than ever before. In addition to the maintenance, an improvement on a considerable scale has been made where the road emerges from the hills above Ubedam Hollow. The road has been straightened so as to eliminate two troublesome creek crossings and a bridge has been put in at another crossing. It is expected that the road will be well maintained at all seasons until the paving of Route 146 from Jonesboro through Ware to the bridge is completed. The slab has been laid from the bridge five miles to McClure, but is not yet open for use.

After crossing the bridge, the way is straight ahead several blocks to Route 61, into which a right turn is made. A little more than half the distance of 10 miles to Jackson is paved. The remainder is gravel.

Jackson to Perryville, 25 Miles.

From Jackson to Perryville, through Fruitland, Uniontown and Longtown, 25 miles, is over Route 25, fully improved with gravel to within four miles of Perryville. For the remaining four miles the road is narrow, but well maintained.

From Perryville to Claraville, Route 51 is followed. Between Perryville and Sereno the road is under construction with gravel and there is a detour of five miles over dirt roads that are narrow and hilly and crooked, but well maintained and carefully marked for turns and hazards. Out of Sereno the gravel improvement has been completed. There is a steep hill and a winding road into McBride, where the hills are left. On the way to Claraville there is a short stretch of concrete and the remainder of the way is gravel.

Claraville is opposite Chester, which sits on a high hill and presents a picture of increasing attractiveness as the river is approached. The crossing is quickly made by a new ferry.

The same road can be followed six miles further along the river bank to Fort Gage and Garrison Hill Cemetery, rich in pioneer associations, which are now embraced within a state park.

Returning to "lower town," which occupies the narrow strip between the hill and the river, the top of the hill is reached by a winding road that is both long and steep, but which is negotiated without difficulty.

Leaving Chester on Route 3, the concrete road traverses for a few miles the ridge above the river, from which at one point a fine view of the river and Kaskaskia Island can be obtained. The road passes through Ellis Grove, Evansville, where the Kaskaskia is crossed on a new bridge, and Ruma, to Red Bud. From Red Bud to St. Louis there is a choice of routes, continuing on No. 3 through Waterloo, Columbia and Dupo to the east end of the Municipal Bridge, or taking the recently opened route through Hecker and Smithton to Belleville, completing the tour from Belleville to St. Louis either over State street through Edgemont or over the old St. Louis road through Centerville Station, both of which lead to the Municipal Bridge.

Points to Danger Of Blowouts When Going at High Speed

The danger of having a blowout when an automobile is traveling at 60 or even 40 miles an hour is pointed out by Charles K. Matthews of the General Tire Co., 3400 Washington boulevard.

"If the driver happens to be going 60, he is traveling at the rate of 88 feet a second and has one forty-fourth of a second in which to think and act," Matthews declared. "When a tire blows out the best he can hope for is an open road with no ditch to stop him when he leaves the highway."

According to Matthews, severe tests have proven that General blowout-proof dual balloon tires will not blow out under any circumstance.

Double-Deck Type Of Trailer Carries New Oakland Cars

A new double-deck type of trailer truck, recently introduced by the Oakland Motor Car Co. to carry automobiles from factory to dealer, has a capacity of six cars, of which three are raised to their "upper berths" by an ingenious built-in elevator.

The elevator is provided by the rear third of the second deck, which moves vertically in steel guides. Two double-flanged tracks provide a skeleton ramp up which cars are run nuder their own power to the lowered elevator. It then is raised by steel cables extending back from a hydraulic unit actuated by a pump connected with the motor. After carrying up the third car, the elevator is locked by big steel plungers and three additional cars are loaded on the lower deck. All are chained securely in position.

Roads Avoid Big Towns.

Many States in the Union are engaged in building by-pass roads around cities and congested villages to prevent the congestion of traffic. These by-pass roads are really belt lines which intersect all roads entering such cities or villages and afford the motorist relief from traffic jams. The question of diverting traffic from cities and villages is becoming increasingly serious.

Arthur Hammerstein Buys First Ruxton Off Production Line

Impresario Informs Moon Co. He Is Pleased With Its Performance.

Arthur Hammerstein, noted stage and screen producer of Los Angles and New York, has purchased the first Ruxton front-wheel-drive car off the production line, it is announced by Helm Walker, vice president in charge of sales of the Moon Motor Car Co.

Hammerstein, who shortly intends to desert the stage production activities in favor of the screen, purchased the Ruxton for his wife, Dorothy Dalton, the former screen actress. In a recent letter to the Moon company, Hammerstein remarked: "If this car keeps up performing as it has to date, nothing can stop its progress; in fact I predict that within five years there will be only one kind of driving mechanism and that will be from the front."

The car, a standard sport roadster, was delivered to Hammerstein in Hollywood where he recently completed his first United Artists production, "Bride 66."

Known as "America's first front-wheel-drive motor car, the Ruxton is being manufactured in the St. Louis plant of the Moon company. Following the recent reorganization of the Moon personnel, and the extensive development of a national sales distributing system, the Ruxton is expected to be introduced to the motoring public throughout the country within the next four weeks.

The first public showing of the Ruxton was at the local auto show in February.

The High Regard of Oldsmobile Owners

There are many factors which contribute to the splendid success which Oldsmobile has achieved, but no one of these bulks so large in importance—or holds more respect in the Oldsmobile organization—than the high regard of owners.

So real is this regard—and so deep-seated is the satisfaction which Oldsmobile owners enjoy—that they speak of their Oldsmobiles with unmistakable pleasure whenever the discussion turns to motor cars.

This widespread good opinion has been demonstrated over and over again in the reasons which new owners give for their decision in favor of Oldsmobile. Almost invariably the experiences and recommendations of friends and neighbors play an important part. It is certain that such loyalty must be well-founded. Only outstanding merit, thorough-going capability, and month-after-month dependability can earn the high regard so consistently enjoyed by Oldsmobile.

If you would test the depth of this satisfaction for yourself, make inquiries among your friends. Ask your own neighbors who drive Oldsmobiles what they think of their cars.

Then, when you have heard their expressions, come in and drive the car. Measure it by your own standards. Prove to your personal satisfaction that the high regard of Oldsmobile owners is justly deserved.

Moon Co. Increases Production to Fill Orders for 225 Cars

Distributers of Windsor cars throughout the country have placed orders for 225 cars in the last three weeks, according to Helm Walker, vice president in charge of sales of the Moon Motor Car Co. The present production schedule at the local factory will be increased from 15 to 25 cars a day to take care of the orders, he said.

General approval of the recent action of stockholders of placing a new regime in control of the Moon company has been expressed by distributers, according to Walker. At present there are 141 persons on the payroll of the company here.

With production of Windsor models sold for two months in advance, Moon will concentrate on the output and national distribution of the Ruxton front-drive car. Preliminary factory installations and distributing arrangements have been completed, and the Ruxton will be in production within the next month, Walker stated.

Independent Oil Co. Moves Headquarters

The headquarters and bulk plant of the Independent Oil and Gas Co., distributer of Barnsdall Super-Gas Ethyl and Be-Square motor oil, has been moved from 3930 to 3966 Chouteau avenue. The company operates 30 stations in the St. Louis area, 15 of which were added during the past 12 months.

Suggests Trip to Morse Mill.

To the Automobile Editor.

SEVERAL weeks ago you asked us to write in about any nice places we found in the country.

Leave St. Louis by way of Gravois avenue and go out the Gravois road. You will get into beautiful country sooner than on any other road I know of. Keep right on the Gravois—don't follow Route 30 to St. Clair—and in an hour you will come to Morse Mill. The Big River is delightful here—wonderful swimming and fishing.

At the Morse Mill Tavern you will find delicious food and lovely surroundings. We have gone down often on Saturday afternoon and stayed over Sunday. You should phone ahead for reservations to be sure they can take care of you. The tavern is owned by former St. Louis people who are rather particular as to whom they take so that we have always found a delightful group of interesting people there. This spot is rapidly becoming popular for chicken dinners, week-ends and for vacations.

We have always enjoyed the atmosphere of this place so much we want to pass the word on to others.

Sinclair to Operate Pierce's Chain of Highway Terminals

The chain of motor terminals and hotels designed especially for the tourist which has been established by the Pierce Petroleum Corporation will be operated by the Sinclair Consolidated Oil Corporation, which has bought the assets of the Pierce company.

"One of the reasons why the Sinclair company was interested in the Pierce Petroleum Corporation," said E. D. Levy, president of the latter, "was the existence of the hotels and terminals. While I cannot speak for the Sinclair interests, it is to be expected that they will operate the system on the same high plane we have, and in due time will carry out proper expansion."

The name of Pierce Pennant will be retained for the hotels and terminals for the time being at least, Levy said.

The faster fuel is pumped into the tank the more danger there is of explosion where persons still are so foolish as to be smoking during the process.

Predicts Increase In Touring in 1930

A substantial increase in touring during 1930 is predicted by Frederck E. Mioskovics, formerly president of the Stutz Motor Car Co. and now a New York banker. His opinion is shared by Cecil Myers, president of the Karl-Keen Manufacturing Co. of Sioux City, Ia., which manufacturers luggage-carriers for automobiles. Myers predicts a growing demand for auto trunks for use in cross-country touring.

Asserts Radical Changes Will Not Be Made for a Decade.

The law of supply and demand always has been and always will be the determining factor in business stability and prosperity, according to Walter P. Chyrsler. president and chairman of the board of the Chrysler Corporation. who discredits the theory that depression periods move in cycles, or that depressions are inevitable because of one, two or even 10 years of prosperity.

"While there are bound to be fluctuations causing peaks and valleys in business, I see no reason for definite periodical cycles of depression," Chrysler said in a recent interview. "I can foresee nothing in the next decade that will necessitate any radical adjustments in our business or financial set-up.

"The mythical codes of depressions are caused by two factors—over-production and abatement of demand. Both causes can and are being corrected by a closer study of public needs on the part of industry, liberal credits and public confidence.

"In the automobile industry, with which I am most familiar, we do not anticipate any so-called 'cycle of depression' over the next five years. Reliable estimates anticipate the production during this period to be 26,000,000 automobiles or an average of 5,200,000 vehicles a year. If these estimates are realized, and they are a conservative and reasonable expectancy, it will actually constitute an increase of 14 per cent from 1930-1934 as against the period of 1925-1929.

"Conceding that 1930 will show a decrease over 1929, it is still generally believed that 1930 will equal or surpass the production records of any year previous to 1929. The foregoing figures are not merely guess work, but rather represent the consensus of opinion of motor car manufacturers, economists and statistical organizations.

"The basic facts of what may appear to be an optimistic forecast are as follows:

"1. That only a small percentage of our population was affected in the recent stock market recession.

"2. That our national wealth was in no wise impaired except in paper value of securities.

"3. That wealth is more widely distributed than ever before in this country.

"4. That the banking situation throughout the country has been materially strengthened by the withdrawal of large blocks of money from the call market, thus easing bank credits, and making plenty of money available for local enterprise and improvements.

"5. That saving bank deposits are on the increase, February showing a decided gain over January, 1930."

Fishing Season in Michigan Opens

With the coming of May, the fishing ban has been lifted on 4000 completely stocked pike and trout lakes and streams throughout Michigan, and the non-resident fishing license has been reduced in price. Izaac Walton enthusiasts may now fish for brook, brown and rainbow trout, wall-eyed pike, great Northern pike and muskellunge. The Michigan open fishing season extends until Sept. 1 on trout lakes and streams and to March 31 on the pike lakes and non-trout streams. The general fishing season for bass, etc., opens June 25 in the lower peninsula of Michigan, and in the upper Michigan peninsula July 1.

At St. Louis Airfields

THE appointment of Oscar R. Parks as manager of Lambert-St. Louis Field receives the approval of persons connected with the airport generally. Parks, without previous experience in aviation, took charge of the field as temporary manager a year ago and has supervised a portion of the bond issue work in an intelligent and energetic manner. His willingness to work, coupled with a pleasant personality, dispelled early hostility to his appointment, and his popularity is now general. The position is a City Hall appointment and pays $3000 a year.

To Try to Break Loop Record.

An attempt to break her own record of 344 loops will be made by Miss Laura Ingalls at the dedication of a new airport at Muskogee, Ok., May 26. Miss Ingalls established the record at Lambert-St. Louis Field on May 3, being forced to land by lack of fuel. A larger fuel tank is being installed in her Gypsy-Moth plane, and Miss Ingalls hopes to double the present record.

Charge by the Pound.

Visitors to Parks Airport today will be taken aloft in a tri-motored plane at 1 cent a pound instead of the usual flat rate of $3 a ride.

Road Paving Pushed.

The work of paving Natural Bridge road is being pushed and the new concrete bridge across Cold Water Creek at Lambert Field was completed Thursday. Construction will be completed about June 1, following which the concrete will be permitted to cure for several weeks before the road is opened to traffic. The highway will reduce the time required for travel between the airport and St. Louis.

Air Mail Increased.

Air mail carried over the St. Louis-Kansas City-Omaha route during April totaled 14,741 pounds, an increase of 1227 pounds over March. On the St. Louis-Chicago route the poundage increased from 4211 in March to 4719 in April.

Maj. Robertson Returns.

Maj. William B. Robertson, president of the Curtiss-Robertson Airplane Manufacturing Co., returned home from California last week with orders for two twin-engined Curtiss Kingbird transports, and a tentative order for a third ship. Maj. Robertson reports that the Kingbird was well received on the Pacific Coast. In the latter part of the week he flew the demonstration Kingbird to Milwaukee and Chicago to interview prospects. Production of the plane has been started at the Curtiss-Robertson plant, which now has 260 employes working.

Revised Flying Rules.

Revised flying rules and general regulations go into effect at Lambert-St. Louis Field today. Under the revised system, transport planes taking off with passengers will be required to use the full extent of the field, and a flag man will be on duty to signal takeoffs.

Norman K. Kerth of 1203 Lemay Ferry road, and Robert Higby, Ripon, Wis., qualified for limited commercial pilots' licenses last week after completing their instruction at Parks Air College.

285 Passengers in 15 Days.

A total of 285 passengers used the Southwest Air Fast Express service from St. Louis to cities in Oklahoma and Texas during the first 15 days of this month. The system of interchanging passengers with T. A. T.-Maddux Airlines here is proving satisfactory, according to M. P. Bickley, local representative for S. A. F. E.

It is proposed to honor each of the nine pilots in the service, and special air mail letters containing photographs of the flyers and a brief outline of their careers will be sent out. "Hammer week" will begin June 15. Joe is one of the Lambert Field veterans, and spent five days aloft with Gent Shelton in the "Missouri Robin" last summer.

How States Rank in Flying.

Illinois ranks third among the States of the Union for licensed pilots, planes and mechanics with 671 pilots, 473 planes, and 505 mechanics. California stands first on the list of licensed pilots and mechanics with 2244 and 1582 respectively, while New York heads the list of licensed airplanes with 984. Michigan and Colorado have the only airports rated under regulations of the Department of Commerce. The municipal airports at Denver, Colo., and Pontiac, Mich., have both received A-1-A ratings, the highest possible to obtain.

Sleeve-Valve Type Of Motor Creates Interest in "Great 6"

Popularity of the sleeve valve type of engine, as well as the distinctive beauty that characterizes Willys-Knight cars, has created more interest than ever before in the Willys-Knight Great Six, according to J. Women Tourists Grow Independent of Men On Long Journeys

Constant improvement of national highways and the greatly increased reliability of modern automobiles are making the woman driver independent of male assistance even on long transcontinental tours, according to reports received at the Oakland factory from the Oakland-Pontiac dealer organization.

With the touring season now getting into full swing, dealers report that increasing numbers of women motorists are stopping to have their Oaklands or Pontiacs checked and lubricated after long cross-country trips.

Extends Same Warranty as That Covered in Usual 90-Day Clause.

After four years of concentration on the straight-eight type of motor car, the Marmon Motor Car Co. announces a factory guarantee of one year, or not to exceed 12,000 miles of driving, whichever shall first occur, on each of the four models which comprise the 1930 Marmon line of straight-eights.

The new guarantee, as described by G. M. Williams, president, replaces the standard factory 90-day warranty and is effective immediately, being extended also to all owners who have purchased 1930 Marmon cars since May 1 of this year. In principle, the guarantee covers to the original purchaser all material and workmanship in much the same manner as the 90-day warranty except that the period of time is one year from date of purchase of the car or is limited to 12,000 miles of actual driving, provided this mileage figure is reached before the expiration of the 12-month period.

The models covered by this guarantee, all of which are straight-eights, are the Mormon-Roosevelt, Marmon Eight-69, Marmon Eight-79 and Marmon Big Eight. In price, these models cover the four important price classifications from $1000 upward. Twenty-six body styles on four-chassis lengths are included.

In announcing Marmon's new guarantee, Williams stated that the policy was established only after a careful study of the performance and durability of Marmon straight eights in the hands of the owner and the feasibility of its operation from the standpoint of owners as well as that of the distributer, dealer and factory.

"We realize that Marmon is making an important departure in agreeing to guarantee the material and workmanship of its automobiles for a 12 months' period or its average equivalent in actual mileage," Williams said. "However, Marmon has been manufacturing straight eights for four years and we believe our manufacturing, inspection and purchasing standards have reached a point where it is possible to know the stability and dependability of our cars in the hands of owners.

"Marmon has been manufacturing automobiles since 1902 and has been in the industrial field since 1851. This company, therefore, has a good reputation to uphold. The new guarantee was not decided upon until it was studied from every angle."

A provision of the new Marmon warranty is that the car will be registered at an authorized Marmon service station each 30 days during the period the guarantee is still in force. The owner thus may be advised of the condition of his car and the factory, through the distributer or dealer, may have regular knowledge of the condition of the car which it has guaranteed against defective material and workmanship.

Studebaker "Six" Latest Member of 100,000-Mile Club

With 114,000 miles on the speedometer, much of the distance under difficult conditions, a Studebaker 1924 special six touring car owned by D. A. Pearce, Long Beach, Cal., oil man, has been admitted to membership in Studebaker's 100,000 mile club, according to A. L. Lindburg, local Studebaker distributer.

Pearce purchased the car five years ago. Since then his duties have often required long, fast trips through California. For a period of 18 months the car was driven 2000 miles or more a month, but is still in splendid condition, the owner says, all of the original equipment with the exception of the tires being intact.

The 100,000 mile club is a unique organization composed of nearly 1000 veteran Studebaker cars which have traveled 100,000 miles or more and are still in service. While all members of the club have done 100,000 or more, 135 have covered between 200,000 and 300,000 miles: 27 between 300,000 and 400,000 miles, and 10 between 400,000 and 500,000 miles Three have actually passed the half million mark with a high record of 520,000 established by a Studebaker owned by E. C. Whitney of Winnemucca, Nev.

Extends Same Warranty as That Covered in Usual 90-Day Clause.

After four years of concentration on the straight-eight type of motor car, the Marmon Motor Car Co. announces a factory guarantee of one year, or not to exceed 12,000 miles of driving, whichever shall first occur, on each of the four models which comprise the 1930 Marmon line of straight-eights.

The new guarantee, as described by G. M. Williams, president, replaces the standard factory 90-day warranty and is effective immediately, being extended also to all owners who have purchased 1930 Marmon cars since May 1 of this year. In principle, the guarantee covers to the original purchaser all material and workmanship in much the same manner as the 90-day warranty except that the period of time is one year from date of purchase of the car or is limited to 12,000 miles of actual driving, provided this mileage figure is reached before the expiration of the 12-month period.

The models covered by this guarantee, all of which are straight-eights, are the Mormon-Roosevelt, Marmon Eight-69, Marmon Eight-79 and Marmon Big Eight. In price, these models cover the four important price classifications from $1000 upward. Twenty-six body styles on four-chassis lengths are included.

In announcing Marmon's new guarantee, Williams stated that the policy was established only after a careful study of the performance and durability of Marmon straight eights in the hands of the owner and the feasibility of its operation from the standpoint of owners as well as that of the distributer, dealer and factory.

"We realize that Marmon is making an important departure in agreeing to guarantee the material and workmanship of its automobiles for a 12 months' period or its average equivalent in actual mileage," Williams said. "However, Marmon has been manufacturing straight eights for four years and we believe our manufacturing, inspection and purchasing standards have reached a point where it is possible to know the stability and dependability of our cars in the hands of owners.

"Marmon has been manufacturing automobiles since 1902 and has been in the industrial field since 1851. This company, therefore, has a good reputation to uphold. The new guarantee was not decided upon until it was studied from every angle."

A provision of the new Marmon warranty is that the car will be registered at an authorized Marmon service station each 30 days during the period the guarantee is still in force. The owner thus may be advised of the condition of his car and the factory, through the distributer or dealer, may have regular knowledge of the condition of the car which it has guaranteed against defective material and workmanship.

Studebaker "Six" Latest Member of 100,000-Mile Club

With 114,000 miles on the speedometer, much of the distance under difficult conditions, a Studebaker 1924 special six touring car owned by D. A. Pearce, Long Beach, Cal., oil man, has been admitted to membership in Studebaker's 100,000 mile club, according to A. L. Lindburg, local Studebaker distributer.

Pearce purchased the car five years ago. Since then his duties have often required long, fast trips through California. Headquarters of Newcomer on Automobile Row

THE home of Wildgen-Vincel, Inc., Oldsmobile-Viking dealer, at 2925-27 Locust boulevard, is of the Spanish mission style of architecture, the building having been remodeled and redecorated.

Wildgen Vincel Firm to Handle Oldsmobile Line

The appointment of Wildgen-Vincel, Inc., as an Oldsmobile-Viking dealer at 2925-27 Locust boulevard, is announced by A. C. Williams, manager of the St. Louis Oldsmobile-Viking zone office. The firm will formally open its sales rooms today with a complete line of Oldsmobiles and Vikings finished in new spring colors on display.

J. F. WILDGEN

Active management of the firm will be in the hands of John F. Wildgen, who has varied experience in the automobile field for many years. Wildgen opened the St. Louis plant of the Chevrolet Motor Co. in 1916 and was general manager until 1927, when he joined the export division of General Motors. During 1927 and 1928 he was in charge of all production activities of General Motors in South America.

Fred Vincel, another member of the firm, has also had many years of automobile experience. For the last seven years he has been connected with a local retail automobile company, for part of the time as retail sales manager.

FRED VINCEL

The third member of the firm is John H. Wildgen, son of John F. Wildgen. The younger Wildgen is a mining engineer, and has traveled around the world in that field, but is also familiar with the automobile business.

The new company's building on Locust is of the Spanish mission style of architecture and has a wide frontage, which gives the show room virtually a glass front. The show room is finished in neutral tints.

J. H. WILDGEN

The sales personnel includes Elmer Downing, Walter Budde, James D. Smith and E. Hannenbaum. The service and maintenance department is equipped with a complete line of special tools for operations on both Oldsmobile and Viking cars. Special attention to service will be given by the company.

According to the elder Wildgen, the firm's selection of the Oldsmobile and Viking franchise was influenced by the belief these two cars represent the leading values in their respective price ranges.

"During the past three years Oldsmobile has won an enviable reputation with the public, evidenced by consistently increasing sales," he said. "The Viking eight, which brought new refinements of design and manufacture to the industry when it was introduced about a year ago, also is winning a fine reputation."

Larger Valves.

In an effort to improve the modern engine's breathing, most power plants have larger intake and exhaust valves. One thing the car owner should know about them is that because of their greater diameter they are more likely to warp unless kept properly adjusted.

Old Spanish Trail Provides Picturesque Route for Motorists

San Jose y de San Miguel Aguayo, founded in 1720, and called in Spanish history "the finest mission in all New Spain." Rivaling the majesty of a cathedral, this mission's village had the strength of a fortress. Through the years its architectural and sculptural beauty has been the wonder of artists and etchers.

Spend an hour talking with the average San Antonian and you'll have more history and legend that can be written into a volume. They are proud of their city down here.

On and on we travel through this hill country into El Paso. More missions and more colorful charm. It was in 1684 that LaSalle, with a colonizing expedition from France, sought to take possession of the Mississippi Valley in the name of his King. He failed and landed on the Texas coast, where he established his colonies. When a Spanish expedition reached here from Mexico in 1689, they found LaSalle had been murdered by his own men and so it was Spain gained its foothold.

Some Frontier Houses Still Stand.

At 1852 miles we are in New Mexico, with its romantic Las Cruces, its Lordsburg and its Rodeo, all names written in the early history of the Southwest. Many of the little frame houses of frontier days still stand and here the 'dobe house is in its glory. Here, too, will one find the colorful vaquero who still wears his hairy chaps and his five-gallon hat.

And now Arizona, with its Bisbee and Tombstone, Tucson, Phoenix, Gila Bend and Yuma. They will tell you, if you haven't been there before, that Yuma is the hottest city in the world, but it's a 10-to-1 shot that you'll sleep under blankets. Indians and cowboys are here and the grizzled, desert rats of mining epochs. Tombstone needs no space here, but you will find it worth while to spend an hour exploring the ruins of past glories. Here you will see the "Boot Acre" of song and story and you will hear the real story of the characters who made the Old West what it was.

This is the habitat of the horned toad and the gila monster. You will see cactus rearing its arms to the heavens and desert flowers of unbelievable beauty. If you are fortunate, you may glimpse a mirage, something not easily forgotten. True, this section of the trail will generate some heat during the summer months, but it is worth a little discomfort for the glory of the dawns and the breath-taking beauty of twilight. In the desert a twilight or a dawn is never forgotten.

We show a mileage of 2613 and we are in Holtville, the first town met in California. Only 1500 population, but Holtville has the California spirit and some Holtvillian will probably approach you with the boast that his town will pass Los Angeles in the next 20 years.

At the End of the Trail.

And now we are in the famed El Centro and San Diego section of "God's country," as the Californians describe it. And perhaps they are right. It seemed to us that nowhere in the world would you find the flowers and fruits that abound here. The blue of the Pacific and the paler blue of distant mountains!

We roll up to the El Cortez Hotel with our mileage at 2743. We are at the end of the Old Spanish Trail.

Poets sing of the padres and their missions along the Gold Coast. Here San Diego has its monuments to Father Junipero Serre, who administered the mission building enterprises. The story, "Ramona," is the tale of the mission period, its rise and fall. Here also, as you did in St. Augustine, you may look into a wishing well.

Longer cars require different handling on curves, so if you think yours sways or is otherwise lacking in roadability, just remember that through practice you will learn to handle it as well as any previous possession.

Chicago Building Mile of Pavement At $10,000,000 Cost

Part of 30-Mile Lakefront Street Plan, Relieving Michigan Boulevard.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 17. — A mile of pavement, that will cost $10,000,000, is under construction to link up Chicago's 30 miles of lakefront super-highway.

It will connect the north shore drive with the south park boulevard system. This link, spanning the Chicago river, a ship canal, railroad yards, and docks, is expected to take 50,000 cars daily from over-burdened Michigan boulevard.

Objections of federal and state governments and scores of private owners were overcome. Permission to erect a viaduct over land and buildings was obtained. An engineering problem was to cut through a row of old warehouses.

The non-stop lakefront highway now reaches 5500 street numbers south, and 4,700 numbers of the north. Within the next three years it will reach Evanston, the northern city limit.

Completion of the highway to the city southern limits depends upon the speed with which new land is made along the lake front. Much of the outer drive south of the "loop" district is on land which a few years ago was lake floor.

When north and south side outer drives are connected, motorists may speed through the city without running into the congested downtown district, or encountering the tortuous thoroughfares of the west side.

Grease Wheels Separately.

Wheel lubrication usually is separate and distinct from the rest of the chassis oiling system. Because of this it is likely to be overlooked, especially insofar as the grease cups which are used to supply lubricant to so many rear wheel bearings. With higher wheel bearing loads the order of the day, lubrication becomes more important.

A Triumph in Value-Giving—a Graham at $845
Price at factory

GRAHAM, long ago, deliberately adopted a policy of building its business on a foundation of value-giving.

GRAHAM, at that time, did not dream that its present triumph in value-giving would be so speedily accomplished.

GRAHAM hardly expected, for instance, to offer the public a motor car like the Standard Six Town Sedan at a factory list price of $845

But GRAHAM has been able, through masterful and exacting control of mass production, to provide this car with such unparalleled features as—115-inch wheelbase—a six-cylinder motor with 207 cubic inches piston displacement—7-bearing crankshaft with 81.4 square inches of main-bearing area—Graham-built bodies with four wide doors and adjustable seats—hydraulic internal expanding four-wheel brakes, extra large 12-inch drums

GRAHAM, in addition to all these superiorities, is alone in giving the climaxing value of shatter-proof safety plate glass, and its priceless protection to life and limb.

GRAHAM realizes that the true value of this car cannot be conveyed in words. It is so much more vividly evident from behind the wheel—at five, thirty or sixty miles an hour—that Graham invites and urges you to drive it—just for your own satisfaction.

GRAHAM gives the same measure of value in all its models—Standard and Special Sixes, Standard and Special Eights—for they are all products of the same science of building value through mass production. All have the distinction of being equipped throughout with shatter-proof plate glass, supplied at the lowest additional cost ever placed on such equipment.

ACTIVITIES OF BOY SCOUTS

Program of Contests Planned for Two-Day Stay in Forest Park.

The smoke of 100 campfires, scattered among a city of tents, will rise from the old aviation field in Forest Park Friday, when Boy Scouts of St. Louis city and county pitch camp for their third annual Camparall, the largest outdoor activity of the year for the local Boy Scout council. The camp will continue until Sunday afternoon.

The Camparall was started three years ago as a combined application of the two main phases of scouting: outdoor life and the educational activities, such as first aid and nature study. The Camparall consists of a combination camp and activities contest, in which Scouts compete not against each other, but against time and set standards. So far as known, Camparalls are held by no other Scout council anywhere.

The contestants are divided into patrols, one or more selected by eliminations from each troop, and each patrol member must do certain work, assigned without the Scout's previous knowledge, in a given time.

The camp is divided into four sections, corresponding to each district in the council, each district conducting its own contest. The winning patrol in each district will receive a prize. It was incorrectly stated last week the prize would consist of a bus trip to Washington, as in former years. The prize will be announced this week.

According to the announced program, the Camparall will start Friday afternoon. District councils, to explain all rules and make final announcements, will be held at 8 o'clock, taps being sounded at 10 o'clock.

After breakfast Saturday morning, an inspection will be held, followed by projects in campcraft and cooking. Projects in the various scouting subjects, first aid, compass reading, signaling, knot-tying, fire building, etc., will begin after dinner, and continue until 5:30 o'clock.

A council fire, to which the public is invited, will take place on Art Hill at 8 o'clock Saturday evening. The climax of the council fire will be an Indian pageant of the prologue of "Hiawatha."

Sunday morning will be devoted to church, and the Camparall will end in the afternoon with a mass meeting of all scouts and their fathers at the Municipal Theater. A program of music, speaking and a pageant of the evolution of the American flag will be given. The mass meeting will start at 2:15 o'clock. After the meeting the Camparall scouts will march back to the field and break camp.

Scout officials from all over the country are expected to attend the camp, to obtain ideas for similar activities.

Troop Notes

North District.

Bob White Patrol defeated Flying Eagle Patrol in a contest in first-class cooking conducted by Troop 3 of Grace Holy Cross Church, at the regular meeting of the troop last week. Former Assistant Scoutmaster David Kelley gave a short talk. Announcement of the Fathers' and Sons' mass meeting in Forest Park next Sunday was made by Scoumaster Simons.

Troop 19 of Blair Howard School is selecting the patrol which will represent it in the Camparall and is practicing for the Grand Army of the Republic memorial service, at which the troop will drum. Sixteen scouts hiked to the camp site on the Missouri River recently. Motion pictures of the hike and of activities such as bugling, cooking and games were taken by the father of Scout Engeke. The pictures were exhibited at the troop meeting last week.

The scouts of Troop 206 of Ames School have planned a hike for today. Thirty scouts and officers were present at the meeting last week. The meeting was featured by a visit by Deputy Commissioner Simons, who gave a short talk.

Troop 69 of St. Elizabeth's Church is on an overnight hike to Carmen Hill, Ill., this week-end. The scouts left last night and plan to return this evening. It was planned to hold an outdoor investiture ceremony. Tomorrow the entire troop will enter a retreat at Chaminade College. The drum and bugle corps will lead a parade to the Colored Orphans' Home next Sunday, the rest of the scouts marching in the parade. On Memorial day the troop will make a pilgrimage to Lincoln's tomb at Springfield, Ill. A wreath will be placed on the tomb and taps will be played by the drum and bugle corps. Visits also will be made to the State Capitol and other places.

A Standard Troop Insignia, only the fifth awarded in St. Louis Council, was presented to Troop Ferguson 1 at the first troop Court of Honor conducted by the troop a week ago Thursday evening. Fifteen scouts were alvanced in rank, service awards were presented to others, and two promotions in officers were made. Nearly 250 parents and friends of the scouts were present. The Troop Committee, every member of which was present, acted as the court, Chairman Dean of the committee presiding.

After Scout Martin Galt had sounded first call, the court was opened with a flag ceremony, followed by a pledge of allegiance led by Senior Patrol Leader Louis Meier. Dr. Yeatman of First Presbyterian Church gave an address of welcome. A pageant of the 12 points of the Scout Law preceded the investitures.

Merit badges were awarded to Julian Atchison, Charles Galt and Martin Galt; a first-class pin to Arthur Hugh Barclay; second-class pins to Stephen Doss, Harold Kluthe, Carl Krimbill, Vadmin C. Neklutin and John Alex Wilson; and tenderfoot badges to six recruits. A junior assistant scoutmaster warrant was given Louis Meier and a senior patrol leader warrant to Martin Galt. Meier also received a five-year service pin. Scout headquarters was represented by Commissioner H. D. McBride, Educational Director William Puffer, Activities Director C. H. Mills and Field Executive H. M. Nusser. The principal address of the evening was given by Commissioner McBride.

West District.

Troop 113 of the Church of the Messiah has revived its troop publication with Scout Bob VanMeter as editor. The new paper has been named The Bugler, and is now available for exchange with any troop putting out a similar publication. Exchanges may be obtained through Scout H. S. Hochstein, 5869 Terry avenue, The troop gave an entertainment last week to the scouts and the troop committeemen, the mothers serving refreshments. Scoutmaster Edward Rebore also made a report of the troop's activities during the year.

Preston Zimmerman, Fred Hoffner and Sidney Schrieber have joined Troop 30 of the Y. M. H. A. this month. All have passed their tenderfoot tests. The officers of the troop held an overnight camp in Forest Park two weeks ago.

The Bears are leading in an inter-patrol contest in Troop 60 of Union Avenue Christian Church. The Bats are second, the Wolves third, the Flying Eagles fourth and the Eagles fifth. Scoutmaster Renfrow attended the annual meeting of the Boy Scouts of America in New York last week.

A six weeks' inter-patrol contest staged by Troop 46 of Immanuel Baptist Church has been won by Buffalo Patrol, under Patrol Leader L. D. Scott. The Foxes were second, while the Wolves took third. An Indian trophy was awarded to the Buffalos at the meeting last week.

South District.

Patrol Leader Hayward Gieger of Question Mark patrol made the highest score in Camparall tryout conducted by Troop 80 of McKinley Junior High School while on an overnight hike to Valley Park last week-end. His assistant patrol leader, Arthur Weber Jr., took second place, while third was taken by Senior Patrol Leader Robert Rickert. The purpose of the contest was to select scouts to represent the troop in the Camparall. Scoutmaster Beebe and Troop Committeeman Arthur Weber Sr. were judges.

Eight second class tests were passed by scouts of Troop 174 of Zion M. E. Church while on a hike with the troop to Cliff Cave recently. In addition to the tests, the hike was featured by a nature collection contest, won by Eagle patrol. The Wolf patrol is leading i nan interpatrol contest. William Knight and Albert Landgraf have been admitted to the troop this month.

Twelve scouts of Troop 198 of St. John's Episcopal Church have received first degree pins admitting them to a new honor patrol just formed by the troop. Requirements for membership in the patrol are exceptionally rigid. The patrol will have five degrees, the highest of which will have for its emblem a silver swastika.

SCOUTS' BOARDS OF REVIEW IN EACH OF FOUR DISTRICTS

Candidates for First and Second Class Rank Will Be Examined.

Boards of Review for all Boy Scout candidates for advancement to second and first class will be held in each of the four districts of the St. Louis Council this week, according to William Puffer, educational director. The boards also will examine applicants for the woodcarving merit badge or for any other merit badges subject to review that were not examined at previous boards.

Scouts reporting for review for first and second class must have their certificates of rank with every test filled out and dated by the scoutmaster. Should this card be lost, the scouts must obtain a statement from their scoutmaster, certifying they are entitled to advancement, and giving the date the last test was passed.

The boards will be held as follows: North Distrct, Farragut School, Thursday evening; South District, Fanning School, Monday evening; West District, Church of the Ascension, Tuesday evening; Suburban District, Webster Groves High School, Wednesday evening.

Special short wave equipment on the President's reviewing craft, the new 10,000 ton light cruiser, Salt Lake City, will send the broadcast ashore. The cruiser will be anchored in the Atlantic Ocean, several miles off the Virginia coast affording those aboard a full view of every vessel in the fleet, as well as the seaplanes which will hover above it.

A bird's-eye-view of the imposing naval parade will be described from the gondola of the dirigible, Los Angeles. This broadcast also will be carried ashore by short waves to be conveyed to New York for distribution to NBC networks.

The broadcast is scheduled from 11 a. m. to 12 noon.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—What is generally accepted as ending the Federal Radio Commission's plan to reallocate 26 broadcasting stations on 13 cleared channels, originally scheduled for May 1 and including a shift of KMOX from 1090 to 1110 kilocycles, was sounded yesterday when the Federal Radio Commission ordered an indefinite postponement of the reallocation during pendency of the court appeals taken by KYW, Chicago; WHAS, Louisville, and WHAM, Rochester.

The commission thereby repudiated its action setting June 17 as the efective date for the shifts, in view of the fact that the litigation will probably last beyond the summer, after which new conditions may obviate the need of the proposed shifts.

C. L. Carroll of Chicago has had set for hearing his application for authority to build a new 100-watt station at Springfield, Mo., to operate on 1200 kilocycles.

Predicts Better Radio Reception

Radio reception as fine as that in 1922, when anybody could pick up almost any station with any kind of a set, will be here soon, predicts O. H. Caldwell, former Federal Radio Commissioner, who now is editor of "Electronics," a new radio magazine. Caldwell bases his predictions on changes in the sunspots cycle, and says that good reception should continue through 1931.

He declares, however, that this means still worse reception for rural listeners, especially if the Radio Commission cuts down power of the better stations and doubles up stations on cleared channels.

An application for a construction permit to erect a 1000-watt station in East St. Louis, and to operate it unlimited time on 640 kilocycles, has been filed with the Federal Radio Commission by the East St. Louis Daily Journal. The 640 kc. channel is assigned exclusively to KFI, Los Angeles, for night use.

A license has been granted by the Radio Commission to KGIZ, a new 50-watt station at Grant City, Mo., to be operated on 1500 kilocycles by the Park Corporation of that place.

* * *

A plea for a construction permit for a 10,000-watt station on 830 kilocycles, filed by the De Forest Radio Co., Passaic, N. J., has been set for hearing May 20.

WEAF, New York, one of the NBC key stations, has gotten permission from the commission to remodel its 50,000-watt transmitter. The permit covers replacement of much of the equipment, but does not provide for power increase. The changes will not be completed before fall, because the transmitter will continue on the air during regular broadcasting hours. But when it is finished, engineers say, listeners will get the bass notes and higher tones as well as overtones as never before.

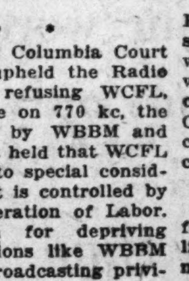
Complaints against KFKB, Milford, Kan., owned by Dr. John R. Brinkley, are to be aired at a hearing in Washington on May 20. The station is on 30-day license pending the hearing. The American Medical Association is active in the matter. The Commission has received a number of affidavits from listeners protesting against certain medical broadcasts by KFKB.



JIMMY DOWNEY.

A Pevely Dairy Co. program is to be broadcast by KSD from 10:30 to 11 p. m. daily, except Sunday, beginning next Saturday, May 24. Jimmy Downey's dance band, which is playing on the Hotel Statler roof, is to be featured. This band of musicians has been playing at Miami Beach, Fla. Another new feature on KSD is an "In the Time of Roses" concert Sunday afternoons, beginning today. As will be recalled, this was broadcast over KSD last summer. It brings music of the sort supposed to be especially welcome during the warm weather months. A women's octet, a tenor soloist and an orchestra led by William Daly are featured.

The District of Columbia Court of Appeals has upheld the Radio Commisison in refusing WCFL, Chicago, full time on 770 kc, the channel shared by WBBM and KFAB. The court held that WCFL was not entitled to special consideration because it is controlled by the Chicago Federation of Labor. It saw no reason for depriving "meritorious stations like WBBM and KFAB" of broadcasting privileges.

The new Chicago studios the NBC chains will occupy about half an acre of the roof of the new Merchandise Mart. Each studio will be built to be virtually a room within a room. The inner room, or studio proper, will be separated from the building's walls and will be supported by flexible sound-insulating connections. Speakers embodying the results of years of work by NBC engineers will be used in the studios.

St. Louis Firm Will Exhibit at Atlantic City Show.

Sampson Industries, Inc., of St. Louis has been elected a member of the Radio Manufacturers' Association, which will sponsor the radio show at Atlantic City the week of June 2. It is headed by Julian Sampson, and it and the Trav-Ler Manufacturing Co., headed by Harold Wrape, are the only St. Louis companies belonging to the association, which includes most of the important radio manufacturers of the country. Sampson Industries, Inc., has taken a booth at the Atlantic City show, and will exhibit its Stik Tape aerial and other products.

Geller, Ward & Hasner to Take on New Radio Line.

An announcement that the firm has taken on a new line of receivers and radio products is expected soon from the Geller, Ward & Hasner Hardware Co. Officers of the firm, including H. W. Geller, president; R. J. Lickiss, general sales manager; J. F. Kidd, advertising manager and metropolitan sales manager for the radio division, and T. J. Brown, rural sales manager for radio, have just returned from a tour of the factories.

The company recently separated its radio business and built new radio division offices on the fourth floor of its building on Fourth street. Separate display rooms for dealers are maintained, together with an elaborate service department. The firm has done quite an export radio business with Latin-America, and has a special department for this purpose, run by men who talk Spanish fluently.

The Delmar Radio Corporation has been organized by Galen Croxton and Barney Maloy as a General Motors radio dealer, with a store at 5650 Delmar boulevard. They have been in the radio parts and set-making business for nine years as the Mississippi Valley Radio Co. Recently they have been manufacturing the Braxton-King superheterodyne receiver, an especially selective and powerful set, as well as an audio amplifier for use with any set, and this business will be continued. Croxton is a member of the Institute of Radio Engineers.

Radio Jobbers to Take Sea Cruise.

Herbert Schiele and Ray Layer of the Artophone Corporation and S. O. Taylor, factory representative, will be aboard the Philco ship when it sails with several hundred jobbers and important dealers for Bermuda on May 27. Last May a similar cruise was given for Philco distributers on the Great Lakes. The Philco men will return to New York in time to attend the radio trade show at Atlantic City, beginning June 2.

Sparton Radio Dealers Meet.

About 79 dealers attended a monthly meeting of the Sparton Radio Club at Hotel Coronado Wednesday evening, at which the E. J. Straus Co. was host. Bud Dorton presided as president.

Prof. Roy Glasgow of Washington University, who had a great deal to do with the designing of Sparton receivers, made a talk. Another speaker was Lloyd Taylor, who discussed music in relation to broadcasting and sale of radio sets.

A number of dealers indicated that they would go to Jackson, Mich., for the annual meeting of the Sparks-Withington Co., May 28-29.

Brunswick Dealers Meet.

What the advent of Warner Bros. into radio, through acquisition of the Brunswick radio business, will mean was told by Charles Skouras of Skouras Brothers to Brunswick dealers Wednesday noon at a luncheon at Hotel Jefferson. Skouras discussed the effect on broadcasting as well as on perfection and merchandising of the Brunswick radio sets. Representatives of Warner Brothers also spoke. Charles Niekamp, vice president of Beck & Corbitt Co., the local Brunswick distributer, presided at the meeting.

A meeting of Brunswick distributers from 60 districts is to be held May 24-29. The jobbers will assemble May 24 at Dubuque, Ia., to inspect the Brunswick cabinet plant, then will go to Chicago and to Muskegon, Mich., where the company has large factories making radio set chassis and records.

Famous Flyer Associated With Gaertner Electric Co.

Forrest O'Brine, endurance flyer and co-holder of the world's endurance flight record, has become associated with the Gaertner Electric Co., 3521 North Grand boulevard. He will not give up flying, but is to increase his time in the air, most of his activity in the air to be under the auspices of the Gaertner company.

Reception Without Antenna or Ground.

It is not unusual for a modern radio set to work well without antenna or ground, although the sets are, of course, built to operate with these devices Sometimes a set operates well with the ground connection and no antenna and sometimes with the ground connected to the antenna post.

Herriot Says London Naval Pact Deceives Everybody By Failure To Settle Mediterranean Problem

By EDOUARD HERRIOT,
Former Premier of France.

PARIS, May 17.

THE marine battleground for the greater part of the civilized world since the dawn of history, the Mediterranean Sea has consequently been of paramount importance and will continue to be to those European nations earnestly seeking the means of insuring permanent peace. The London Conference, however, which met ostensibly to undertake the question of naval disarmament, has left the Mediterranean problem unsolved.

The incompleteness of the work of the London Conference has already been indicated in the speech of April 22 by Senator Robinson of the United States delegation. I was exceedingly impressed with what he said. As a matter of truth the absence of an accord between the Mediterranean Powers represents a grave omission. Italy demands parity with France while the latter declares herself unable to reduce her naval program without supplementary guarantees of security. Senator Robinson, evidently speaking in the name of the delegation, stated frankly the United States would never participate in a consultive pact implying such guarantees. I have made the effort of loyalty necessary to understand Robinson's viewpoint; he thinks and says that an equitable limitation of armaments constitutes in itself "a measure of efficient and complete security." But he is wary of accords that may well degenerate into alliances and he has undertaken to preserve absolute liberty of action for his country.

Let us be frank. When the American Senator combats the old system of alliances, we think, we French Democrats, that he is right when he refuses to aid us in seeking new types of international arrangements. When he thinks the limitation of armaments, such as that established at the London Conference, is sufficient to guarantee peace, we think he is wrong, and we tell him so respectfully.

Question a Grave Danger.

To leave the problem of the Mediterranean without a solution, with France and Italy lying face to face with England as an arbiter, is in our opinion a grave danger. To demonstrate the truth of this even for America is quite simple. The Treaty of London, we are told, will permit the United States to construct a war fleet whose tonnage will be substantially reduced over that of the past. Good. But, if in making use of the right which Senator Robinson recognizes a nation possesses in order to defend itself as it sees fit, Italy enlarges her fleet—she has announced her intention of so doing—if France wishing to insure the safety of her world affairs proportionately augments her own; if England in her turn makes use of this safety clause to construct supplementary units, the United States, or I am badly mistaken, in order to remain faithful to the formula of parity, also will be forced to develop her program. If this reasoning is fair, as I think it is, the problem of naval disarmament will not be solved any more than will that of the status of the Mediterranean. The first case is evidence against the second.

Norman Angell judges the difficulty admirably when in his articles in the Daily Herald he pleads for an international arrangement without which there can be no peace, naval or terrestrial, in the world. I am emboldened again to refer to the radioed speech of Secretary Stimson of April 22. "The work at the London Conference," declared the eminent Secretary of State, "involved two entirely distinct naval problems; on the one hand, that of the relations between the British, American and Japanese fleets; on the other, that of the relations between the British, French and Italian fleets." An error, in our estimation. The problem is one and indivisible. In our judgment, Great Britain, having failed to regulate the status of European fleets, has consequently solved nothing. She appears as the principal victim of the London Conference and the Admiralty will perceive the situation shortly.

The Importance to England.

The three sentinels of Gibraltar, Malta and Cyprus indicate the importance to England of the Mediterranean route. The immense empire which comprises a territory 110 times greater than that of the mother country, which represents one-fourth of the land area of the earth and one-fourth of the world's population, has its most important foothold in Asia, possessing India, Ceylon, Baluchistan, Burma, Malay States Straits Settlement, Singapore and the coast of Borneo, and the ports of Hong Kong and Weihaiwei. A Mediterranean disorder would be fatal for British equilibrium. The opening of the Suez Canal in 1869 altered the face of the old world. This passage commands the most frequented path on the globe. In the course of the last four years, the traffic through the Suez Canal has been as follows: 1926, 4980 ships, 36,000,000 tons; 1927, 5545 ships, 40,000,000 tons; 1928, 6048 ships, 44,000,0000 tons; 1929, 6274 ships, 46,000,000 tons. A steady increase is manifest.

The creation of this time-saving route has increased tenfold the commerce between Europe and Asia. Through it are carried wheat, rice, silk, tea, rubber and spices. And of the merchandise passing through the canal going toward the Indian Ocean, more than half comes from England. The great European ports of Marseilles, Genoa, Trieste, Salonica linked to the industrial countries of the north directly by rail, become the organs of universal commerce. If the Mediterranean route were no longer free, what would become of the powerful way stations of Algiers, Port Said, Aden, Colombo and Singapore? The Mediterranean has ceased to be a European lake, it is a world thoroughfare.

France's Colonial Possessions.

In thinking thus we place ourselves in purely a French viewpoint. Certainly our country has a most eloquent need of a free Mediterranean. We were well aware in 1914 of the danger to our country of being separated from Algeria which forms three of our departments. The same peril exists in the case of Morocco and Tunisia. The peril exists too in the same way for our colonial possessions, our relations with Madagascar, Reunion, the Comores Islands and Djibouti, as well as Indo-China, French India and New Caledonia. We are certainly not striking at the interests of Italy. Overpopulated, and with the number of her inhabitants increasing beyond her resources and forced to undergo steady emigration, Italy needs the importation of raw products. She is unable to isolate herself or become self-sufficient. She must receive with security cereals, meats, coal, cotton, silk, wood, iron and minerals. It is well understood that she wishes to develop her foreign commerce. It is a question of what are the needs of a nation with three colonies, Libya, Eritrea and Somaliland, and of a nation like France,

Peaceful Progress in Modern Mexico

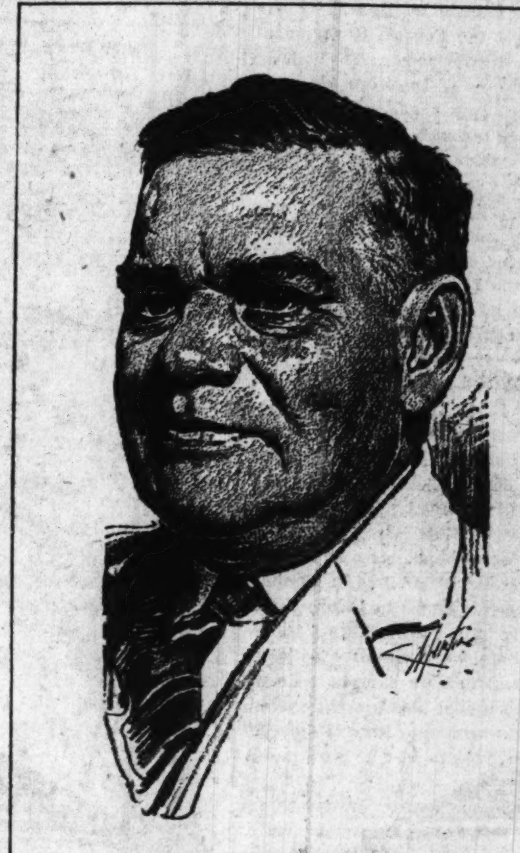
Educational System Has Been Greatly Improved, by Use of Radio, He Declares — Law Breakers Treated As Patients, Not As Criminals.



JOSE KELLY.

By KEITH KERMAN,
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff.

A MEXICO that is stamping out banditry with hard roads, teaching school by radio, proving it can take a drink or leave it alone by practicing temperance, making its soldiers work and study, treating law-breakers as patients instead of criminals and developing agriculture by Government aid and co-operatives, is being presented to the people of the United States by Jose Kelly, Commissioner of Commerce, Industry and Labor of the Mexican Republic. Kelly, who travels about this country promoting closer trade and cultural relations between the two republics of North America, is now in St. Louis.

"The day is gone in Mexico," said Kelly, "when any man who can induce six others to follow him across the street, can have himself recognized as a General and start plundering. The election of two Presidents, Portes Gil and Ortiz Rubio, from the civilian class, and the speedy collapse of the Escobar revolt showed that the country is ready for peaceful progress. And it is going ahead now with wonderful earnestness.

"The big problem, of course, is to make the masses citizens, in fact, as well as theory. The Government is trying to do it by giving them education, morale and a decent place in the economic system. That's the main purpose of the social and industrial innovations. Some of them are experimental, I suppose, but they are definite attempts to remedy conditions.

"Take the new criminal code. It is based on the theory that most people who break laws are mentally or physically afflicted and should be treated rather than punished. The death penalty has been abolished.

Procedure at Criminal Trial.

"When a person goes to trial, there is no jury, but a judge and a commission of psychologists and physicians pass on his case. There is a public defender as well as a prosecutor. Witnesses are heard in the absence of the accused. The public is excluded from the court room. If it is decided that the defendant committed the offense charged, he is sent to an institution for an indeterminate time, and a thorough study of him is made by the experts. Treatment adapted to his particular case is prescribed. If it is desirable, and possible, a trade is taught him. Efforts are made to instill a proper social feeling in him. When he can satisfy an examining board of experts that he is fit to take his place in the world again, he is released. If he never can be anything but a menace to society he is a life prisoner.

"Prisoners whose records justify trust are put to work on the roads at standard wages, and their pay goes to their families. They work without guards, and it is intended to make them feel that they are not working under compulsion as convicts, but are helping the Government.

"As is generally known, under the new code there is no penalty for theft, if committed because of hunger. And it has been my observation that the Mexican Indian steals only to satisfy hunger. I always leave my house in Mexico unlocked. If some needy fellow takes a little something from it I can go down to the market and get it back for a peso or two."

The new Mexico, one gathers from its emissary's account, is in a very fever of road building. Its soldiers as well as prisoners and free civilians are laboring to complete a 15,000-mile program begun in 1926. Farmers are working without pay, from 4 to 7 p. m., to build a highway between Brownsville, Tex., and Tampico.

5000 Miles of Hard Surface Roads.

Five thousand miles of hard-surfaced roads are now in service. Mexico's 1800-mile section of the Pan-American Highway, from Laredo, Tex., through Mexico City to the Guatemalan border, is expected to be completed this fall; the only part unfinished is a stretch of about 190 miles between San Luis Potosi and Celaya. Among other north-south roads under construction are highways from San Diego, Cal., to La Paz and Ensenada, Baja California, and from Nogales, Ariz., and Juarez, Tex., southward, through the capital. The system, it is planned, will extend through the Maya country to the tip of the Yucatan peninsula. East-and-west roads intersecting those running down from the United States also are under construction.

The roads are from 35 to 45 feet wide, with a surface six to eight inches thick. Cement, asphalt and oiled granite are the materials used.

This road system, according to Kelly, is gradually putting the bandit out of business by removing his inaccessibility. With hard roads ready for the rapid transportation of troops it is becoming increasingly difficult for the lawless gentry to keep out of the reach of Government forces.

There is virtually no organized crime in the larger Mexican cities, Kelly declared. One sees no armored automobiles carrying money about the streets, as such a precaution has not been found necessary.

Mexico's Land Policy.

"Mexico's land policy," Kelly said, "has a double purpose—improvement of the economic condition of the individual and development of a national agriculture. Public land is being distributed on the homestead plan, under the Agricultural Commission. The purchases of the land, stock and farming equipment are financed by bonds handled by the Banco Agricola and its branches in the various districts.

"Long periods are allowed for paying off the bonds, part of the products of each farmer being deducted for this purpose. Co-operatives, similar to the California Fruit Growers' Association, govern the planting, reaping and sale of crops and through them the bond payments are made.

"A person who buys public land under this system cannot dispose of it for 35 years. Each district must maintain at least one school and a social center for the workers—a 'casa de obrero.' The district school often serves also as the social center. Roads, dams, irrigation ditches and such improvements are built by the farmers, working without pay, the Government supplying the necessary implements.

"This agricultural system is but one application of the general co-operative idea in Mexico today. All the docks in the country, except those at Vera Cruz, are operated by the union of longshoremen and stevedores. All bus lines in Mexico City are controlled by the bus men's union."

As evidence of the great educational movement, Kelly said that whereas Mexico had in 1910 only 475 schools, with 48,778 pupils, at the close of 1929 it had 17,000 school units, with 1,700,000 pupils. These units include 3000 radio schools—gatherings around receiving sets in remote places—to which eight broadcasting stations send out two-hour educational programs daily. There are seven cultural missions, each composed of 12 experts, which travel over the country, giving instruction in hygiene, sanitation, domestic arts and such things. These missions are called "evangelistas."

All school children after the third grade are required to study a foreign language, and most of them choose English.

Army Budget Has Been Cut.

Part of the money for education has been obtained by reducing the army budget from 200,000,000 pesos ($100,000,000) to 20,000,000. The saving is devoted both to education and public works. The army itself has been reduced from 175,000 men to 50,000. And soldiers are required to devote an hour a day to school work as well as making themselves useful with road-building.

With prohibition of the manufacture of "pulque," the only legal restriction on the use of liquor imposed by the Federal Government, there is yet a strong temperance movement throughout most of Mexico, Kelly said. The Government and various organizations encourage it. Unions urge their members to spend little for drink in order that they may use the money for more necessary things.

In the State of Tamaulipas the sale of liquor is forbidden, not by statute, but by agreement between the Governor and the citizens. Kelly told of seeing the Governor refuse a drink—in private, too—merely because of this agreement. The Mexican is not a whisky drinker, Kelly said, but likes wine and beer. The official thinks the country will never have nation-wide prohibition, but is merely economizing on its liquor bill now because of its need for money.

Mexico has little concern with the United States tariff, said the commissioner, because it has comparatively little to send to this country. And even if this were not the case, it would not feel free to object to any pending tariff bill, he pointed out, regarding such action as unwarranted meddling in another country's affairs. "Mexico is trying to develop its own production to satisfy a larger part of its own consumption," he said. "At present it has to import largely from other nations, principally the United States. Last year Mexico bought $17,000,000 worth of shoes alone from its northern neighbor.

The Immigration Policy.

The country he represents takes much the same attitude toward the immigration policy of the United States, Kelly continued. Any restrictions this Government sees fit to place on immigration from Mexico is its own business. Mexico is trying to keep its people at home, anyway. At present a Mexican can come to the United States by presenting his birth certificate, marriage certificate, if he is married, and two letters vouching for his character. If he comes to live he must also pay $18 for his passport visa and head tax. That thousands of Mexicans come to the United States illegally, Kelly contends, is the fault of labor agents, who promise high pay and then often keep the workers at low wages under threat of exposing their illegal entry.

"The Mexicans who stay for any length of time on this side of the border," Kelly asserted, "take advantage of the educational and social advantages in the United States. In all the border towns from Brownsville to San Diego, all the scholarship prizes last year were won by the children of Mexicans."

In connection with immigration, Kelly mentioned the prominent Irish element in Mexico. In a survey made for the late President Obregon, he found 161 Irish family names in the country. Some were in their original form, others had been Mexicanized. Carroll, for instance, had become Carrillo, and O'Donohue had become O'Donoju. The official explained that O'Donohue, an Irishman who entered the service of Spain after the Napoleonic wars, was the last Spanish viceroy of Mexico, and when he went to the country he was to rule in 1805 he took about 60 Irishmen with him and they married Mexican women.

Kelly declares Mexico has the welcome sign out for people from the United States. It wants to know them better and it wants them to see its scenic beauty and historic spots and the remnants of that pre-historic civilization which, many are coming to believe, came not from Asia but from the lost continent of Atlantis.

Present Status of 5-Power Navies and Levels Permitted U. S., Britain and Japan Under Treaty of London

Authentic Estimate of Saving or Expenditure by Any Nation Impossible—America Gets Parity if It Pays for It.

By CHARLES G. ROSS,
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 17.

AGAINST the background of the discussions now in progress regarding the London naval treaty, it may be useful to set out the exact present status of the five principal navies of the world and compare it, so far as the United States, Great Britain and Japan are concerned, with the levels permitted to be reached by the end of the treaty term, Dec. 31, 1936. Because of the noninclusion of France and Italy in the limitation agreement respecting cruisers and other auxiliary craft, it is not possible to make the comparison in the case of those countries. What they will build in the next six years can only be surmised.

One point needs to be understood at the beginning. That is the fact that no authentic estimate can be made of the sum saved to any nation by the treaty or caused to be spent by any nation. A balance on one side or the other can only be struck by comparing one variable factor with another—that is to say, by comparing what might have been spent without the treaty with what may be spent under the treaty. In other words, the comparison must be between two hypothetical sets of figures.

Mr. Hoover, not unjustifiably, makes out a case for the treaty on the financial side by showing that the amount necessary for our attainment of parity with Great Britain under the London schedules is much less than it would have been under the best possible arrangement we could have obtained at the Geneva conference in 1927.

Some Saving to Treasury.

It is also a fair argument for the treaty that the money which might have been spent for the laying down of battleships in the next six years, under the replacement schedules of the Washington treaty, will now certainly be saved to the Treasury. This is a matter of some $350,000,000. Again, however, the item is hypothetical, for the building of battleships under the Washington treaty is permissive merely, and not mandatory. The chances are, indeed, that even without the London battleship holiday there would have been a de facto holiday, in whole or in part. What the London treaty does, therefore, is to substitute a certainty for a probability. This may not be an impressive achievement, but it is something.

The amount of our building under the London treaty is as much a matter of guess work as the amount that might have been authorized without the treaty. The treaty fixes the levels that may be reached, but it does not require the building of a rowboat. Parity with Great Britain is ours if we want to spend the money to achieve it. The "if" is a large one. The Navy Department proposes; Congress disposes. Parity under the treaty will require an expenditure of at least $600,000,000 and probably $850,000,000. It is for Congress to say how much shall be spent.

An End to Competition.

If the treaty has merit (and this writer believes it has), that merit consists primarily in the fact that it puts an end to competition among Great Britain, the United States and Japan in the categories of ships left unregulated by the Washington treaty. It is not necessarily a money-saving treaty for the United States (though, as pointed out, a case can be made out for it on that score), and it is not a warship reduction treaty. It is strictly a limitation treaty.

In the following table are shown in parallel columns the present status of the American Navy in ships actually built (excluding ships building or authorized) and the tonnages permitted under the treaty. Only those ships are included in the first column which are within the effective age limits—for battleships, 20 years; aircraft carriers, 20; cruisers, 20; destroyers, 16; submarines, 13.

Aircraft carriers	76,286	135,000
Eight-inch-gun cruisers	30,000	180,000
Six-inch-gun cruisers	70,500	143,500
Destroyers	290,304	150,000
Submarines	75,520	52,700
Total	1,075,010	1,123,600

In capital ships we are to reduce 70,000 tons by demilitarizing three ships. In aircraft carriers we are permitted to build up to the level fixed by the Washington treaty. Congress already has made a start in that direction by authorizing a 13,800-ton carrier in addition to the three now in commission.

Three 10,000-ton eight-inch-gun cruisers are in commission and 10 others, aggregating 100,000 tons, are building; the treaty permits us to build five more in this category, or up to a total of 180,000.

It should be noted, however, that we agree not to lay down Cruiser No. 16 before 1933 and not to complete it before 1936. Similarly, Cruiser No. 17 is not to be completed before 1937 and Cruiser No. 18 not before 1938. Thus, while the treaty allows us to have a total of 18 ships in the eight-inch-gun cruiser category, we are permitted to have in commission at the end of 1936 only 16 vessels in this class though one day later we may have 17 and one year and one day later we may have 18.

Retarded Building Device

As has been explained, we agreed to this retarded-building arrangement in order to reach a settlement with Japan. Japan wanted a 70 per cent ratio in eight-inch-gun cruisers. She will have this ratio, and a little better, until the end of 1935, but with the completion of our eighteenth unit her ratio will drop to 60. The retarded-building device was the keystone in the arch of the Reed-Matsudaira agreement. Each side was able to say that its thesis had been maintained.

As for destroyers and submarines, in both of which categories we are relatively strong, we agree to come down gradually to the treaty levels. This means simply that we agree to refrain from replacing a certain number of destroyers and submarines as they pass the effective age limit. Some will have to be replaced in each category if we are to keep the Navy at the top notch of permitted strength.

Status of British Navy.

Our chief present requirements, as the table shows, are in the cruiser category. Parity in eight-inch-gun cruisers can only be attained by the building of five ships in addition to the 13 now built and building, while in the six-inch-gun class, in which we have at present only the 10 Omahas, with none building, an entirely new program calling for 73,000 tons, distributed probably over eight or nine ships, is necessary, in order to reach the treaty level.

A Plea for Service Cars.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

REFERRING to the proposed city ordinance to prohibit service cars in the downtown area, I can see nothing else but a bold attempt by the bus company and P. S. C. to secure a real monopoly on transportation in St. Louis. I hope and trust our capable Board of Aldermen will not see fit to vote one organization out of business so another company can go into the business. It seems to me a person requesting an ordinance of this sort has an unlimited amount of nerve.

Why can't the bus company compete with service cars? The service cars are licensed, carry insurance, have a real investment, but they do have a minimum overhead. The bus company says service cars are unregulated competition. I think if your public utilities were regulated fair and square, so-called losses would loom as profits. Of course, the public utilities must get a revenue, which will give them a generous return on their investment. Such being the case, Mr. Public should be able to see if the investment is real or imaginary and also be able to taboo unnecessary overhead or other expenditures.

Last, but not least, to throw several hundred men out of employment, mostly men with families, certainly would not help the employment situation or business in general, as it would just add several hundred more men to the growing list of those unable to find means of a livelihood. A. T. RILEY.

A Diagnosis of Charlie Becker.

ON Mother's day, 1930, in the Nation's Health Resort, we were successful in locating and diagnosing Secretary Showme's ailment. It is comatosis. Comatosis is a state of mind one gets into by kidding oneself into believing one is going to be Missouri's next Governor. Despite Charlie's "ambition" and the "gripes" of the Boonville Republican, we predict he will be returned to private life. He has been in office too long and has fizzled out as a public official. When he turned his loud speaker on the Post-Dispatch and then tried to blow all of the feathers out of "that political buzzard" he simultaneously shot his own political wad. JAMES McINTOSH.

Class Discrimination in the South.

WHY is it that no one in the South who comes up from the poor white class ever gets the breaks? One may write like an angel, preach like a god, paint like a Raphael, compose like a Mendelssohn, carve like a Michelangelo, possess the virtue of Caesar's wife, the honesty of a Paul, the sincerity of a Peter; but unless he comes from one of the old Southern artistocratic families, he is pushed aside.

Lincoln, the world's greatest emancipator, couldn't get break enough in the South to be elected constable to a Justice of the Peace Court if he were living below the Mason-Dixon line today. His non-slave owing ancestry would put him out of the running. Southern Senators, Governors, Judges, newspaper owners, preachers of any note or importance, bankers, merchants, lawyers and doctors are almost invariably from the aristocratic families.

Why are young men and young women of pure Nordic blood almost always shoved aside to make room for some scion of aristocracy who, in many instances is inferior mentally and morally to the one he displaces?

ACCURATE HISTORICUS.

The Goat and the Sheep.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

"MAMMA, how is it the goat escapes and all the sheep get killed?" The child was watching the sheep being led to slaughter by the goat they trusted and thought was there to protect them.

How closely akin to the person who claimed to be the goat in the recent financial crash of the Young brothers. If this self-styled goat had acted in time thousands of people would not have been sheared of their money.

Just as the sheep are led to death by their trust in the four-legged goat, so were thousands led to poverty and despair by the two-legged goat.

THE LAW IN POPULAR CONTEMPT.

Lawyers are, we suppose, pretty well inured to criticism, and the law itself, if it could speak, would probably admit that its once exalted majesty is a tattered tradition. The American legal system has struck bottom in popular esteem. This is not soapbox verdict. It is the judgment of Justice Roger A. Stone of the Supreme Court of Minnesota, pronounced in an address to the American Law Institute in Washington.

"On the ethical side," to quote Justice Stone, "no profession and possibly no business is put on a lower plane in the lay mind than our own." He considers the situation grave—"if not a national peril at least a major national crisis."

All this has often been said in substance, but we do not recall having seen the intellectual inertia of the legal profession so accusingly portrayed as in the following paragraph of Justice Stone's arraignment:

> It is not pleasant to contemplate what might now be the state of the world had students and practitioners of medicine and surgery and of the physical sciences been so much the slaves of "standpatism" during the last century as have been the members of the American bar.

Medicine has completely broken away from its past. Spiritually it retains the Hippocratic oath. Save for that, the old Greek inheritance has been renounced. Galen faded from the picture when the Dutch janitor, peering at a glass of water through his crude lens, discovered a new world. In the endless experimentation, adventure and heroism of bacteriology the battle with the grim adversary is fought with continuously fresh knowledge.

But the law, or, rather, its American practice, clings to old superstitions, still talks a mumbo-jumbo patter, still operates under rules of evidence in whose intricate mazes justice is lost sight of, and has attained an apogee of inefficiency.

It is patent that medieval court practice can no more meet modern requirements than any other superannuated utility. We must modernize the law and modernize our courts. How will it be done and who will do it? Justice Stone undertakes to answer those questions. "The people of the United States," he says, "have a way of finding out when an institution set up and supported by them for their own service ceases to function properly. They are patient and slow to anger. But when aroused they frequently take the matter of reform into their own hands."

It tries public patience hard when a swindler, in the name of business, can rob thousands of people and, through delay or technicality, or some device or other of the legal profession, either escapes punishment altogether or gets away with a ludicrously small sentence. It also tries public patience hard when a burglar or footpad, caught redhanded in the act, can resume his felonious way under the aegis of bail and finally be granted an effective pardon by a nolle pros. Those are familiar outrages which an antediluvian legal system imposes on an indignant people.

It is a bit heartening to hear a Justice of a State Supreme Court say that this sort of thing will not be indefinitely endured.

ISAIAH MODERNIZED.

Prof. J. B. Allen of Rawdon College, England, is another reformer who seeks to put a modern "punch" into the Bible. He has chosen the book of Isaiah for his first attempt at translating King James' English into King George's. For instance, he takes Isaiah 1:23, which reads as follows:

> Thy princes are rebellious, and companions of thieves. Every one loveth gifts, and followeth after rewards.

This he has edited to read:

> Your rulers are unruly and chummy with thieves. The whole lot, loving bribes, are running after rewards.

But why does this crusader cling to the stilted, academic forms of conservative usage in his enterprise? He drops from the thunder of the prophet, it is true, but only to the classical level of the conversation at an Anglican high tea. If he really wanted to tickle the grass roots and the cement sidewalks, at least on this side of the ocean, he would phrase his passage something like this:

> Your big shots are hard guys and bat around with yeggs. The whole mob craves easy dough, and hot-foots it after gravy.

A GOAL FOR PUBLIC INSTITUTIONS.

A. L. Bowen, Superintendent of Charities of Illinois, says the only justifiable objective of an institution of the penal or charitable type is its own extinction by correcting or removing the conditions which brought it into being. This is a forceful presentation of a fact that is growing more and more important because, as he points out, "It is obvious that we cannot continue to expand indefinitely our institutional system at the rate it has been expanding during the last 25 years." Heartening progress is being made. The poorhouse and orphanage, he says, are almost things of the past.

Dr. Bowen's theory commends itself to every director and employe of public institutions. It is a novelty in itself to hear a jobholder preach the doctrine of self-effacement. His conclusion is, perhaps, even more striking: "The institution of the future will be a community, keyed up only to the capacity of its members. In this community, where less is expected, less is required and competition is less keen, each man and woman will find a niche, and become useful to others and satisfied with himself."

Utopian? Perhaps, but let us hope with Mr. Bowen that this is no idle dream, even for the penitentiary, which presents the most difficult problem of real adjustment.

A STORY TELLER.

A droll spirit left us the other day when William J. Locke, the British novelist, died. What a charming story teller he was! Since 1895, when "The Gate of Samaria" appeared, he has been delighting the world with the fooleries and errancies and happy braveries of his irresponsible sinners. It was "The Beloved Vagabond," as we remember, that won for the author his first American audience. Story followed story, in gay succession, all in the same beguiling vein, every one of them bearing the same enthralling magic. If favorites must be named, our choice would be "The Joyous Adventures of Aristide Pujol," but many a grateful vote would be cast for "The Morals of Marcus," and "The Glory of Clementina" still haunts the memory as the ghost of a cherished love. An entrancing company, those children of a quaint and gentle pen that never wrote an ugly line, never an offensive word, never essayed a solemn mission, that merely entertained, and did it beautifully.

MR. MORROW'S HEARTENING MESSAGE.

Mr. Morrow has both heartened and electrified the country by proposing that we repeal the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act, permitting the states to say whether or not they want prohibition and taking Federal authority out of this unpopular field. There is, of course, nothing new in the Morrow proposal. It is sensational not for itself but for the quarter from which it comes. Mr. Morrow is not a politician, but a practical man of affairs who has left business to render public service. He is another such man as Senator Couzens of Michigan. To say that he dignifies the opposition to national prohibition is not an exaggeration.

Mr. Morrow does not discuss the merits of national prohibition. He simply holds it impracticable, and he leaves the country to infer that he has broken his silence upon the subject only after that thorough and deliberate consideration which characterizes all his actions. He asks if it is good for great numbers of our people to conceive of the Federal Government as an alien and even as a hostile power. He believes that the liquor problem is one of those not altogether soluble, as he also believes that we can more satisfactorily deal with it through the states than we can by thrusting them aside.

Mr. Morrow has no hard words for the prohibitionists, nor can they have any for him. The man whose tact and diplomacy smoothed out our difficulties with Mexico, and whose conspicuous conciliating abilities helped to keep the London conference from breaking up, is not to be branded as something less than a great and useful citizen of the Republic.

STATE COMPENSATION INSURANCE.

The proposed law for State insurance under the Workmen's Compensation Act, to be submitted to the voters on initiative petition next November, has received the indorsement of the board of St. Louis League of Women Voters. An effort will be made to have the law approved by the State convention of the League, which meets at St. Joseph, May 22 and 23.

Modeled after the successful Ohio law, the Missouri proposal, while permitting companies to insure themselves if they care to do so, will create a State insurance fund to take over employers' liability policies. Employers will save a considerable sum in reduced premiums, and the abuses under the present system will be eradicated. A State insurance fund is a necessary corollary to the full success of our workmen's compensation legislation.

The local League of Women Voters, always interested in progressive and forward-looking movements, is to be commended for its action. We trust it will be ratified by the State convention.

A SCHOOL OF POLITICS.

As vendors of what they were pleased to call "securities" the Young brothers revealed a good many qualities. They had organizing ability, nerve, enthusiasm, the art of imbuing their subordinates with zeal, and uncanny political discrimination.

The gift of divination was theirs, too. Scanning the campaign heavens in the summer of 1928 they saw it all in the stars. They saw that Charlie Becker would continue as Secretary of State, saw that Stratton Shartel would be the next Attorney-General and proceeded to cement the affection of those arbiters of affairs with persuasive arguments: a handsome contribution to Mr. Becker's campaign fund, a generous retainer to Mr. Shartel. And the battalion of lawyers mustered into their service all bore the imprint of political influence, including that author of our bone-dry law, Senator McCawley of Carthage, the Draco of the Ozarks. We believe it may in fairness be said that the Young brothers left nothing to chance that might more effectually be directed by politics.

Well, what of the future, when the gusty winds of the present have calmed and such atonement has been made as the State may or may not exact? A career awaits these talented members of the nimble-witted fraternity. The serene and satisfying fields of education beckon. In some cloistered nook of stone and steel, far from the madding whirl of singing brooks and meditative elms and brooding hills, they should establish The Young Brothers School of Politics. As to the curriculum, the tuition, the inducements to take the course, the guarantees to be given with each diploma—these details may be left to the Young brothers, all right. And for this little college we predict a glittering success. Students will flock to it in eager droves. And sitting there at the feet of the masters they will learn all there is to be taught of the science of practical politics. For the Young brothers know everything in the political books from Plato to Ruth McCormick. In the words of their grateful alumni, Rah, Rah, Rah!

TO THE SHERIFF OF MADISON COUNTY.

A few days ago the Supreme Court of Illinois decided that the law permitting operation of horse races in Illinois does not apply to dogs. If left to the Appellate Division in Chicago the remaining question of whether or not the parimutuel system of betting used at dog tracks is in violation of the gaming laws. Last Friday the Appellate Division held that that system does violate the gaming law and the pool selling act of 1887.

In other words, the two decisions left the dog tracks without a legal leg to stand on. After the Appellate Division's decision, the Chicago dog tracks closed up. But the Madison Kennel Club and the Kingshighway Kennel Club, across the river from St. Louis in Madison County, Ill., are still operating. Has the Sheriff of Madison County failed to hear about the decisions? If so, we take the liberty of informing him that he may now close the Madison County tracks and prosecute their owners under the gaming act and the pool selling act of 1887.

What about it, Sheriff?

The Tourist Comedy

How hordes of convoyed people who cannot see anything for their own dust desecrate the haunts where Marie Antoinette and her pleasure-loving court played at love and simplicity in their shepherds' clothes; Paris, where all is lovely but those who deluge it in the touring season; that ho-hum, the guide.

PARIS, May 10.

IF I ever thought well of guides, I don't now. Granted the convenience of having your baggage looked after and all arrangements made for you, I still think they're impossible. A few days ago guides took some friends of ours from Australia to a Paris station hotel where I thought only the people who were going on a drunk the last three days in Paris and wanted to be sure to catch the train, stayed. They had all their meals at the hotel, and poor at that, when Paris is crowded with restaurants which would make Epicurous wish for nine lives.

Sunday we went with these people on a typical trip to Versailles. There were about 15 other people on their tour. First we stopepd at Malmaison—a charming place out of Paris where Napoleon and Josephine lived before he was Emperor. It is very simple, not unlike our New England colonial style, and set in nice grounds. The palace is being redone and strengthened, thanks to John D. Rockefeller Jr. Some of it is closed off and most of it is minus furniture. I missed the personal touch in the palace. I think one would like to see or imagine how its original occupants lived, not only to look at the Gobelins and murals. The guide told me the furnishings are in storehouses in Paris, and despite numerous petitions to have them replaced, nothing is ever done about it.

As always with a guide, we were rushed through. Lunch took place at a poor hotel, and a bad meal it was. After that we went to see the royal carriages and then the Petit Trianon—from there to Hameaux. Unfortunately it was raining and everything looked as cheerless as possible. The guide takes you out to the thatched cottages, hameaux, says a few words and then, "Now that you've seen the hameaux, we'll go this way." Being Sunday, the place was crowded and countless groups trouped along after their guides. You could hardly hear what your guide had to say for the explanations of the one just behind.

You're rushed past everything with a few words of explanation—and what do people get out of it? Too many of the tourists who go there and elsewhere in Europe have no preparation, no idea of what they are to see or what it all means. Their minds are blank, and any efforts of the guide to fill them up are useless. You wonder why they spend their money to come here, what they derive from it all. One must have some idea of the history of a place to appreciate it.

It seemed to be really sacrilegious for these English women with their high gaiters, their ugly gray or blue suits, heavy brogues and cameras, hurrying from place to place, to desecrate the haunts where Marie Antoinette and her pleasure-loving court played at love and simplicity in their shepherds' clothes. They had their faults, goodness knows; but sordidness was not one of them, nor unloveliness and bad taste. Louis XV and his beautiful Madame Pompadour and Madame du Barry would turn over in their graves if they could see some of the sights that now tramp around in their woods. The grounds did not seem very well kept up, but perhaps when the rehabilitation is completed, or in the summer, it will be better cared for.

I was so impressed at the time with the futility of all these tours. The people who really want to see the places don't take them, and many of the people who take them are impervious to what they see or not really interested. The guides themselves know it's all in vain and that they are just making a living. Of course, many of the people whom they take around are enough to try the patience of Job. The guides remind me of Hannibal's brother Mago, who was wet nurse for the elephants. His troubles getting them over the Alps were no worse than some of these guides have in steering their mental elephants about. A French lady of our acquaintance calls them cornacs—that being the Indian word for elephant driver — and used rather playfully in French. I can't see that this rage for European travel—at least a la tour—is so enlightening unless they like to go home and tell where they've been. Some of them certainly cannot remember where they have been.

* * *

These people come to see a strange land, and yet they expect everything to be like it is at home. Its difference from their norm is the degree of their disapproval. Of course, to understand another country one must bring to it first of all sympathy—a desire to understand it instead of expecting it to reflect your own, and, if possible, some background of history on which to place what you see.

Will the Senate Talk or Act?

From the Kansas City Star.

IF the Senate approaches the consideration of the London naval treaty in a technical and carping spirit, it can discuss indefinitely and to no purpose. The agreement as to the 8-inch gun and the 6-inch gun cruisers was a compromise. Extremists on both sides of the controversy, as to cruiser type, are dissatisfied. They probably can furnish much material for debate. The idealists who hoped the conference would result in the abolition of navies doubtless will be heard in violent complaint.

But if the Senate takes a reasonable and broad view of the treaty no valid reason so far has been developed against prompt ratification. The agreement will end competitive building between Britain and the United States. It will be assurance to the world that this nation contemplates no career of conquest.

WASHINGTON DAY BY DAY

WASHINGTON, May 18.

SENATOR ROBERT F. WAGNER has reached the pinnacle of his political career, because he was born in Germany. A seat in the United States Senate is the highest office in the United States to which he is eligible. Politically he is satisfied and gratified.

He didn't come to the United States until he was 8 years old. He sold newspapers on the streets of New York City while attending school and worked during spare time through his courses in the high school and the College of the City of New York.

But 13 years after leaving Nastatten, Germany, he was graduated with honors as a Bachelor of Science, two years later was graduated from the New York Law School with second honors and had started the practice of law in New York.

HE FOUND himself at the age of 27 in the State Legislature as a member of the Assembly. He held his seat four years and liked public life so well that he ran for the Senate. At 35 he showed such a capacity for leadership that Democrats made him their leader, and since the party was in control of the Legislature at the time, it meant that he was President pro tem.

That year the Governor of New York was impeached and he was made Lieutenant Governor. At the close of that administration he returned to the State Senate as Democratic leader, where he served until elected a Justice of the New York Supreme Court.

Eight years later he made the bid for the highest office within his grasp, defeated Jimmy Wadsworth, and came to the United States Senate.

HE IS a widower, lives in the most exclusive hotel in Washington, and is active socially. He is immaculately groomed at all times, is short—a bit rotund—has iron gray hair and is in a perpetual good humor. He is one of the most approachable men in the Senate.

When he speaks, his words are delivered with crispness and clarity easily audible in all parts of the Senate chamber. He seldom moves from his desk while making a speech, uses few gestures, and when delivering a set speech reads most of it from a manuscript. His speeches are invariably well thought out and aptly phrased.

In conversation he has a tendency to run words together, and there is a trace—ever so faint—of German influence.

Present Status of Navies And Levels of London Pact

	Present Status	Treaty Status
Capital ships ..	608,650	474,750
Aircraft carriers	115,350	135,000
Eight-inch-gun cruisers	149,420	146,800
Six-inch-gun cruisers	177,691	192,200
Destroyers	157,585	150,000
Submarines	45,534	52,700
Total	1,254,230	1,151,450

It will be seen from the foregoing that the effect of the treaty is to [illegible] Britain practically where she [illegible] in cruiser strength and allow us [illegible] chance to catch up. She accepts approximately 50 cruisers, as compared with the 70 demanded by her Admiralty as a minimum at the Geneva conference.

The following table shows the Japanese Navy as it is now and as the treaty permits it to be at the end of 1936:

Capital ships	292,400	266,070
Aircraft carriers .	61,270	81,000
Eight-inch-gun cruisers	68,400	108,400
Six-inch-gun cruisers	98,415	100,450
Destroyers	107,275	105,500
Total	693,828	714,120

In trading with Japan, our delegates were confronted with a virtually completed cruiser fleet, for, in addition to her 68,400 tonnage in the eight-inch-gun category, she has 40,000 tons building, or a total of 108,400, which is exactly the amount allotted her under the treaty. Japan, like Britain, agreed practically to tie herself to the post [illegible] the cruiser category.

The first column of each of the foregoing tables takes account only of the ships actually in commission. On this basis of comparison, the treaty provides for a slight total increase in the American navy, a slight decrease in the British navy and a slight increase in the Japanese navy.

If ships built and building are taken into consideration there is a slight decrease all around in the treaty navies as compared with the present status. The figures for the three Powers on this basis are:

	U. S.	Grt. Brit.	Japan

Status of French Navy.

The French navy has a total present effective tonnage of 405,132. But France also has building a tonnage of 135,920, or a total of built and building amounting to 541,052. Operating under her naval statute law of 1924, France for the last three years has been building at the rate of about 40,000 tons a year.

Her prospective total, counting ships appropriated for or authorized in addition to those now built or building, is 642,218 tons. This includes a submarine tonnage of approximately 100,000, of which 80,000 is built or building. From this it is clear that France is fast on the way to becoming the greatest submarine power in the world.

If the so-called "escape" clause in the three-Power pact is ever invoked by Great Britain, it will probably be in order to permit her to increase her destroyer tonnage against the submarine "menace," as she may come to regard it, from across the channel.

France at the London conference asked for a total permitted quota of 725,000 tons. By the elimination of exempt ships and obsolete tonnage, this was brought down to 687,000 tons. She refused to make any reduction unless given some form of security pact in exchange. It remains to be seen whether France will build up to a level that will cause Great Britain to invoke the "escape" clause.

The Italian demand for theoretical parity with France, which France refused to grant, was made in the face of the fact that the Italian completed navy as of Feb. 25, last, embraced only 248,581 tons, as against the French total of 405,132. Italy, like France, has a considerable tonnage under construction. If this is added, her total is 342,597, as against the comparable French figure of 541,052.

The recent launching of 32,000 tons of warships by Italy, together with the announced decision of the Fascist Cabinet to build an additional 42,900 tons, indicates a state of mind that is hardly conducive to an early settlement of the troublesome Mediterranean problem.

$110,000 COLLECTION OF RARE BOOKS ON DISPLAY THIS WEEK

A $110,000 collection of about 750 rare books, parchments, incunabule, first editions and illuminated manuscripts goes on display tomorrow, continuing through Saturday, at the William Harvey Miner book shop, 3519 Franklin avenue.

The exhibit is sponsored by dealers, and the works shown are [illegible] sale, but the display is of general cultural interest, illustrating, as it does, virtually every stage and process of the bookmaker's art, and the public at large is welcome.

Of peculiar local interest is the collection of 15 or more Horace text source books, gathered here and there in the course of 35 years of searching by John B. [illegible]inn, the Latin scholar, attendance officer of the St. Louis Board of Education, whose new text of the Roman poet's works, compiled from these very books, is to be published shortly. The prize of this lot is perhaps a Venetian work of 1492.

One horn book, from the Kaiser's library in Potsdam—obtained before his abdication—is described as unique, there being nothing so fine even in the world famous collection of horn books in the Edward and Albert Museum in London.

Another interesting specimen is a parchment patent of nobility, in 16 pages, issued by the Emperor Francis Joseph I of Austria to one [illegible]rl Kruger of Mecklenburg in [illegible]1.

FOR STATE INSURANCE UNDER COMPENSATION LAW

State insurance under the workmen's compensation act was recommended by the League of Women Voters at the last board meeting. A resolution was passed asking the State convention of the League, to be held in St. Joseph, May 22-23 to indorse the proposal which will be submitted through initiative petition to the voters at the November election.

Mrs. E. M. Grossman told the League the proposed law would reduce the cost of insurance to employers 34 per cent.

Herriot Points Out Shortcoming Of Naval Treaty

whose colonial domain represents more than 12,000,000 square kilometers and more than 50,000,000 inhabitants.

Now Italy is turning again, no matter what she says, to a program of armament. She has just decided to lay down a cruiser of 10,000 tons, two cruisers of 5000 tons, four torpedo boats and 22 submarines. The Budget of the Italian Navy was, in 1922, 614 million lire; it was raised in 1929 to 1200 million and in 1930 to 1475 million. With her new constructions, our neighbor will posses 54 submarines; that is the same quantity that England, the United States and Japan agreed upon for themselves at London. It is not only France but England as well who sees a breakup of the traditional logical equilibrium.

Germany in Mediterranean.

Let me give another example of the gravity of the present disorder. Germany, absent yesterday from London, is present today in the Mediterranean. Her ships have visited Palermo, Catania and Messina. Italo-German manifestations have taken place and the authorities encourage them. However, it seems to be forgotten that countries like Greece and Spain exist who also have a right to the liberty of the Mediterranean. Spain in particular is awaiting only a better system of foreign and domestic communication in order to become an important industrial center. Has she not also the right to security of life?

We find quite natural the emotion manifested by the British press. It has the courage to admit the failure of the London Conference. The Daily Telegraph rightly observes that the construction of 22 submarines is an unprecedented event in a time of peace. It has rightly announced the astonished reaction of the French General Staff with the consequent need for revision of the Treaty of London at least for percentages of smaller naval powers.

Everything has become clouded again. The tripartite pact, because it does not solve the problem of the Mediterranean, has deceived pacifists and imperialists alike. We do not feel it necessary to defend the theories of the latter, but as lovers of peace we cannot fail to observe once again the failure of the disarmament conference.

What Nations Are Doing.

We do not know how the American Government and particularly the Senatorial Committee presided by the honorable Mr. Hale will receive the conclusions of the Naval Conference. The events in India will scarcely leave England inert. We French are ourselves busily enough occupied in Indo-China. In the United States the Big Navy party is certainly going to accentuate its campaign in favor of more submarines. The naval circles of Japan seem restless and dissatisfied. The Morning Post has observed that out of 53 British submarines in present use, 44 will have passed the age limit by 1939 and that consequently new ones must be built.

In a more general way the problem of the freedom of the seas, and that of security remain intact. Let us sum up the case. We recognize fully and are grateful for the noble intentions of President Hoover and Premier MacDonald. They have succeeded in reducing the figures for battleships, costly naval fortresses that they are. But the method which consists of achieving an initial accord between those nations "of the high seas," in order finally to envisage the European and Mediterranean questions, led to an impasse. Already 22 Italian submarines have rekindled the question of naval disarmament. If this situation is aggravated or even continues unchanged, Italian naval construction will create throughout the world the same difficulties as those formerly created by the German land armaments.

For Direct Accord With Italy.

In order to obviate this danger, we are ready, we French Democrats, to help as much as we know how. We would accept very willingly a direct accord with Italy based on wise concepts which would prove mutually beneficial. But we think the truth was uttered on April 29 at Geneva by the Council of the Inter-Parliamentary Union. A general convention is needed under the patronage of the League of Nations. Only a universal conference will be able to consider the interests of unjustly forgotten countries, to regulate the problem of the freedom of the seas and security of coast lines, to define the status of the Mediterranean which should remain an open sea to all the peoples of the earth.

This conference cannot succeed without the presence of the United States—who are in reality vitally interested as I think I have shown—in checking the race for armaments. Their authority, their democratic spirit, are indispensable to aid peace lovers of Europe still menaced by the survival of imperialism. To think otherwise is to blind oneself.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick E. Niesen of 1234 Bellevue avenue, Richmond Heights, will celebrate their fiftieth wedding anniversary with a dinner tonight in their home, Frontier Court, where they have resided for 40 years. They were among the earliest to build in that section.

"Drunkenness Is a Disease and I Can Cure It"
—Leslie E. Keeley, M. D., LL. D.

THE EDITOR of a powerful Chicago Newspaper before his death, challenged this statement of Dr. Keeley that "Drunkenness is a disease and I can cure it." He defied Dr. Keeley to cure the men whom he would send to the Institute. The results were so convincing that, through his great newspaper, he was personally responsible for thousands of men and women taking The Keeley Treatment for Liquor.

CATLIN TRACT DRAWS INTEREST OF SPECULATORS

ONE FRONTAGE MADE INTO THREE

Restrictions Alterable in Three Years — Present Owners Could Be Reimbursed With Profit.

By Berry Moore

Real estate agents report a noteworthy speculative interest in lots in what is known as the Catlin tract, facing Lindell drive and Forest Park, extending from Union boulevard to Skinker road. Its speculative appeal lies in the fact that the restrictions which now exclude apartments, etc., have only eight more years to run, expiring in 1938.

The restrictions then either may be renewed or rewritten, subject to the approval of 60 per cent of the owners of the land. The tract is now restricted to residences on a costly scale. It has a total frontage on Lindell of 7480 feet, with a depth of 530 feet, which is unprecedented. This is exclusive of 20 feet on the north line reserved for an alley.

The frontage could be trebled, according to real estate agents, by subdividing and constructing a street through the north part of the tract from Union to Skinker, which, they hold, is practicable, in view of its extensive depth. The north part of the tract could be given over to apartments, it is pointed out, while the Lindell frontage could be reserved for residences, under the new restrictions to be drawn in 1938. The subdivision project would yield the lot owners of the tract a very high sum total, it is believed.

Should the Lindell frontage also be surrendered for apartment projects, which is regarded as a remote possibility, Walter J. Haeussler of Paul Brown & Co. predicts that it would yield as high as $1500 a foot, whereas the prevailing prices for such of this ground as is available now range from $200 to $250 a foot. In this event he ventures the prediction that the proceeds of the subdivision enterprise would be so great that those who had built residences on the Lindell frontage of the tract would be reimbursed for their original cost, including the ground, with a substantial profit besides—exclusive of deterioration in the value of the buildings since their completion.

Haeussler recently purchased the J. W. Cohn residence at 5767 Lindell boulevard, through Albert T. Terry & Co., prompted by the possibilities of the tract, with its extensive depth, as a location for pretentious apartment structures. In the purchase he believes that he not only has acquired a most attractively situated residence, but an investment, involving decided speculative advantages, as well.

All the lots in the Catlin tract have a uniform frontage of 100 feet by a depth of 530 feet, to the concrete wall on the north, which separates it from the Rock Island Railroad track and the University car line, with exception of the east end of the block at Union boulevard. Removal of the Rock Island tracks and the University car line is being urged to make way for the proposed continuation of Des Peres boulevard, as is now projected. This would give additional frontage to the Catlin tract, with still larger profits for the lot owners.

Tract Was Scene of Pike.

The Catlin tract, which forms the north boundary of Forest Park between Union boulevard and Skinker road, was purchased in the crude in 1904 for $1,000,000 from the late Daniel Catlin by a syndicate formed by the late Moses Greenwood. The syndicate, which acquired the tract on the eve of the World's Fair, held in commemoration of the Louisiana Purchase, leased it to the Louisiana Purchase Exposition Co. for the Pike, a side show of the Fair, at a bonanza rental.

Several years after the Fair the tract was acquired by a group, including Festus J. Wade, president of the Mertantile Trust Co.; former Gov. David R. Francis, Edward Mallinckrodt, who improved and restricted it for high-priced residences, for which its location made it highly eligible. Approximately two-thirds of the Lindell frontage is now occupied by residences, which will compare with many of the handsomest in the city. Numerous others are in course of construction, the indications being that the entire Lindell frontage will have been built up before the restrictions expire.

Viaduct for Drives.

A viaduct is now being built to carry Union boulevard and Lindell drive, which forms a continuation of Lindell boulevard to Skinker road, over the Wabash Railway. In this connection the city recently purchased an irregular shaped piece of vacant land, containing about a quarter of an acre, from former Congressman Nathan Frank as part of the site of the viaduct. It fronts 205 feet on the north side of Lindell and 56 feet on the west side of Union, and extends farther west on its north line.

The plans call for shifting the railroad tracks southward a short distance. Between the Wabash right-of-way and the Frank lot is a 25-foot strip reserved for an outlet to Union for the Catlin tract. The city is arranging with the trustees of this tract to take over this strip for a short distance west from Union and to trade a strip in the Frank lot which will give the tract an outlet to Lindell.

FREE TOURS THROUGH COUNTY THE WEEK OF MAY 25-JUNE 1

Real Estate Board to Provide Transportation to Show Visitors Advantages of Community.

Free sightseeing tours in St. Louis County the week of May 25-June 1 are to be sponsored by the St. Louis County Real Estate Board as Real Estate Week. Announcement that free trips will be provided visitors was made yesterday by S. Charles Harvey, president of the organization.

"We want every one to see the advantage of St. Louis County and the members of the County Real Estate Board will provide transportation for interested persons without charge."

"It might seem quite strange to say that housands of persons living in the vicinity of St. Louis County are not acquainted with its scenery and its other advantages, but such is a fact. We want these people to visit our county and look it over. We want them to see the many fine residential sections and the worth-while qualities of our 21 cities, towns and villages.

"St. Louis County is just as near the business district as Union avenue used to be a few years back. It used to take 45 minutes or more to make that trip a few years ago, while now, because of automobile and good roads, you can almost go from any section of the county to the heart of St. Louis in 45 minutes.

"In addition there is virtually every facility available in nearly every section of the county. There is water, gas, electricity, police and fire protection, transportation by train, trolley, bus or by autos on the best of paved roads.

There are public, parochial and private schools and the county is fast becoming the center of a new culture with the moving of more colleges and universities to it. Stores are convenient in all sections.

"There has been considerable agitation regarding the health or sanitation question in our county. This has in a measure caused persons to fear that the building of a sewer system would prove costly. The investigations made by members of the Real Estate Board as individuals prove that the costs will be within reason and will compare with the costs elsewhere. The fact that the county is planning one of the best sewer systems in the country should be of interest to all investors.

"There are many movements afoot in the county which will make it a still better place in which to live. There are campaigns afoot for beautification of highways and the planting of shrubs and trees in many sections which still await further beautification.

"When our road system is completed we will have more good roads than any county in the State. The county alone is expending $10,000,000, while the State plans to expend another $8,000,000. The road tax in the next few years will give us several additional millions and add to this the streets to be constructed by special ordinances and we will have a system costing more than $25,000,000.

"The county in 1920 had a population of 105,000 and a few straggling villages. It now has 21 cities, towns and villages, one of them being the fifth in size in Missouri. Preliminary census reports indicate the county now has a population in excess of 225,000.

"In 1920 the assessed value of real estate in the county was $81,841,520, while today it is in excess of $330,000,000. Such an increase is nothing less than phenomenal."

The lease under which the Illinois Terminal Railway System will occupy the Carleton building at the northeast corner of Twelfth boulevard and Washington avenue, has been taken in the name of the Middle West Development Co., a subsidiary of the railroad company. It provides for an annual rental of $75,000, or a total of $3,600,000, for the 48-year term of the lease, which was negotiated by William R. Cady, vice president and real estate officer of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co.

The building is owned by the Jemima Lindell estate of which the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. is trustee. It is 10 stories in height, with a frontage of 154 feet on Washington and 154 feet on Lucas, with a depth of 137 feet on Twelfth and contains approximately 200,000 square feet.

Part of the first floor, after reconstruction, will be used for passenger station facilities with access to the underground terminal. The upper floors will be remodeled for offices and light manufacturing space. Possession will be acquired by the Illinois Terminal June 1, 1931.

Meanwhile the company is proceeding with excavation for its subway and expects soon to begin construction of a new warehouse and industrial building on the site of its present passenger station just north of the Carleton Building. The new warehouse and the subway and elevated structures planned will cost approximately $5,000,000, as has been told.

OLD GERMAN CASTLE ON SALE IN ST. LOUIS

Among the newest offerings of the Wenzlick Real Estate Co., 1010 Chestnut street, is a twelfth-century German castle, whose walled premises occupy a high hill near Nurnberg. The owner, Rene Kyritz of Berlin, wants 400,000 gold marks for it, which, according to the St. Louis agents, figures about $260,000.

The purchaser will get the Castle of Abenberg, as it is called, complete from "turret to foundation stone," including fixtures, cannons, moat and bridge, ghosts and the like. The walls, which are three stories high, surround "one day's work" (that is, eight-tenths of an acre) above which rise four towers, one, the "hop tower," consisting of seven stories.

The castle is built over large vaulted cellars and contains, with the towers, 24 rooms. The outbuildings consist of stabling for eight horses, a pig sty and a coach house with accommodations for six automobiles. Yew trees, rare in Germany, are on the surrounding estate.

Three years ago the castle was fitted up with electric lights and "the latest improvements." It is said to be in perfect condition, so that it can be inhabited at any time. An idea of the extensiveness of the furnishings in the castle can be had from knowing that 11 clocks and other timpieces are scattered through its rooms and corridors.

BUILDING 61 PCT. BELOW THAT OF APRIL LAST YEAR

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 17.—Building permit reports to S. W. Straus & Co. from 584 cities and towns show a gain of 12 per cent in value of construction for April compared with March. The total was $210,411,881. This is a 61 per cent decline compared with April, 1929, but the volume in that period was abnormal, being swelled by plans filed in New York City in anticipation of special legislation. Excluding New York, April records this year were 39 per cent below those of the similar period last year.

WARSON OIL FIRM TO BUILD $250,000 STORAGE PLANT

Structure, With Capacity of 5,000,000 Gallons, Will Be Erected in Evens-Howard Tract.

The Warson Petroleum Corporation, distributer of petroleum products, has awarded the contract to the Austin Co. for construction of a building on the north side of Macklind avenue at its intersection with the Missouri Pacific Railway tracks, just south of The Arena, to cost $250,000. It will be used in the storage and distribution of fuel oil and gasoline, with a capacity of 5,000,000 gallons.

The building, a fireproof structure, will include a garage for 60 trucks. It will occupy the entire five acres, with rail connections with the Missouri Pacific.

The site was purchased through the Mercantile Commerce Bank & Trust Co. It was a part of the Evens-Howard tract, which is being absorbed by industrial concerns because of its shipping facilities.

This is the fifteenth site in this district sold by the Mercantile-Commerce Bank & Trust Co. within the last two years and the largest to any individual industry since the Arena deal.

The Flexwood Co., whose main offices are in Chicago, has purchased through the Albert G. Blanke Real Estate Co. 4.7 acres owned by Ray E. Pickrel on the Northwest Terminal Belt Line for a wood-working plant.

Plans are being made for construction of buildings that will cover eventually one-half of the property. It is expected to be in operation before six months and when completed will employ about 300 workers. The product is a very thin veneer, glued to a cotton or paper backing and put through a process by special machines so as to make the wood pliable.

The plant will adjoin the Pickrel Walnut Co., which will furnish the logs used in cutting Flexwood. It is planned to produce oak and perhaps mahogany, also.

The Continental Chemical Corporation of Watseka, Ill., has several sites under consideration in St. Louis and East St. Louis for a plant. The Evens-Howard tract is said to be favored. Plans contemplate a building with approximately 30,000 square feet. The concern manufactures a varnish and wax combination for floors and fillers and rubber treatments.

The Bush-Burns Realty Co., for more than 20 years at 1105 Chestnut street, removed yesterday to ground-floor quarters at 712 Chestnut street, which will be formally opened tomorrow.

The concern sold its property at 1105 Chestnut street in 1928 for $37,500, which it had purchased in 1924 for $17,500 from owners in Paris, France. It originally occupied the premises under a lease.

The Bush-Burns Co. has built up one of the largest organizations in the real estate business. In addition to its downtown office, it maintains a branch at 5324 Natural Bridge avenue. It has developed and marketed several high-class residential additions, including Hedgeleigh Park at Union and Natural Bridge boulevards, and Northampton at Kingshighway and Chippewa. YECKEL, EARICKSON ISSUE SUNSHINE HOME NEWS

Yeckel, Earickson & Co., Inc., operating in South St. Louis principally, for more than 20 years, is now distributing the first issue of its new house organ, known as Sunshine Home News.

Louis F. Yeckel, president, says he always has been a firm believer in judicious advertising and that Yeckel, Earickson & Co., Inc., as well as the American Home Building & Loan Association, of which he also is president, advertises extensively in the newspapers, but think that with a large and growing list of properties it is impossible to advertise each and every one at one time and many of the prospective buyers desire a fairly good selection of property to look at when considering the purchase of a home.

It is with this idea that the publication of Sunshine Home News was begun. It contains 12 pages, devoting a part of the contents to a complete list of all properties for sale or exchange, together with other items of interest to the home owners, home buyers, borrower or investor.

Oscar W. Earickson is secretary of the association, Alfred S. Zeller and Atto F. Leffler, assistant secretaries. The association occupies its own home, the Yeckel Building, at 3543 Gravois.

This store will be a commercial store, with a full line of refrigerators and water coolers for stores, hotels, restaurants, institutions, ice cream manufacturers, etc. Edward L. Hill, former newspaper man, and at present commercial manager for James & Co., Inc., will be in charge.

During the last year this company has signed leases for neighborhood stores at 360 South Grand, at Gravois; southeast corner of Grand and St. Louis; 6501 Delmar, at Westgate; Manchester and Sutton, in Maplewood, and 827 Planters Building.

MARTIN STAMM MODEL HOME

"The Acme in Residential Construction"

Opens Today for Two Weeks for Public Inspection

Drive Out Gravois Road 3¼ (Three and One-Quarter Miles) From Gravois and Kingshighway—Located in Mederacke's Grantwood Terrace Subdivision

COME OUT TODAY

Here, indeed, is a charming, new model home, in beautiful Grantwood Terrace subdivision, the Subdivision of the Southwest.

It is a Stamm-built home!

Picture, if you will, as yours this attractive 7-room tile-roofed brick and masonry residence with its inviting, spacious interior in these restful rolling grounds.

Ramble along into this house and see what the architect's vision with skilled artisans can make, using the finest, high-grade selected materials.

Note the details of construction!

Passing through the pretty reception hall, take a glimpse of the studio living-room, the large master's bedroom, that cozy breakfast room, the large guest room with its separate guest bath, and the separated maid's quarters.

The good wife will see the sunshine streaming in the kitchen—happy, healthy sunlight—and you will chuckle with anticipated pleasure about that recreation room in the basement.

You will not overlook the many conveniences; will appreciate the fact that Celotex has been used throughout, and that it is weather-stripped.

It is equipped with electric refrigeration to meet Summer needs, and the oil-burning heating system bids defiance to rigorous, rollicking Winter when his howling gales scatter ice and snow.

The three-car garage with Overhead Garage Doors is steam heated. A full-width side drive adds a truly formal tone to the large yard, abounding with shrubbery, flowers and greensward.

It is a home to dream about. One to wake up and find yours.

No, the sale price is not as high as you may think. It is not listed at $50,000 as would be judged from the enthusiasm its beauties provoke, but think of it in the $30,000 sale price class. 100% employment of Union labor and contractors.

And come out to see it today.

CHILDREN AND GRANDCHILDREN.

ECKHOFF—In loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. John Eckhoff, who departed this life May 16, 1928:

Years of sacrifices, little of play,
Loving and giving and smoothing the way,
Life is too short, mother, ever to pay;
Strong in adversity, ready to do,
Gentle, unselfish, a friend ever true.
Our proudest possession, dear mother, was you.

Sadly missed by
HER CHILDREN AND ALL WHO LOVED HER.

HAGAN—In memory of our darling son, Harry Hagan Jr., who passed away May 19, 1927.

Three long years have passed away
Since that sad and mournful day;
A precious one from us has gone,
A voice we loved is stilled
A place is vacant in our home
Which never can be filled.

MOTHER, DAD AND SISTER. (c)

HEMMINGHAUS—In loving memory of Frederick W. Hemminghaus, who passed away May 14, 1929.

We miss the absent face and voice,
That made home doubly dear,
But memory fills the vacant space,

WIFE AND CHILDREN. (c)

The depths of my sorrow I cannot tell
At the loss of my husband I loved so well.

HIS WIFE.

PABST—In loving memory of our darling sister and aunt, Miss Mabel Pabst, who departed this life May 17, 1927:

Loving and kind in all her ways,
Upright and just, to the end of her days;
Sincere and true, in her heart and mind,
Beautiful memories she left behind.

To the time when you were with us,
To the happy days of yore.

Sadly missed by
Wife and all who loved him.

By DON H.

THERE was considerable muttering and mumbling in the offices of the Messrs. Skouras, Skouras & Skouras this week as the best minds of that organization tried to determine the fate of "Journey's End," the fine picture made by Tiffany from the stage play by the same name. After a dozen sessions of the debating society it was temporarily agreed that there had been too much shooting recently along the local cinema front and "Journey's End" was consigned to the safe for future reference.

One man, high in the Skouras councils, who has some very definite ideas as to what the pew-holders want, gives it as his opinion that this picture would not do enough business at the Ambassador or Missouri to keep the ushers in gold lace.

"There is no woman in it," he explains, "and that is always bad. Also, the ending is all wrong with everybody getting killed. The whole thing is too tragic, too real."

How else can war be made to appear? Can some well-fed director in a pair of white pants take a vivid drama based on the futility and waste of war and make it over into a chambermaid's idea of romance? The answer is that he can but when he is through his product will not be war, but will more closely resemble the Rover Boys in the White Mountains.

Had "Journey's End" been turned over to the ordinary movie-mill foreman the exhibitors would have had no chance to complain that it lacked box-office appeal. Love interest is the best thing Hollywood provides and Joan Crawford would have been more than willing to skip through the trenches dressed as a Red Cross maiden, dodging hand grenades and singing "It's a Long Way to Tipperary." There would have been some swell shots of a Paris cabaret with plenty of alluring French boop-a-doops playing kiss-the-pillow with the doughboys; at least a dozen tinny tunes; a bit of polite fighting and, in the final reel, the hero could easily win the war and hurry back to London for a fade-out with a hot half-nelson on the leading lady.

BUT, marvel of marvels, that was not the way it was done. James Whale, the brilliant young Englishman who directed the stage version, was brought from London and given a free hand in the production. He wanted Colin Clive for the leading role and the movie magnates provided the cash wherewith to buy Mr. Clive's release from a British company. The picture was made in 10 weeks and in several ways it excels the original play. On the stage many things were left to the imagination, merely being described by the various actors, but in the picture every ounce of drama in the whole bitter business is unfolded for the spectator. It is all intensely real from the first gathering of the officers in the dirty dugout to the last smashing scene where Stanhope and his men die in the big assault.

It is a pity that this chance to find out how St. Louis moviegoers would react to a tragedy that has profoundly moved thousands in play and novel form, will be lost because the director failed to sandwich in a few Salvation Army mamas.

Ah, well, perhaps "Journey's End" will turn up in Belleville.

"All Quiet on the Western Front," however, has been given the official stamp of approval and will be shown at the Missouri within the next few weeks. From all accounts it is also a realistic picture of the war, minus any suggestion of Hollywood hooey, but it has the saving grace (from the standpoint of the jolly old box office) of having enough low comedy content to offset the terrors of the conflict. Louis Wolheim and "Slim" Summerville provide the laughs as Katczinsky and Tjaden and their lines are said to be among the best in the whole production.

Maxwell Anderson adapted the book and made it a faithful record from start to finish, although faced with tremendous difficulties all the way. Much of the dialogue has been changed into American idiom.

The Skouras Brothers are a bit dubious about "All Quiet." Their agents are now in session with themselves trying to think up some way to disguise the Missouri lobby so the unsuspecting patrons will not realize that it is a war picture.

Too Tragic for St. Louis Box Office Purposes But "All Quiet on the Western Front," Which Is Considered Better for the Customers Because of Its Low Comedy, Will Be Shown at the Missouri.

Miss Rogers went to New York, landed in "Top Speed" and was picked up by the Paramount people. She has been signed for five more pictures and right now she is playing opposite Jack Oakie in a forthcoming release, "The Sap From Syracuse."

All of which proves that even people who spout baby-talk sometimes live long enough to become picture stars.

The Grand Central closed Friday, business along Grand boulevard being none too good, and it will probably not open again until fall. The Skouras Brothers have lines out for a master of ceremonies to come into the Missouri and revive the wavering flapper attendance during the summer months. With Bert Frohman catching on at the Fox it has been voted that the Missouri needs some assistance of the Ed Lowry type. The master-of-ceremonies racket is becoming a thing of the past all over the country and there should be plenty of talent available for the job.

Casey Players in Closing Week at Orpheum Theater

The Arthur Casey Players will close a successful season of dramatic stock with visiting guest artists at the Orpheum Theater this week with "Your Uncle Dudley." This clever comedy has had a long run in New York and is still playing in Chicago. Pierre Watkin had the leading role of Uncle Dudley, with May B. Hurst as Ma Dixon. Arthur Pierson, Grace Troy, J. James Downing, Helen Blair, Alexander Campbell and Miss Julie Simmons of St. Louis all have good parts to play.

The Arthur Casey Players have produced in St. Louis "The Bachelor Father," "The Silent House," "The Royal Family," "The Front Page," "Skidding," "The Play's the Thing," "The Shanghai Gesture," "Little Accident," "An American Tragedy," "Let Us Be Gay" and "Your Uncle Dudley." Arthur Casey expects to reopen for a full season early next fall.

Amateur Drama Activities

THE Lafayette Park B. Y. P. U. Dramatic Club will present, Tuesday evening, May 20, at 8 p. m., at the Holy Cross Lutheran Hall, Miami and Ohio, the three-act farce comedy, "Second Childhood," by Zellah Covington and Jules Simonson, directed by Miss Lulu M. Curry.

The cast includes: Sam Story, Vernon Aubuchon, Henry Steger, Hubert Barton, Zada McDonald, Lucille Cross, Leto McDonald, Hazel Lang, Lillian Jacquot, Ardel Jacquot and Alma Rhoads.

AFTER presenting in February Barrie's "What Every Woman Knows," the Mummers, the dramatic organization of the downtown Y. M. C. A. have turned their attention to George Bernard Shaw and Eugene O'Neill. On the evening of May 23, at Brown Hall, in the Downtown Y building, they will offer "Ile" by O'Neill and "The Shewing-Up of Blanco Posnet" by Shaw.

"Ile" is perhaps one of the best-known of O'Neill's short plays and tells the tragic story of a woman on board a whaling vessel in the Arctic seas.

"Blanco Posnet" is Shaw at his best. A rollicking satire on American justice, the story tells of a horse thief and his trial before a court of the early West. The plays are being directed by R. H. Gaber, who is the dramatic director of all plays put on by the Mummers. Tickets may be obtained at the door.

The Wientge Junior Players from the Wientge School of Dramatic Expression will give a recital Saturday evening, May 24, at 8 p. m. The Wientge Senior Players will give a recital Wednesday evening at 8 p. m. Both will be in the Wednesday Club auditorium.

St. Louis Girls Get Offers.

Alice Galleher and Therese Wittler, who played in "Eyes," the production sent to New York by the St. Louis Art League to compete in the National Little Theater tournament for the Belasco cup, have had offers from Broadway producers, despite the fact that their play did not win the competition. Miss Galleher, according to word from New York, definitely refused a contract as she wishes to complete her university course. Miss Wittler is said to be undecided about entering professional ranks.

Booked for Particular Roles at the Municipal Opera

Dates for Summer Opera Set

Milton I. Shubert Also Has a Number of Well-Known Stars Under Tentative Contract for Appearances in Particular Roles During the Season.

DATES for 10 of the 12 operettas to be included in Municipal Opera's greater 1930 season have been tentatively set, according to announcement of Milton I. Shubert, general production manager for the Municipal Theater Association which presents the summer season of summer opera in Forest Park. It is impossible at the present time, however, to announce the names of two of the operas which it is planned to include in the repertory, and which the association hopes will possibly prove to be among the most important and significant of the entire season. Neither is it possible at this time to announce definitely that the operettas thus far scheduled will be presented in the order now announced, although it is most probable that they will. Circumstances over which Municipal Opera has no control, prior contracts which other producers hold with distinguished artists who are wanted for specific roles, may force a change, although every possible effort will be made to follow out in order and date this schedule:

May 30—"Nina Rosa."
June 9—"The Circus Princess."
June 16—"The Desert Song."
June 23—"The New Moon."
June 30—"Blossom Time."
July 14—"The Red Robe."
July 21—"Maytime."
July 28—"Madame Pompadour," a first American presentation of the original continental version of Leo Fall's brilliant international success.
August 4—To be announced later.
August 11—Ziegfeld's "Show Boat."
August 18 — To be announced later.

Shubert's conception of Municipal Opera as something entirely different from a stock company or a repertory organization—as what it is, in fact, a series of 12 individual and specific productions by an independent producing unit of national importance—has resulted in a host of casting problems Municipal Opera hitherto has not known. Adaptability to many roles is no longer the test for the personnel, but rather individual fitness for an individual role. It has been necessary to arrange the repertory with a view to the availability of outstanding artists for particular roles they have created or have made famous by distinguished interpretations. Thus it was not possible until this week to announce even tentative dates of productions. Nor is it yet possible to make an announcement of the artist personnel which will be complete for the season.

From the "Nina Rosa" company, which comes to St. Louis with the original cast save for few exceptions in which, according to Shubert, it has been re-enforced for the New York premiere next fall, there are some players who will remain for several weeks in the Municipal Opera ensemble. Meantime there are on the ground, or under contract others who have made names for themselves in certain roles, or whose personality is admirably fitted to those roles.

Still other distinguished players have tentatively agreed to appear in St. Louis in the course of the season, although no announcement as to who they are is possible until the contracts are all signed.

* * *

OUTSTANDING, of course, in the "Nina Rosa" company is Guy Robertson, who plays the role of the young American mining engineer. Robertson was born of a stage family, but not to the stage. His parents, distinguished players, determined to get him as far away from the footlights as possible. They sent him to Lehigh to become an engineer. College dramatics claimed him and at the end of the year he abandoned the college for the stage. His baritone voice—after experience in stock dramatic companies—carried him to musical comedy. There was an interlude of flying with the Navy's aviators in the World War. After that came the operatic field and Robertson made his first big Broadway hit in "Wildflower." Followed "Maytime," "Rose Marie," "Lovely Lady," "White Lilacs," "The Street Singer," "The Circus Princess" and then "Nina Rosa," the greatest success of his brilliant stage career.

Besides being in "Nina Rosa," Robertson is scheduled for appearances in leading baritone roles in "The Circus Princess" and "The New Moon."

Leonard Ceeley's father is a London vocal teacher, so that "Nina Rosa's" sensational tenor "comes by it honestly." Ceeley sang in grand opera in Italy and in South America before a leading role in "My Princess" won him his first success in operetta. His first American experience was in the leading role of one of "The Student Prince" companies. Then came Broadway and "The Desert Song," where his brilliant voice won high praise. He has also appeared in Broadway presentations of "Katja" and "The Countess Maritza." "Nina Rosa" served to fix his place high in the operetta of the United States. Ceeley is scheduled to appear in tenor roles in "The Desert Song," "The New Moon" and "Blossom Time," in the course of Municipal Opera's summer cycle.

Margaret Carlisle, who plays "Nina Rosa," is remembered in St. Louis for her presentation in "Show Boat" of the role of Julie, which Helen Morgan created in New York. She was born in Elgin, Ill. Destined by her mother to piano, she studied in Chicago, and later was a pupil of Josef Lhevinne. For five years she was assistant to Isaac Van Grove as an accompanist and coach with the Chicago Civic Opera and the Ravinia Park Opera. Among those whom she coached were Lucrezia Bori, Florence Macbeth, Luella Melius, Richard Bonelli and Mary McCormic. And all this time she never knew she had a voice.

As Miss McCormic's accompanist she started to Europe. The singer was accidentally struck by a trunk and was unable to keep an engagement to sing in a ship's concert. Miss Carlisle tried over the songs with someone else. And Mrs. Patrick Campbell who was sponsoring the concert insisted that Margaret Carlisle sing in the diva's place. Followed recitals in private and in public in Europe and on the Riviera, in which the young singer was established professionally before, as she explains, she had ever studied how to sing. Back in America she studied with Lazzari, and with Paul Althouse. Florenz Ziegfeld heard her in recital at Palm Beach and engaged her for "Show Boat." Later she played the prima donna role in "The New Moon." Miss Carlisle appears not only as "Nina Rosa," but in principal roles in "The Circus Princess," "The Desert Song," and "The New Moon," in "Show Boat" and as Bellabrunna, in "Blossom Time."

JACK SHEEHAN was destined originally for the priesthood but was forced to leave Villanova by the death of his father and became as the oldest of 11 children, the family's breadwinner. He went to work as a mill hand, and to eke out a slender wage began to sing in picture theaters. That started a stage career which has included successes in "Katja," "Take It From Me," and "Lovely Lady" before his triumphs in "Nina Rosa." He is scheduled for appearances in comedy and dancing roles in "The Circus Princess," "Desert Song," "The New Moon," "Alone at Last" and "The Red Robe."

Don Barclay began his stage career in St. Louis, and is well remembered for his antics in stock productions of musical comedy here and for tabloid appearances in the picture houses where he began stage work. In the interim, however, he has been a feature player in the Ziegfeld Follies and has also spent two years in London under the DeCorville management where he was a big success.

Cortez and Peggy are widely known as a dance team which has been a feature act in vaudeville and with "A Night in Spain" and a number of Winter Garden shows. Theirs has been an international success in interpreting the dances of Spain and those of the Latin

Concerning Originality

Why the Pulitzer Prize Judges Did Well to Overlook the Fact That "The Green Pastures" Was Derived From Another Literary Source—A Few Words on "The Last Mile" and the Opportunities it Missed.

By ROBERT LITTELL.

NEW YORK, May 17.

THE award of the Pulitzer Prize to "The Green Pastures" is a piece of 100 per cent justice and a pleasant surprise in the bargain. Both "The Green Pastures" and "Berkeley Square" had been mentally sidetracked as negligible by all of us who expected a strict interpretation of the terms of the Pulitzer Award. For they were not "original plays," according to the letter of the law. Mr. Balderston's play was suggested by Henry James' "The Sense of the Past," and J. C. Squire made some contribution to its early stages. "The Green Pastures" was founded upon Roark Bradford's book of Bible stories in Negro dialect—"Ol Man Adam an' His Chillun," "The Last Mile," another possible contender, seems to have been to some degree suggested by a story printed in the American Mercury.

On this basis, if the Pulitzer prize had been an annual affair in the late Sixteenth Century, William Shakspeare would hardly ever have won it, as his was the habit and happy faculty of revamping earlier scripts and stories into something all his own—without a credit line at that. In the name of Shakspeare, the musical glasses, the Bible, and Noah's Ark, three cheers then for the learned judges who have ignored technicalities and squarely met the obvious fact that "The Green Pastures" is far and away the most remarkable play of the season—or of a good many others for that matter.

To decide whether a play is good or better than others is difficult enough in most cases without the added problem of trying to decide whether or not it is an "original" play. "The Green Pastures," for instance, explicitly and squarely derived from Mr. Bradford's book, is fundamentally something very different from it, and in every real sense far more "original" than no end of plays whose paternity is most uninterestingly obscure. Originality is not nearly as much a function of exclusiveness as of excellence. In a world so full of mediocrity, the original writer is more often than not the writer who does something superlatively good, regardless of where or how he borrowed, leased, stole or overheard his material.

IN a distant future, a future so distant that by then property rights will be less important than the use made of property, suits for plagiarism will be decided according to whether the pilferer vastly improved upon the article plagiarized or not. For literature, to an amazing extent, has been a process of making silk purses from the ears of other people's sows.

All of which, of course, has nothing to do with "The Green Pastures"—an extraordinary and original play most honestly and openly arrived at from a very interesting and original book.

As a matter of fact, the plays and books which are genuinely original, with their author, and not the result of many homeward flights of the human magpie, are few and far between. A desperately honest author, if resolved to acknowledge his indebtedness to others, would find the list of things and people which had influenced him hopelessly long. Such an author, if he set down, in a candid and self-searching preface, all the brooks and brooklets tributary to his own stream, would write something very much like this:

"I wish to thank the various things and people who have contributed, for the most part quite unconsciously to the work of imagination you are about to read. For its prose style, if any, I am deeply indebted to Hawthorne, George Moore, Willa Carther, Smollet and the late Adolphus Pettigrew, who was my teacher in English for four years at Boys' Manual Training High. For its material, story, plot, idea or whatever you may call it when you have finished with it, I am most grateful to a bad story by O. Henry, which I have forgotten, to the conversation of two unknown ladies in the east side subway and to Room 419 in the Statler Hotel, without which the separate parts of this masterpiece would never have clicked into place.

"I am further indebted to my father, mother, grandfather, grandmother and all their ancestors for unwittingly conspiring to produce in me that unhappy faculty for covering paper with words known as literary talent. I am also everlastingly thankful for the suggestions, influence and the aid of the daily press, both morning and evening, the public library, the American language, Thomas Jefferson, the climate, environment, God, civilization and my digestive organs. If there are any other co-authors of this novel whom I have neglected to mention, will they please believe that my failure to recall their names is quite unintentional."

I SEEM to have landed at the end of a narrow road a good many miles from "The Green Pastures." A play about which I find it more difficult to talk than any play of recent months. In spite of which difficulty I have, from time to time, tried to say a good deal about "The Green Pastures." Always with a sense of how much too large and genuine it is for the small adjectives of an onlooker.

It is a play I don't care to go back to in words, because it seems to get larger and larger, and the words I have for it fewer and smaller, nor back to it physically for a second view of it, for fear that it will seem less breath-taking than it did the first time. How then do I feel about it? I feel like giving it the largest prize I can lay hands on. The committee of award for the Pulitzer prize evidently feels the same way, so let's have three cheers all around.

There are some other unusual and interesting plays on Broadway, one of them is "The Last Mile," that bitterly grim chapter from prison life and death which is enjoying the most amazing popularity at the Harris Theater. It is not only a stirring piece of drama, but a very solid foot-note to a great public question. That in this capacity it does not go far enough, and at some points goes in the wrong direction is the view of Mr. S. L. M. Barlow, who has written me an interesting letter about it which I take pleasure in printing in full. Mr. Barlow:

"There is one play on Broadway which it seems to me, has missed a marked opportunity to achieve significance. I do not believe that any art should concern itself with propaganda, but certainly the best and most vital theater has always been animated by the conflict of "ideas," the exciting depiction of cause and effect, and the development from reasonable motives.

"The dis-union that lies in the structure of "The Last Mile" has been amply pointed out. The lack of logic in the play, which robs it of its full melodramatic effect, is precisely due to an unwillingness, on the author's part, to face two of the urgent ideas implicit in the material.

"THE lesser opportunity missed concerns the clergyman. In act one he exudes a cheerful optimism regarding the life to come. In the last act, when men are being picked for defenestration, surely one thug might have said, "Here's the chaplain. He's unmarried. He says he's going to heaven. He says heaven is better than this. Why doesn't he offer himself?"—or other and better words to create and elaborate this situation. On the whole, the clergyman is thrown away in the play—but not out of the window.

"The other and far graver charge against the play is that it never mentions, and, foolishly for its own sake, never uses the reasons that lie at the root of prison riots. When so much tosh is written about the Welfare League, and when Mr. Osbourne's splendid efforts are being discarded out of hysteria, it seems to be the particular moment for the theater to shed a little courageous light on the subject.

"Prison riots of late have been due to three causes—and three causes alone. The first is the Baumes law. Before that law there were but few life sentences or

HOLLYWOOD, May 16.

YOUNG girls who used to flock to Hollywood, hoping to crash into the movies, even hitch-hiking across country, have practically ceased migrating here since the movies began to talk and sing and dance.

JANET GAYNOR.

A pretty face and figure no longer suffice to win movie recognition, and this fact has seemed to percolate even among the 16 and 17-year-olds — who once formed the bulk of Hollywood's movie-struck immigrants.

In the past great names have been found in the extra lists—Janet Gaynor, Clara Bow, Norma Talmadge, Marie Prevost and even those of Mary Pickford and Gloria Swanson.

But studios no longer are trying to find young girls whom they can put under contract at small salaries, to gradually train and nurse along with better and better parts until they become valuable assets.

Few girls of 16 and 17 and 18 years have the training in voice, either for talking or singing, or in dancing.

These things require study. They cannot be taught on the set as they once were.

* * *

AN estimate of the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce, recently issued, showed that less than 20 per cent of the young women who come to Hollywood now do so with the idea of entering pictures.

In past years the percentage has been as high as 80. The figures were obtained from social and welfare organizations coming in close contact with girls seeking employment.

Of the number who come here with film ambitions, less than one per cent succeed in getting even a single screen engagement and less than one-fourth of one per cent of those eventually engaged are ever seen in pictures.

The reason for this is that the girls begin as extras, working in "atmosphere shots" which often are completely eliminated in the process of editing, or even when they do remain they are cut so short as to be of no particular value to the individual.

* * *

A STORY about a superstitious woman was titled "The Lucky 13." But some exhibitors refused to buy the picture to be made from it. So it will be called "Cross Your Fingers."

* * *

Marie Dressler has had the same colored maid for 17 years.

GEORGE ARLISS.

The house Wallace Reid once owned and lived in has been purchased by Clive Brook, who will make it his residence.

Lloyd Hughes is risking his reputation as a screen hero by appearing in "Moby Dick" as a villain and in "Big Boy" as a weakling brother.

George Arliss is peculiarly faithful to his former associates in plays and silent pictures. Ivan Simpson has appeared in practically every production Arliss has offered for 15 years.

Doris Lloyd, who played with him in "Disraeli," will also be in "Old English" with him. For "The Green Goddess," Arliss asked for Alice Joyce who had played with him in the silent version many years before.

LUNCHEON conversation has it that Douglas Fairbanks has never been wholly satisfied with any of his pictures and that he hopes his next—whatever it is—will be the climax and his farewell.

He has said he would like to retire. But he doesn't want to quit without making one "great" picture; one that will go down in movie history.

He is working on his next now; that is he is analyzing every idea and suggestion with a view toward making his crowning achievement.

* * *

ALMOST everyone knows Katherine Brush had certain persons in mind when she wrote "Young Man of Manhattan." With the completion of the movie based on the book discussion over the names of the principals she drew her characters on has been renewed.

It would save a lot of argument if Miss Brush would announce whom she had in mind.

HOLLYWOOD.—Portrait of "the sweetest girl in Hollywood":

Mary Brian is one of the most interesting figures in Hollywood and at the same time the least interesting. She leads as normal and uneventful a life as yours or mine; but the fact invites curiosity because so few in positions similar to hers are so everyday-like.

MARY BRIAN.

She has always lived with her mother, who is her business manager and secretary, and her brother in an unpretentious apartment house.

Their only servant is a Filipino boy whom they hire part-time to drive their medium-priced car. Mary probably saves $400 of her estimated $500 weekly salary.

She has been employed steadily since she stepped into one of the important roles, without previous experience, of "Peter Pan" five years ago.

Much of that time has been spent posing for photographs and making "personal appearances" because she never complains at the oftentimes freakish demands of the publicity department.

* * *

SO FAR as is known her most serious love affair was with Buddy Rogers. They said she had quite a "crush" on him.

Rudy Vallee took her around some when he was here, but even correspondence between them has stopped. Richard Dix "went with her" until her mother intervened.

Her hobby is drawing and sketching. She designs many of her clothes. Her amusements are varied. She likes prize fights, art exhibitions and concerts.

There is no "temperament" in Mary's makeup. She considers long hours part of the business and endures them stoically. She will wait for hours for her cue without the least discomposure.

Demoralizing influence of talkie demands on a song-writer: Richard Whiting used to take three weeks to write one song. Now in less than a year he's composed nearly 150, one of them manufactured in 15 minutes. Surprisingly, one or two of the "carload lot" have been popular hits.

long sentences given. And the term could materially be reduced by good conduct. The prisoners quite humanly prefer death in a 'break' to life sentence in jail. The second reason is the overcrowding of the jails. Conditions are so filthy and obscene in our prisons that even the criminals cannot stand it.

"The third reason is prohibition. Prohibition has resulted not only in overcrowded prisons, but also in pernicious and sudden wealth among criminals. Crooks are rich. Crooks can afford to give thousand-dollar bribes. Not every $40-a-week keeper can look unmoved at the vast and insinuating sums now commanded by his charges.

"I believe that an intelligent use and exposition of these three fundamental motives would not only have been a service to the public, but would also have made 'The Last Mile' a better 'show.'"

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, May 17.

SOME things I'd like to do:

Wear evening clothes like Michael Arlen.

Bow to ladies like Jean Patou, the Paris dressmaker.

Mingle with important writers without feeling unimportant.

Be as modestly self effacing as Gene Tunney.

Cross the ocean and never miss a meal.

Express the personality that George M. Cohan does.

Make an after dinner speech like Montague Glass.

Train a mustache like Paul Whiteman.

Be as loyal as my dog.

Cook a meal like Robert H. Davis.

Have the self-composure of Carl L. Seitz.

Make amends for the worry I have caused those whom I love.

Spend a year in the Orient.

"It should not be proverbial that New York women never attend church," says an editorial. Nor is it. I am the fortunate husband of a lady who has not missed a single Sunday morning service in 22 years of living in New York.

I saw my ideal vaudeville performance the other night. Among the acts were: a dog act, a magician, a flip monologist, a wooden shoe dancer and a group of Japanese hand balancers. The trouble with vaudeville has been its effort to be like a musical revue.

American countries which are founded on Spanish dances. Quite different are the exotic dances of Helba Huara, who was herself born Peru, in the shadow of the Andean peaks, and who brings into the Incan scenes of "Nina Rosa" an authentic dance of the primitive culture of Peru, a dance of the serpents which, weird and thrilling, adds much to the impressiveness of the scene in the sun-worshipers' cave.

ALREADY Mr. Shubert has under tentative contract certain individual artists who will appear on Municipal Opera's stage in particular roles in the course of the summer. Such a one is Walter Woolf who jumped into a dominant position as a romantic singing actor with his success in "The Red Robe." Another is Doris Patston, the charming English ingenue who will make her debut in "The Circus Princess," and who will appear in other productions in the course of the season. She was picked by Archie Selwyn from the London cast of "The Punch Bowl Revue" and brought to this country by Florenz Ziegfeld for the ingenue role in "Louis, the 14th," in which she played opposite Leon Erroll. Other successes here were in "Katja," "Lovely Lady" and "Present Arms."

Yet another is Genevieve Naegele, remembered in St. Louis as the Mitzi of the Shubert Centenary production of "Blossom Time" when that work was seen here two seasons ago. She is to have the same role on Municipal Opera's stage this summer and is scheduled to appear also in "The Desert Song." Then there is Gladys Baxter, a New York hit in "The Countess Maritza," "Piggy" and "Cherry Blossoms," who is tentatively scheduled for some important prima donna roles in the course of the summer; and there is Hal Forde, an English comedian who came to this country with the vaudeville act of Lieut. Gitz Rice and who has become known through his comedy contributions to "The Enchantress," "Adele," "The Purple Road," "Oh Boy!", "The Love Wager," "Oh, My Dear," "Oh, Earnest!", "The Houseboat on the Styx" and "A Wonderful Night." Two important singers who are listed among the principals engaged for special roles thus far are Frederic Persons, bass-baritone, and John Clarke, tenor, while negotiations which may not be disclosed at the present time without inviting contractural difficulties will result in bringing to the stage in Forest Park this summer some of the biggest stars of operetta for one week appearances in roles they have made famous.

Having completed its task of checking the 725,145 tickets for seats in Municipal Opera's coming season and having allotted the thousands of seats included in the season subscription reservations, the Municipal Opera box office in the lobby of the Arcade Building opens Monday morning for the delivery of tickets to season subscribers who have already paid for their seats, and for the sale of season seats to new subscribers. This will continue until Saturday evening of this week, and on Monday, May 26, the box office will open for the general seat sale for "Nina Rosa" and for all ensuing performances of each operetta in the summer cycle.

Season seat reservations up to yesterday, amounted to $85,000, which is well in advance of the sum of such reservations at a corresponding date in each of the three past years.

DR. NANSEN BURIED WITH NATIONAL HONORS

Oslo Children Parade and Sing at Funeral on Norway's "Institution Day."

By the Associated Press.

OSLO, Norway, May 17.—The funeral of Dr. Fridtjof Nansen took place today in a city bright with flags and gay with music. School children wound through the streets singing national songs in celebration of the one hundred and sixteenth anniversary of "Institution Day," and Norway's noted explorer and humanitarian was honored at impressive ceremonies in the university.

Only during the actual funeral ceremonies was the gaiety hushed. The pageantry was suspended in a two-minute silence at noon, when all traffic was stopped and pedestrians stood uncovered with bowed heads.

The coffin, covered with the Norwegian national flag, lay in state in the central hall of the university, students stood guard while among the pallbearers was Capt. Otto Sverdrup, companion of Dr. Nansen in many polar adventures.

King Haakon and Crown Prince Olaf were chief mourners in an assemblage of the most eminent personages of the nation. The service was non-denominational. Dr. Nansen belonged to no religious body.

The brief ceremony ended with the playing of Grieg's funeral march after a funeral oration by Urof. S. Leland Editor, rector of the university.

Speaker Hambro of the Storting, expressed the nation's sadness at the loss of "the last great man in our present national history. Our best thanks to him," Speaker Hambro said, "Is to try to live up to his example."

Young students carried the casket from the hall to a gun carriage drawn by four black horses. The body then was taken to a crematorium, to which it was followed through the streets by many thousands of citizens.

When near the crematorium the crowds withdrew, leaving only relatives and near friends to witness the final act, which was without church ceremony.

INSURANCE BEQUESTS OF $1,000,000 SOUGHT

A plan to add to the endowment of the Masonic Home of Missouri in St. Louis, through the medium of endowment insurance on the lives of Masons throughout the State, has been devised to establish a $1,000,000 charity and improvement fund.

Under this plan a group of life insurance men, who are Masons, is being organized. Every life underwriter in Missouri, who is a member of, the Masonic order, will be enlisted in the campaign to sell endowment insurance to members who are insurable to the ultimate benefit of the Masonic Home. Members of the Eastern Star, women's auxiliary of the Masonic order, who benefit from the home thorugh the extension of its charity to members of their order, will also be included in the endowment insurance plan.

The home, which is for destitute Masons, their wives, widows and orphans, is becoming overcrowded in some departments and the children's quarters soon will be filled to capacity. These are given as reasons for an additional endowment to provide for future needs. The total income is enough to meet current expenses, it is reported, but not sufficient for replacements and needed inprovements, nor are there sufficient funds to aid destitute members who are so gravely afflicted they cannot be taken into the home.

The institution is supported at present chiefly by funds derived from deductions from initiation fees and dues of blue lodge Masons and members of the Eastern Star, together with an income from a $750,000 endowment fund.

SYMPHONY BY RADIO CONTINGENT ON FUND

$450,000 of $750,000 Goal Pledged; Weisenburger for Civic Advertising.

The proposal to have the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra give a series of one-hour Sunday evening concerts over radio station KMOX next winter is contingent upon success in raising the full amount sought in the campaign now going on for a $750,000 golden jubilee fund for support and development of the orchestra for the ext three years, according to I. A. Stevens, chairman of the campaign.

More than $450,000 has been pledged, and Stevens believes the remainder can be obtained. The campaign is being continued from headquarters in Boatmen's Bank Building, following intensive solicitation by a group of workers who for a time made daily reports at luncheon.

L. W. Baldwin, president of the Symphony Society, announced recently that the fund would make it possible to give the radio concerts as a civic enterprise which would advertise St. Louis. Part of the plan is to have a carefully prepared account of the civic and commercial advantages of the metropolis read some time during each program by a trained announcer. The Sunday "pop" concerts would be abandoned in favor of the radio series.

Weisenburger Indorses Plan.

"St. Louis' metropolitan prestige is based on what the rest of the world thinks of us, hence the plan of the St. Louis orchestra to broadcast a civic hour of good music, interspersed with succulent facts on the city, is a most promising departure. It's a step forward in national regard. It will attract the attention of our trade area and have a real commercial significance.

"Because of the strictly business-building possibilities of such a radio program, the Chamber of Commerce not only wants to praise the idea, but offers its assistance in providing the character of material on St. Louis for broadcasting that will be in keeping with the orchestral portion.

"In contributing the time for this hour, station KMOX is doing a worthy civic service. You may count on this organization, and we trust St. Louis business men will be quick to realize the importance of this radio hour as a source of good will and market enhancement."

New Subscribers Exceed 1000.

The $450,000 pledged towards the fund is from more than 1000 new subscribers to the orchestra, as well as old guarantors. Stevens says this is gratifying to the Campaign Committee as it indicates a popular interest. Small contributions are appreciated as much as big ones, he said.

Other cities raise much more money from private sources for support of symphony orchestras than St. Louis does, Stevens pointed out. One improvement contemplated, if the fund is raised, is to increase the number of players in the string section. There are 50 now, and some of these occasionally must "double in brass," which critics believe weakens the band when it should be strong. The Detroit orchestra has 60 string players, Cleveland 59 and Cincinnati 57.

EX-POLICEMAN KILLS SELF AFTER QUARREL WITH WIFE

Mrs. C. H. Smith Says Dispute Over "Another Woman" Had Continued Throughout Week.

The wife, Mrs. Lulu Smith, said she and her husband had been quarrelling all week about another woman with whom she charged Smith was associating. She left home Friday night, Mrs. Smith said, staying at the home of a son. When she returned yesterday morning the quarrel was resumed and Mrs. Smith ran to the home of a neighbor, fearing her husband would harm her.

While at the neigbor's home she heard a shot. Police found Smith on the floor in the house, shot through the right chest. He was taken the City Hospital where he died a short time later. He was 54 years old and had been on the police force from 1901 to 1912.

A PLAGUE of LOCUSTS Again Darkens Egypt

A large female "saga" locust in the act of depositing her eggs.

But the Scourge, So Eloquently Described in the Bible and Which Has Stricken So Many Countries, Is Now Being Fought With All the Resources of Modern Science.

By a Member of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

A PLAGUE of locusts threatens Egypt again. The British Parliament has been asked to appropriate $3,000,000 to aid in checking the destruction. Already certain sections resemble armed camps as the natives prepare to combat this crawling, flying, hopping blight. Special machines and chemicals as well as more primitive means are being used, according to word from the infested areas.

From time immemorial the locust plague has been a scourge of mankind. These insects, of various species, infest nearly the entire world. They are found in this country, in South America, in Europe and Asia. But it is in Egypt and around Jerusalem, in the Holy Land, that the terrible destruction of the locust plague has most often been worked.

In the Bible there is an account of how the locusts descended upon Egypt at the time of the exodus of the Israelites:

"And Moses stretched forth his rod over the land of Egypt, . . . and when it was morning, the east wind brought in the locusts. And the locusts went up over all the land of Egypt; . . . very grievous were they. . . . For they covered the face of the whole earth, so that the land was darkened; and they did eat every herb of the land, and all the fruit of the trees, . . . and there remained not any green thing . . . through all the land of Egypt. Then Pharaoh . . . said I have sinned . . . entreat the Lord that he may take away from me this death only. . . . And the Lord turned a mighty west wind, which took away the locusts, and cast them into the Red Sea; there remained not one locust in all the coasts of Egypt."

One of the worst plagues in recent years occurred in 1915 in Syria and Palestine. They appeared suddenly in the neighborhood of Jerusalem in such numbers as to darken the sun. But even before they were seen a noise, as of the distant rumbling of waves, could be heard. They settled in the largest numbers at Bethlehem, where the natives killed tons of them for the small bonus offered by the Government. But they could make no real impression upon the millions of swarming insects. These innumerable hosts at once prepared for the destruction that was to follow by depositing their eggs in the ground. It is estimated that from a space 39 inches square some 60,000 locusts can emerge.

"ONE evening it was heard that the locusts had already reached the German colony and the railroad station, and as we went out the next day to see them, scarcely had our carriage swung around from the Jaffa Gate than we found the white road already black with them. Ever in the same direction they pushed up the 'Western Hill,' still commonly called Zion, even entering the houses about the 'Tomb of David.' The roads now became so slippery from the masses of the little, greasy bodies crushed beneath the horses' hoofs that the horses could scarcely keep a footing. . . . While still in the first or larva stage, they seemed to hop much like fleas, so that when anything neared their thickened masses it seemed as if the entire surface of the ground moved, producing a most curious effect upon one's vision and causing dizziness, which in some was so severe as to produce a sensation not unlike seasickness."

They stripped whole areas absolutely bare, despite the most determined efforts of the Government. The olive groves were so completely stripped that there was scarcely enough oil for the holy lamps. The damage done was incalculable.

Since that time methods of fighting the locust plague have greatly improved, but nevertheless all of Egypt is alarmed, according to Associated Press reports. Superstitious fears are being revived, fears that date back to Biblical times. Many of the natives are inclined to regard the coming of the insect swarms fatalistically, as a decree which it is useless to dispute. But scientists are on the ground, English and American, and this time man may win the battle of the locusts, after so many centuries of defeat.

Dr. Andrew J. Bass Worked for Months on a Murder Plot That He Considered Fool Proof, but Too Much Scientific Talk Proved His Undoing.

Dr. Andrew J. Bass.

By a Member of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine Staff

WHEN the body of a murdered man was found in the weeds beside a highway near the village of Gravette, Arkansas, a short time ago, Sheriff Edgar Fields was summoned from Bentonville, the nearby county seat, to take charge of the situation. Fields dropped his preparations for a forthcoming grand jury session and came on the run. The job ahead looked like a big one.

Serving his first term as Sheriff, Edgar Fields had not yet become so calloused to the duties of office as to make a perfunctory ceremony of a murder investigation. It challenged him. Murdered men aren't found very often in Benton County, Arkansas. In the main, it's a law-abiding community. Moonshiners operate in the hills around and about and once in a while somebody steals an automobile tire, but lawlessness in its more violent forms is infrequently encountered. So the Sheriff was not a seasoned manhunter. He was dealing with a problem comparatively new to him.

But he pitched into the problem and went to work. Just how competently he worked is indicated by the fact that within three days he had the murderer locked up in the Benton County Jail and had thwarted a $200,000 life-insurance fraud. As subsequent events showed, this rural officer, in the situation which arose, proved to be more than a match for an educated man, a university graduate, a professional man, who had spent months concocting an elaborate plot which he thought was fool proof. And the strangest thing about it was that the Sheriff was able to sense his directions and bring this fantastic structure tumbling down without consciously realizing just why he did it. He acted on a hunch.

THE case I refer to is the now famous case of the retired Columbia (Missouri) dentist, Dr. Andrew J. Bass, who is awaiting trial for the murder of his friend and fellow conspirator, William Robert Pearman, Columbia automobile mechanic. The doctor probably will make a determined fight for life on a plea of insanity, but so far as the murder is concerned, not much, apparently, remains to be disclosed.

To a Post-Dispatch reporter, John T. Rogers, the doctor has made a full confession of how he plotted to defraud the Lincoln National Life Insurance Company of Fort Wayne, Indiana, of $200,000; how he drew Pearman into the conspiracy; how Pearman, using an assumed name, took out insurance policies and assigned them to Dr. Bass; how they searched for a victim to be killed in Pearman's place and how, finally, Pearman himself was caught in the meshes of his own net and was slain by another paid accomplice of the doctor; how the doctor and this accomplice then hauled the body to a remote section of Arkansas and threw it out beside the highway in the hope that upon finding it the inexperienced local officers would bungle the case and becloud the trail until it could no longer be followed. It was a fantastic plot that dipped into the underworld and ascended to the heights of high finance, but it finally fell to earth at the hands of a small-town Sheriff. And it fell because the "inexperienced local officers" didn't bungle.

Sheriff Fields didn't have very much to go on when he took up the investigation at the scene where the body was found, but he quickly took note of three main facts. It was clear the man had been murdered and was not a suicide, because there were three bullet holes in his head. A suicide could have fired but one. In the second place, he had been killed somewhere else and his body had been hauled to this point and thrown out beside the road. That seemed evident from the fact that there was little blood to be seen on the ground and from the further fact that the rigid body was doubled up, with the knees under the chin. If a man is killed when in such a position, the body, if unhampered, will straighten out as the muscles relax and rigor mortis sets in. If, however, it is forcibly held in a cramped position until after rigor mortis has set in, its position becomes fixed and it remains doubled up. Such appeared to have been the circumstances in this case, indicating the body had remained for several hours in some compartment, probably an automobile, before it had been thrown out. The third point tentatively established was the man's name. An identification card in his wallet indicated he was William Folta of the Huckins Hotel, Texarkana, Arkansas.

WHO was William Folta and how did his body happen to be in Benton County, which is 200 miles from Texarkana? That was the next puzzle to solve. Nobody around Gravette or Bentonville had ever heard of William Folta. But there was still another very tangible piece of evidence. In a pocket of the man's coat was found a letter, addressed to Folta, from a lawyer in Texarkana. The letter concerned a land deal in which Folta was involved with a Dr. A. J. Bass of Columbia, Missouri, and asked Folta to have Dr. Bass come to Texarkana to complete some phase of the land transaction.

Sheriff Fields called up the Texarkana lawyer. Yes, the lawyer knew Folta slightly but wasn't sure he could identify him. "Better call Dr. Bass at Columbia," the lawyer said. "He knows Folta well." So the Sheriff called Dr. Bass.

The doctor was shocked and grieved to hear of Folta's death. He said he would come down the next day and try to identify the body and he did so.

Dr. Bass confirmed the previous identification. Yes, it certainly was William Folta, he said. There could be no mistake. He had sold some Arkansas land to Folta and had known him for quite a while. Poor Folta! What a terrible thing! Who could have wanted to kill Folta?

So the doctor talked. He kept on talking when it wasn't really necessary, about the certainty of its being Folta and about what a terrible thing it was to find him murdered. He said Folta was originally from Martinsburg, Missouri, and that some members of his family still lived there. He had disappeared 17 years ago and the family had given him up as dead. He had been in the Orient, had returned several years ago, but had not yet apprised his relatives that he was still alive. What a shock it would be to them to find him, after 17 years, and then find he had just been killed!

THE Sheriff and everybody else was satisfied by this time that the dead man was really Folta, whoever Folta was. Certainly there appeared to be no reason for doubting the doctor's statements. Dr. Bass looked like a reliable, responsible man and acted like a gentleman. He was of rather distinguished appearance, tall and of powerful, athletic build. With his dignified bearing, his coarse gray hair, his courteous manner and polished speech, he typified the prosperous retired professional man which he was. The Bentonville folk treated him very respectfully. Had he gone on his way after a sufficient identification of the body, all might have been well for him. But the doctor liked to talk. Even though nobody had questioned his previous assertions, he kept on telling how positive he was that this man was William Folta. Why, he had sold Folta 3100 acres of land in Miller County, Arkansas, last fall. Then he got to talking about the wonders of science. He told about being a scientific man himself.

"As an example of the wonders science can now perform," he told Sheriff Fields, "take this man Folta. I happen to know that Folta underwent an operation for appendicitis a few years ago, but you won't find any scar on his body. The scar was removed by means of an electric needle. They can do wonderful things with electric needles nowadays."

THE Sheriff didn't say anything then, but this scientific discourse left him suspicious. Especially that remark about the scar puzzled him. He had examined the body carefully and hadn't seen the faintest trace of a scar.

"When the doctor said Folta's scar had been removed with an electric needle, it knocked me cold as a wedge," the Sheriff afterwards related. "I whispered to one of my deputies, 'This fellow is too scientific and talks too much. I've a good mind to arrest him right now.' But I didn't do it. I went home, instead, and lay awake half the night worrying about him. The scar business wasn't all. The day before I had told him I thought I'd better send to Martinsburg for William Folta's folks to come down and identify the body, and he took a great interest in trying to persuade me not to. He said he'd known Folta for years as a prosperous land speculator and he thought his identification ought to be enough. It didn't look right to me. I didn't feel right until I got up the next morning and went down and put him in jail."

So it happened. Before he was aware that he had excited the faintest suspicion, Dr. Bass was behind cell bars.

"What am I being arrested for?" he demanded.

"For first degree murder," replied the Sheriff as he turned the key in the lock.

And for the life of him, the Sheriff couldn't have told at that moment why he had charged Dr. Bass with mur-

In the Three Years That Have Followed the Memorable Flight to Paris, Airplane Designs Have Changed So Radically That the Old "Spirit of St. Louis" Is Now Obsolete.

Radial motor of the type that carried Lindbergh to Paris.

SUPPOSE from out of the West there came again the same tall, slim, blue-eyed, tousle-haired youngster who surprised the world just three years ago by his sudden nonstop flight from New York to Paris. Suppose Lindbergh suddenly decided to celebrate the third anniversary of his historic flight, on May 20 and 21, by making another hop over the same route.

What a change there would be! It was Captain Charles Augustus Lindbergh, little known then except in the flying fraternity, taken none too seriously even up to the last minute preparatory to that great flight. It is Colonel Lindbergh today, if you please—still after three years the greatest hero of American youth.

The change is not to be noted so much, however, in Lindbergh himself as in the airplane he would fly today as compared to the one he flew in 1927.

Today Lindbergh's ship—if he were to try that memorable hop again—would embody the improvements resulting from three years of most remarkable aeronautic progress. In these three years so much has been done in aviation that hardly anything, excepting perhaps the fundamental theory of flying, remains unchanged.

It already looks old-fashioned, the ship that Lindbergh rolled out of the hangar at Roosevelt Field, near New York, the morning of Friday, May 20, in 1927.

IN THE pointed nose of the Ryan monoplane was a nine-cylinder radial motor. Back of the motor was the gas tank that Lindbergh had installed to carry the extra gasoline he would need for the 3625-mile flight from New York to Paris. That, with the regular tanks in the wings above him, enabled him to carry 452 gallons of fuel.

Directly above the tank the wings spread out in monoplane fashion to a width of 46 feet, 10 feet wider than the wingspread of the stock airplanes Ryan then manufactured, in order to afford the greater lift needed for the increased weight of fuel.

Just behind the tank, hidden by the wings, sat Lindbergh, his rather meager instrument board before him and a periscope reaching from his eye level upward and out above the wing-top, enabling him to see ahead.

That ship embodied the very latest in aeronautic design at the time, yet the very next year Ryan had discarded the model for one considerably improved in design and structure. Today the Ryan factory at San Diego turns out comfortable cabin monoplanes, hardly recognizable in comparison with their famous predecessor of three years ago. Lindbergh's plane today, if he were to repeat that flight, would be quite different from this one of three years ago, everyone in aviation readily concludes. But what type of plane that would be is still a matter of personal prejudice and conjecture.

The best guess ought to be based on Lindbergh's own choice today, the plane he just bought for himself and Mrs. Lindbergh—a single-motored, low-wing, Lockheed Sirius. Note that Lindbergh sticks to the monoplane.

The monoplane has gained considerably in favor over the biplane, due to its decreased frontal area and resulting lower wind resistance, its greater maneuverability and its improved construction. The monoplane most assuredly has the choice for this supposed Atlantic flight.

Every feature of Lindbergh's new plane is designed to help increase speed. At the nose of the ship and directly over the entire motor is one of the most advanced features in aviation—the cowling designed in the laboratories of the National Advisory Committee of Aeronautics, by which the speed of the plane is raised by as much as 25 miles an hour. It is so designed that the stream of air passing over the motor strikes a minimum of motor underneath. That cowling undoubtedly would be a feature of Lindbergh's trans-Atlantic plane, as it is of his present plane.

Underneath that cowling would be a much more efficient motor than the one he used three years ago, although that was considered then the very latest in aeronautical engines.

LINDBERGH'S motor of 1927 was a Wright Whirlwind of the J-5 type. It was a nine-cylinder radial air-cooled engine, weighing 500 pounds and developing 220 horsepower when it turned over 2000 times a minute. That means it weighed more than two and a half pounds to the horsepower. This is quite an advantage over an automobile engine of similar power, which weighs as much as 12 pounds to the horsepower. But it is already a clumsy machine when compared with almost any airplane motor of today.

Today, for instance, the latest Wright Whirlwind—for easy comparison—weighs 15 pounds less than Lindbergh's did, and develops 300 horsepower to the old one's 200, and at the same speed. That makes it weigh only a little over a pound and a half to the horsepower—a pound per horsepower less than the J-5.

The Wasp motor in Lindbergh's Lockheed Sirius is somewhat larger than the Wright J-6, which was used for comparison with its predecessor, the J-5. But its weight per horsepower is about the same. The Wasp weighs 690 pounds, but it develops 420 horsepower at 2000 revolutions a minute. With the Wasp motor in its nose, Lindberg's Lockheed has a high speed of 175 miles an hour and a cruising speed of 140 miles an hour. When the "Lone Eagle" crossed the Atlantic three years ago, he averaged about 115 miles an hour, with a 10 to 15-mile-an-hour wind pushing him on from behind. These larger motors would consume more gasoline, hour by hour, than the J-5 did, but the total gasoline consumption on the flight from New York to Paris would be less, since the higher-powered motors would drive the ship across the ocean in much less time. In 1927 Lindbergh made the jump in 33 1-2 hours. Today he could make the 3625 miles in 28 hours and have enough gasoline left to go 500 miles farther. There is, however, more than a strong probability that Colonel Lindbergh might discard the gasoline motor for the latest innovation in aeronautic engineering—the Packard Diesel. When this motor was introduced for the first time at the Detroit Aircraft Show recently, it "hogged" the whole show. Everybody was enthusiastic over its possibilities.

The Packard Diesel weighs slightly more than the J-5 that took Lindbergh across the Atlantic, yet its horsepower rating is higher, and consequently its weight per horsepower is about a quarter-pound less.

ASSUMING, however, that the Diesel is about equal to Lindbergh's original motor in weight and power, its advantages arise from its utter simplicity of construction, the great reduction in number of parts, its more positive fuel feed, its elimination of electrical ignition and consequent reduction of fire hazard, the lack of radio interference and the more efficient consumption of the fuel carried.

As a result, with the use of a Diesel motor, Lindbergh would be required to carry 20 per cent less fuel by weight, or 30 per cent less by volume, than he did originally. The advantages of this are obvious.

Of considerable importance to Lindbergh in this second assumed trans-Atlantic flight would be his entire freedom from radio interference. Although the modern gasoline motors can be grounded to minimize radio interference on the plane, the Diesel's lack of electrical ignition eliminates this entirely.

Radio apparatus, of course, would be a highly-important feature of such a cross-ocean plane. It has been undergoing severe tests for the last three years.

It has guided pilots along the most hazardous routes by means of an ingenious dot and dash system, and has kept them informed of weather conditions along every lap ahead of them.

Further to assure his safe crossing, Lindbergh today would carry such instruments with him as guided former Lieutenant James H. Doolittle, that intrepid stunter, safely through his hazardous experiments in blind flying.

Perhaps the most valuable of these instruments was the artificial horizon, a gyroscopic arrangement by which Doolittle was able to tell whether he was flying nose up or down, whether he was tilting to left or right.

DOOLITTLE also carried a highly sensitive barometric altimeter, by which he could tell, down to 10 feet, how high he was from the ground. But supplementing even this, Lindbergh might take with him the radio echo altimeter, an invention of Dr. E. F. W. Alexanderson of the General Electric Company, which throws a radio wave outward and catches it on the rebound, thus telling by the time it takes for this operation exactly how high the pilot is from the ground or water.

Airplanes are made today so that they can right themselves of their own accord. This is called "inherent stability." But further to assure the plane's stability, Lindbergh might have an automatic pilot attached to his plane. Thus, if by chance he fell asleep under the monotonous drone of the motor, and the airplane tended to bank or dive unduly, this Robot would right the plane without the least attention from the pilot.

The instrument to which Lindbergh ascribed his success in staying on his prescribed route across the ocean is the earth inductor compass. This was a wind-driven motor with a magnetic field that was constantly kept parallel to the magnetic field of the earth by means of a controller on the instrument board. Every 50 miles or so Lindbergh had to turn the dial of this controller in order to keep the compass field parallel, and therefore, in neutral to the earth's field. Any deviation from this field would show on another dial before him and tell him exactly in what direction or how much off his course he was flying.

The Atlantic has been conquered. Soon it will be the Pacific, and soon the entire globe will be traversed in a week or so. Swift developments in aviation have made these achievements possible, and others inevitable.

SAVED from DEATH by a Friendly Lion

BLOOMINGTON, Indiana.

"LADIES and gentlemen! Hagenbeck-Wallace now present Cap-tain Clyde Beatty, the youngest and greatest wild animal trainer in the worrrld, and his thirrrty-four li-ons and tigers, the only mixed act of jungle-bred cats to be found in any show on earrth!"

A young man in white breeches and boots dashes to the front of the middle ring. He wears a belt and holster, a pistol butt protruding. He bows low and smiles, tosses his tropical helmet aside, picks up a long snake of a whip, and runs to the iron door of the great cage that occupies the center ring. Through the first door he goes, and through a second. He's in the ring now, hurrying to the other side. Rrrrrr. Rrrrrr. Rrrrrr. Lions and tigers, no end of lions and tigers, come spitting, snarling, clawing, into the cage. The whip cracks. A lion makes a pass at him with its claws. He jumps back. Crack-cracckle goes the whip, the beast snarls and turns away. A tigress brushes up against a lioness, they face each other, clawing, screaming. Bang, bang, goes Beatty's blank pistol. They break and snarl at him. But he's already hopped away, snapping his whip at some other great cat that makes unfriendly gestures, bluffing her off with the legs of the chair that's always in his hand.

Bang goes the pistol. Crack goes the whip. Rrrrrrr go the tigers and RRRR-Rrr-RRRrr go the lions. Snarling, clawing, snarling, spitting. Thirty-four tremendous beasts in a cage only 40 feet in diameter. And one man. And if anyone thinks they're pretending to be mean, then that one doesn't know the half of it.

The plain facts of the case are that these beasts don't like Beatty. They don't like any man. Or any woman. They, or their forbears, come from stock that roamed the jungles of Asia or Africa, many of them once lived free and easy and viciously in those lands themselves. They are captives because they can't help it; they don't want to be. And they hate this man who makes them do his bidding. All but one. All but one great lion among them. He seems to have some strange affection for this young man who cracks the whip and bangs the pistols in his ears. This one great beast, this 600-pounder, this Prince, has proved his friendship in a peculiarly definite manner. For a little while ago he did for Beatty the greatest possible favor. No man could have done more, and on this occasion no man could have done as much. Prince saved Beatty's life. And Prince almost sent a tigress to join its Sumatran ancestors as he did it.

AS FAR as Beatty knows, it is the only time an animal trainer was saved from destruction by one of his own captives. It was a noble deed, and it has got Beatty and Prince nationwide mention. It has also served to prove that that much-maligned fellow, the circus press agent, need not always trade upon his imagination to find unusual yarns. It was a strange and dramatic act that Prince performed. This is how it happened:

The Hagenbeck-Wallace Circus winters in Peru, Indiana. Spring comes and the big show gets ready for business. The advance men start out. Flamboyantly-colored spreads appear on the billboards, depicting "Captain" Clyde Beatty in the ring amidst his cats. The circus moves out of Peru to its first show town. This year Kokomo, in Indiana, is chosen for the opening day. On the day before comes the one and only dress rehearsal. That, too, is in the Indiana town.

DRESS rehearsal day. Time for the feature of all the features. Beatty's in the cage, ringed round by lions and by tigers. Already he has made a great, evil beast of a tigress come sliding off its platform, crawling on its belly half across the ring to him.

She snarls and spits, with her eyes always upon him. She would like to slide beneath him, and then, tiger-like, turn upon her back and rend him with her razor-like claws. But he is wary. As she advances he retreats, always close to the ground himself, always on one knee, always with that protecting chair on the ground before him, its legs sticking out before her face.

Already Beatty has looked an ill-tempered male lion in the eye, Beatty's face not many inches from the beast's. And Beatty has bluffed the creature off, made him lower his head and turn tail and walk away.

Now comes the act's finale. He is building a pyramid of living cats. One of the biggest of the lions sits on a platform high toward the top of the cage and at its rear. Other platforms, at varying degrees of height, slope down from this topmost point occupied by the tawny male. Tigers are on some of the stands, lions on others. Lions and tigers within inches of each other, and many of them snarling back and forth, slapping out ill-naturedly with their great paws.

Crackle-crack-crack, goes Beatty's whip. An obdurate tiger, a stubborn lion, lurk in the offing, refusing to heed the trainer, failing in their part of the bargain to build this living pyramid. Bang-bang, goes the gun; slap, goes the whip, ruffling the cats' hides not a whit. Beatty, on his toes, looking now over his shoulder, now in front of him, makes for them with his chair. They snarl, and leap to their places.

Beatty makes a turn, another cat, as usual, is near him; they always are; they're all about him. And then, as he turns, a tigress of some 350 pounds, Trudy, a newcomer to the show, "tries him out," as all cats do, sooner or later. She makes a leap at him, he sidesteps, but she leaps again, hurls her weight upon him, throws him to the ground, corners him next the bars of the cage, beneath the metal legs of a platform. Down he goes and the cat, lightning-like, is on him. Her claws rip his bare forearm, she bares her teeth, she's after his throat. Now another tiger sweeps her paw down upon him, tearing his shoulder. Trudy's hard at him; one sweep of her teeth at his jugular vein and he's gone. He throws up a protecting arm; her teeth sink into his wrist. She tears his other arm with her claws. Shouts, screams, yells from outside the ring. The great cats are nervous. Like as not all of them, 34 of them, will leap upon him. Then from across the ring a great body hurtles through the air. It lands straight upon the tigress Trudy's flanks. It sinks its claws deep into those flanks, buries its sharp teeth in her hide. It tosses her aside, slashing at her, biting her, clawing her terribly.

Trudy—the tiger that attacked her trainer.

Beatty, lithe and quick himself, and with the terror of death urging him, is up on his feet. A long stick is hurried to him through the bars of the cage. He's weak and bleeding, but he grabs the stick, pulls out his pistol, rushes that great lion, Prince, away from the battered Trudy, and quiets the beasts. His whip snaps and cracks. He looks them in the eye. He's been very much down, but he wants them to know he's not out. Crack. Crackkkle. Bang. Bang. Bang. He looks them in the eye. He has bluffed them out of it, just as he has done time and again. The circus "doc" can mend the wounds.

BEATTY and I talked it over a few days later here at Bloomington. His arms were still bandaged, were still with deep, nasty wounds. He hadn't entirely regained his strength, but there seemed nothing wrong with his composure. He is a young man, only 24, but I would have judged him at least 32 or 33.

His rescue by Prince, he said, surprised him almost as much as it did anybody else. Not that Prince hasn't always been a little different from his other cats. But one cat rescuing a man from another cat is at best an unusual occurrence.

Prince, says Beatty, is about 9 years old. Beatty's had him about six years. Prince is "jungle bred," that is, he was born in the jungle. That's the way Beatty likes them best. These cats, like Trudy, who've come to the circus from commercial zoos, they haven't the fear of men that the jungle-bred beasts have. For the zoo cats, often born in captivity, have got used to men.

Prince was born in some far-off African jungle a little before Beatty started in the circus business. Beatty did that just before he graduated from high school in his home town of Chillicothe, Ohio. A circus had come to town and the cats interested the boy. He talked with the trainer. The trainer invited him to join up. Beatty did, running away from home to do it. But that didn't last long. A few days later the circus got to a town, and there was Beatty Sr. waiting to take his son

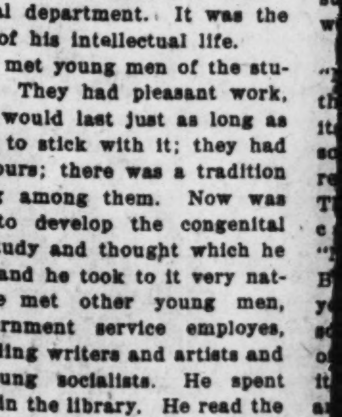
It is far better, usually, to set down the facts of a man's life, be they great, or unusual, or good, or bad—and let the reader get the hallowed pleasure of discovering them for himself. In other words, "My! Think of that!" But rules, like the Constitution of the United States, are always open to amendment. It is here then asserted, without first producing the facts, that Percival Chubb, the leader of the St. Louis Ethical Society, which holds forth at Sheldon Memorial, 3646 Washington boulevard, has the richest heritage in the field of up-and-coming modern social thought of anyone in the greater St. Louis area. For Mr. Chubb was not only a member of the London Fabian Society before its most famous member and its best publicist, Mr. George Bernard Shaw, but Mr. Chubb was a charter member of the society from which the Fabian was an offshoot. And if one has any further doubt of the Fabian Society's potency in present-day world affairs, it is only necessary to add that among the little group of almost unknown socialists, who were among its members in its early days, were Ramsay MacDonald, Great Britain's present Prime Minister, and the now famous economist, Sidney Webb, who was forced to suffer the humiliation of becoming Lord Passfield of Passfield Corners, so he might represent the Labor party in the House of Lords. And Chubb was a Fabian before either of these worthy gentlemen. Chubb is an Englishman—that is, he was born in Devonport, in Devonshire, in 1860. He attended the grade school in his home city, but, he says, despite his rather sedentary work today, he was not especially bookish as a boy. He captained one of the school's cricket teams. Finished with his Devonport education, he went to London and entered preparatory school, the School of the Stationers' Company, a public school, one of the old guild institutions. He got admittance to it by way of his uncle—he was a stationer. It is interesting to note that this man who later became a college instructor and lecturer never went to college himself. He couldn't afford it.



INSTEAD, he went into the prosaic business of "sailing ships across the sea"—in a London merchant's office. He was a sea-coast boy and the lure of ships still held him. He remained an office mariner for five years. Then he decided on the Government service. He would make it his career. He took the examinations—severe ones—for the Local Government Board, made the grade, and landed in the legal department. It was the beginning of his intellectual life.

Here he met young men of the student type. They had pleasant work, work that would last just as long as they cared to stick with it; they had pleasant hours; there was a tradition of learning among them. Now was the time to develop the congenital taste for study and thought which he possessed, and he took to it very naturally. He met other young men, some government service employes, others budding writers and artists and wistful young socialists. He spent much time in the library. He read the Americans, Emerson, Whitman and that much neglected and great American, Thoreau. Emerson, he says, Americanized him while he was still in England. He began to think for himself, to find his own philosophy, immature though it was at the time. He became acquainted with such then unrewarded young men as Havelock Ellis and Ramsay MacDonald, Sidney Webb and Bernard Shaw. There was a young man named H. G. Wells. And

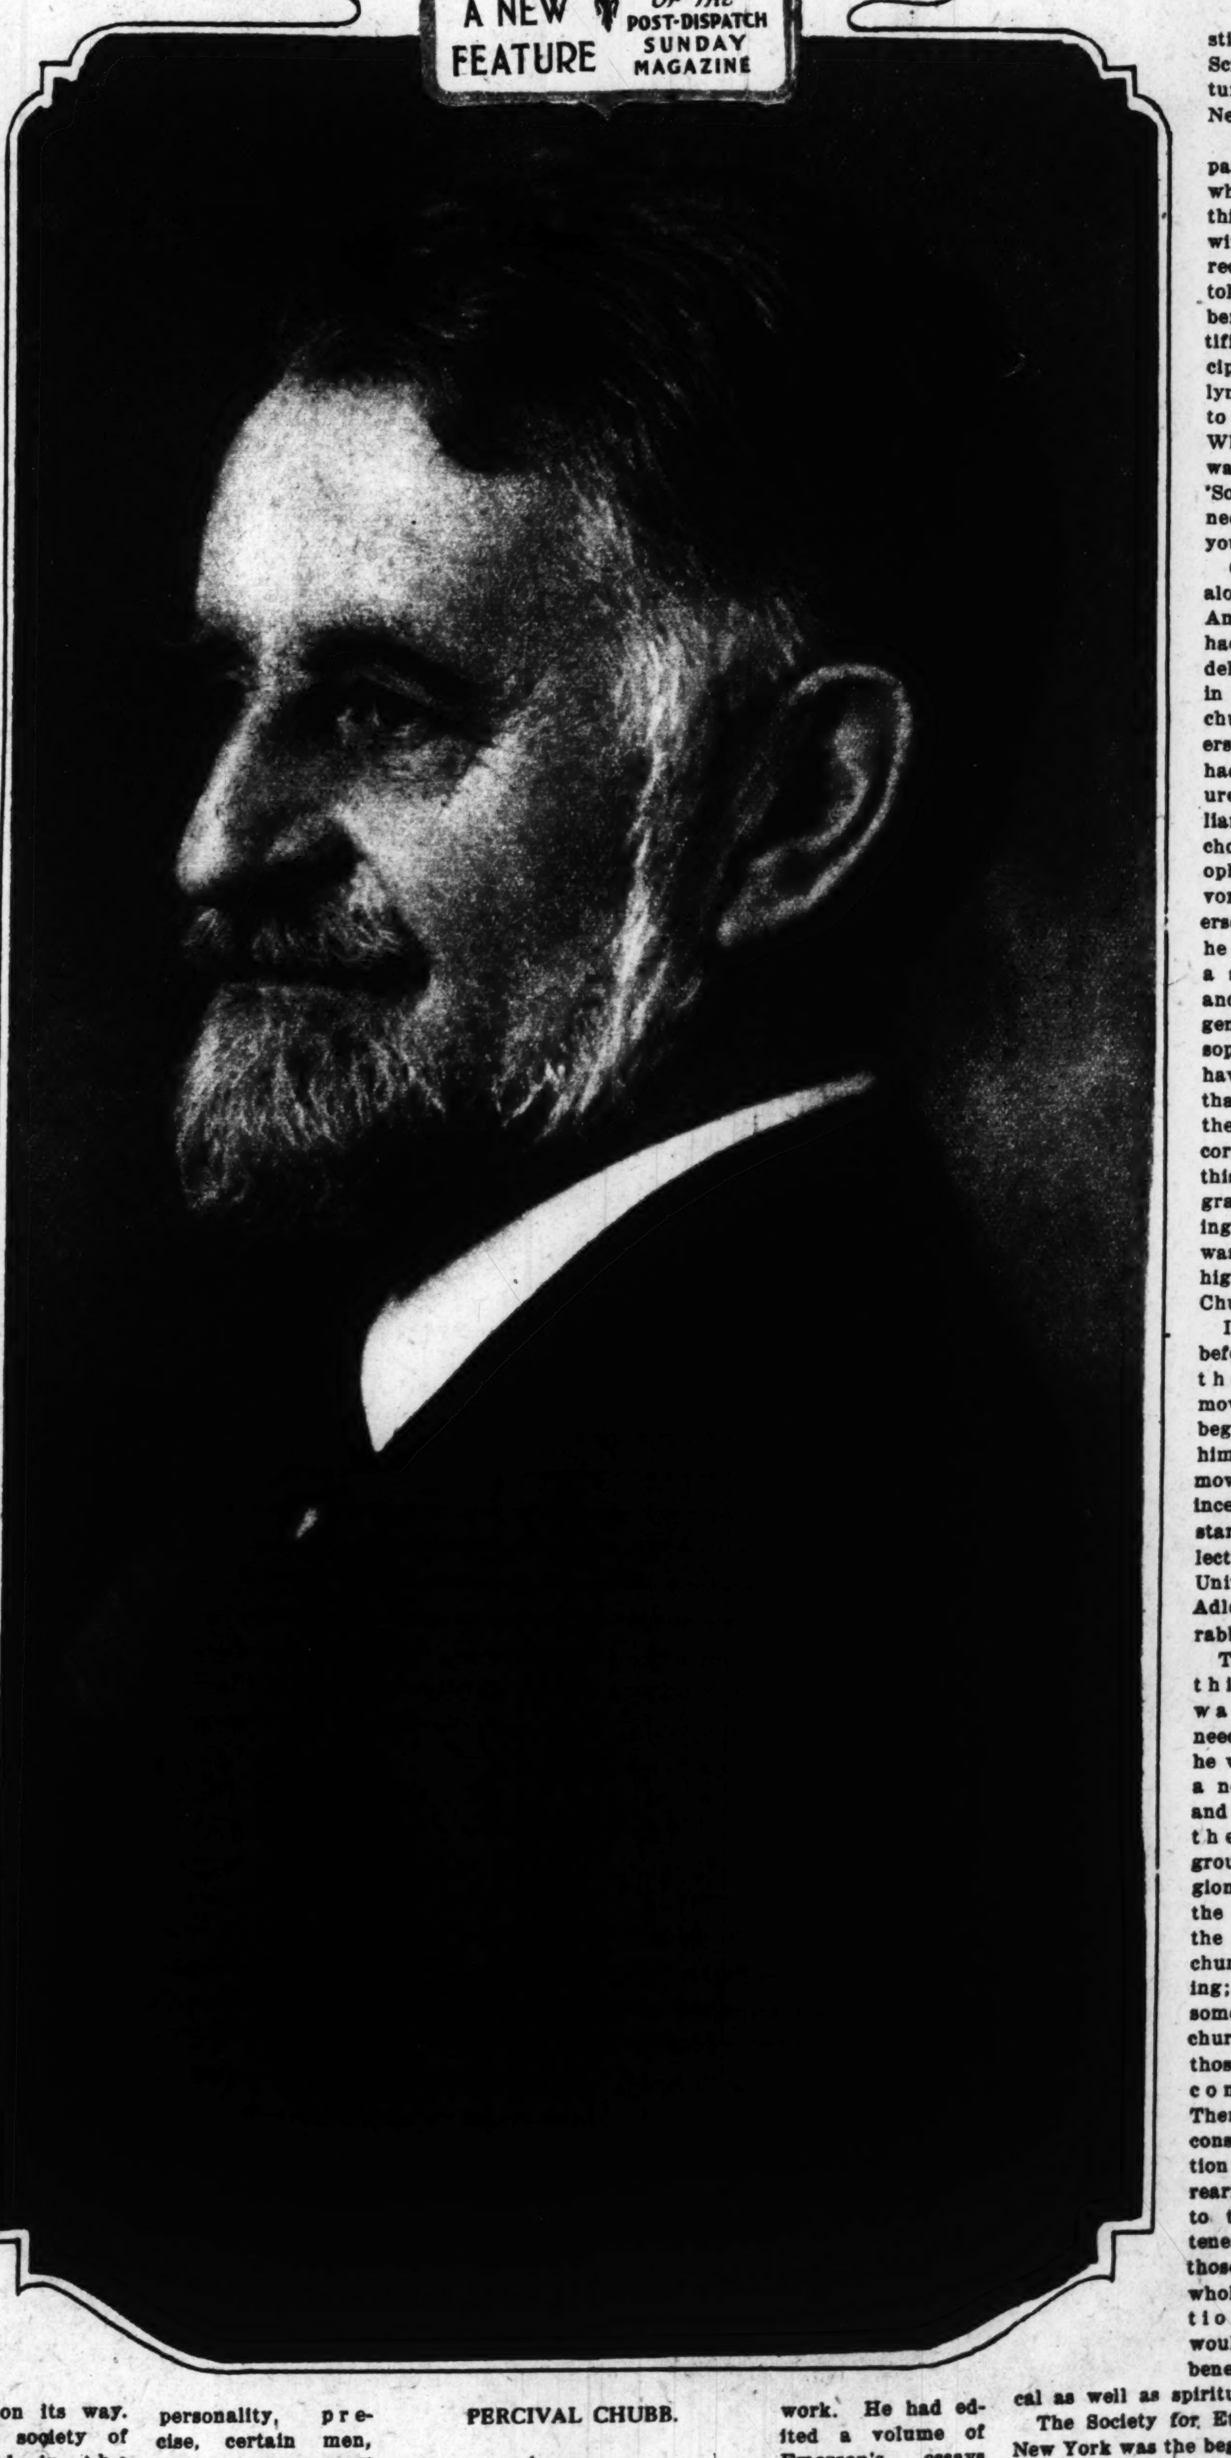
He met other young men, some government service employes, others budding writers and artists and wistful young socialists. He spent much time in the library. He read the Americans, Emerson, Whitman and that much neglected and great American, Thoreau. Emerson, he says, Americanized him while he was still in England. He began to think for himself, to find his own philosophy, immature though it was at the time. He became acquainted with such then unrewarded young men as Havelock Ellis and Ramsay MacDonald, Sidney Webb and Bernard Shaw. There was a young man named H. G. Wells. And two young women, a Mrs. Annie Besant and a Beatrice Webb, Sidney Webb's wife. There was Graham Wallas. And an older man, a poet, one William Morris. On Sunday evenings these young people would go to the Morris home for supper. Morris didn't care much for this socialism the younger men talked of. It was too tame for him. This Morris was pretty much the anarchist. He thought the day would come when he would be shot down and the people would surge over him in victory.

In the autumn of 1883 a man named Thomas Davidson paid a visit to London. He was a Scot who had gone to America. He had gotten to one of its Middle Western cities, St. Louis, to be exact, and had taught Greek in its high school. Then he had gone East again to New York, and now here he was in London, visiting. On one occasion he heard Chubb read a paper—Chubb contends that the paper must have been pretty bad—but he struck up an acquaintance with the young Government clerk. The older man wanted to start a society in London, a society which he would call "The Fellowship of the New Life." This society would strive for a richer understanding of life, a richer fulfillment, would strive for the betterment of the individual.

Chubb agreed in Davidson's purpose and became the society's organizer, its secretary. One day several young persons gathered together through Davidson's and Chubb's efforts. Davidson read a paper on the subject. The society was begun.

It was in this "New Fellowship" that the Fabian had its beginning. Davidson left England and returned to America. The younger people carried on. The "New Fellowship" kept on its way. But another society, a society of young persons interested in the social status, in the gradual reform of existing systems, branched out of it. Both this new organization and the "Fellowship" had pretty much the same personnel. And the second one, of which Chubb was the first secretary again, took for its name the Fabian Society—from Fabius Cunctator, the Roman consul, whose policy of "masterful inactivity" saved Rome from confusion when Hannibal was campaigning in the Italian peninsula.

Our knowledge in this country of those first London Fabians has been decidedly colored by Shaw. We usually see them through the playwright's personality, precise, certain men, definitely bent. All Fabians undoubtedly are not like that. But Chubb, for one, does not belie that impression. He is a small, slender man, whiskered. He is quick, or gives you that impression; he is agile, he is definite. He has marked his course. For himself he certainly knows where he is going. He is a long way from London. But he seems still to be thinking with the men who were his friends in the '80s and who are still his friends—men like Webb and MacDonald and Shaw.



PERCIVAL CHUBB.

Chubb came to America in 1889. He didn't know quite what he would do; he thought he might do some literary work. He had edited a volume of Emerson's essays and written a long introduction to it. He had done a weekly literary column for a British news service. One of his early jobs in America was to cover Walt Whitman's funeral for the London Daily News.

But he came to America because of Thomas Davidson. Davidson had told him that in America one could do things without precedent. Chubb found it to be true. He had no university degree. Still, they made him head of the English department at the Brooklyn Manual Training School. He instructed at Pratt Institute. He delivered lectures at the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences. He lectured on pedagogy at New York University.

"The time was passing even then when you could do things in America without routine prerequisites," Chubb told me. "I remember receiving a certificate from the principal of the Brooklyn Manual testifying to my work there. When I asked what it was for, he said: 'Sometime you may need it to show what you've done.' "

Chubb was getting along excellently in America. In 1903 he had the pleasure of delivering an address in Concord, Massachusetts, at the Emerson centennial. He had the added pleasure of having William James, the psychologist and philosopher, comment favorably upon it. Emerson being what he is to Chubb, a sort of moral and spiritual and generally philosophical guide, I have no doubt that standing on the same Concord spot that this Emerson had graced, and orating upon him, was one of the high places in Chubb's life.

It was shortly before this that the Ethical movement had begun to interest him. The Ethical movement had its inception in 1876; started by a young lecturer at Cornell University, one Felix Adler, the son of a rabbi.

There was something new in the way of morality needed, he believed; he wanted to "unfurl a new flag of peace and conciliation over the bloody battlegrounds where religions had fought in the past." He felt the power of the church was declining; he would found something to take the church's place for those who had become unchurched. There was to be, too, considerable attention given to the rearing of children, to the evils of the tenement districts of those days, to unwholesome conditions. Morality would be helped, benefited by practical as well as spiritual first aid.

The Society for Ethical Culture of New York was the beginning. Men who believed with Adler came under his banner. Chubb was one of them. His first official post with the society was as assistant leader of the New York body. And other men already had gone to other cities. Among them was Walter L. Sheldon, who became the leader of the Ethical movement in St. Louis.

A few years after Chubb took his first official post, Walter Sheldon died, and for a time the St. Louis body was without leadership. Chubb and Sheldon had been associates and were, of course, known to each other. Chubb's wife had died. It came about that Chubb and Mrs. Sheldon were married and after a time Chubb came to St. Louis to head the movement here. That was in 1911.

The Ethical Society now has got across the water to England and the continent, and it is Mr. Chubb's opinion that the movement has gotten its roots into the soil. "The question of the existence or not of a Deity is not pivotal in our society," he says. "We have among our membership believers in God, agnostics, theists, atheists, Jews, gentiles and members of the Oriental religions.

"WE HAVE few set rules and no dogmas. When I speak on Sunday, when I perform marriages or officiate at funerals, the Deity is not mentioned. Men may believe as they will and still be among us. The Ethical movement is for the realization of right thinking, right doing, of decency and honorable living. It places the individual upon his own feet and makes him responsible to himself. It invokes no supernatural fear or terror. It makes no future promises. It endeavors to make worthy men and women, yet it tries for something more than that. It tries to make lives richer and fuller, to get into them all the potential beauty that the purely material can never engender.

"We have in the St. Louis society about 450 members and perhaps 50 more who might be called associate members, persons who are with us but who do not care to be considered actual members of the movement. We have a Sunday school and we are tremendously interested in our children. We are interested in social conditions, and our women do much charitable work.

"If I was a Fabian socialist, that does not mean that the members of the Ethical Society of St. Louis must be. They may have any social opinions they see fit. What I think is merely a challenge to the members of the society and something to break their minds upon. That is part of our liberality."

Mr. Chubb feels that in America the socialist movement is almost irrelevant. He is not optimistic enough to see a betterment of the condition of the masses by way of the same transition that seems to be going on in England. He feels, for one thing, that the American is too interested in his individual progress to care very much about mass betterment. He cannot imagine young Americans repeating the work of young Fabians of almost 50 years ago, men and women content with work enough to give them their livelihood, but work that would still leave them leisure to devote to "the cause."

He sees the great business interests in this country reaching out for everything they can lay their hands upon, seemingly perfectly assured of their future good will with the people. He thinks in America property and not person is of first importance, and finds his proof in the decisions of the Supreme Court.

Such political chicanery as that which has enveloped Muscle Shoals astounds him. He sees in it a complete disregard of the rights of the citizenry. To whom, he wants to know, do the great natural water-power resources of this nation belong if they do not belong to its citizens?

Chubb has always maintained his literary pursuits. Besides the Emerson, he has made a selection of Montaigne's essays, of Browning's poems, has performed many other editorial tasks. He is the author of "The Teachings of English." He has been president of the Drama League of America, was its president during the Shakspeare Tercentenary, and through his office headed the movement in America. He entered the Drama League, he explains, "by the educational door." Greatly, through a volume called "Festivals and Plays" that he had written. He had an important part in the Pageant and Masque of St. Louis.

As leader of the Ethical Society he is not titled; he is plain Chubb or Mr. Chubb. He is not a doctor, either of philosophy or divinity. Nevertheless, on occasion, he has been hailed as doctor or professor, reverend or major. His most recent titular distinction was judge. That was bestowed by a Pullman porter.

A Long Distance Call From Des Moines to New York Got a Job for Virginia Murphy Which Started Her on the Road to Fame and the Possession of Three Names.

"Just let me sing for you," said the girl——

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

THIS is a radio mystery story about a good-looking girl who can and does sing like a million dollars and who has three names, all of them her own and none of them her husband's, because she hasn't any husband. Almost everyone who listens in on the radio Wednesday nights has heard Phil Carlin say, "And now, Olive Palmer, our lovely prima donna, has chosen for first number . . ." and so on.

Well, Olive Palmer, which is and isn't her name, is the leading lady of the mystery. And if you want the other two of her three names, they are first, Virginia Rea, which also is and isn't her name; and second, Virginia Earle Murphy, which really is her name, though few people have known it.

Olive Palmer is the name she goes under now. Before she was Olive Palmer, she was Virginia Rea. That name is almost as pretty a name as anyone could want, but Miss Virginia Rea changed it to Olive Palmer for the two best reasons in the world. The first one was money, and the second was a nice fat contract. Plenty of people, including women, have changed their names lots worse for lots less. Some women change their names for love.

And so, when the soap people heard Virginia Rea sing, they were so enthusiastic about the way her voice carried over the air, coming in clearly and softly on even the most antiquated of three-tube sets, the soap people wanted that voice for their very own, and they said that Virginia Rea had to die, and Olive Palmer had to be born.

So Virginia Rea died, as who wouldn't. It wasn't her name anyhow. Her real name was Murphy—Virginia Earle Murphy.

Continuing the story backwards, Virginia Earle Murphy was born that way in Louisville, Kentucky. Her father, J. R. Murphy, was in the wholesale business. Her mother, Mrs. J. R. Murphy, of course was ambitious for her children, and it is unwritten history in Louisville that little Virginia Murphy herself was a natural born singer.

In fact, she was a child prodigy. That's another surprising thing about her. Most child prodigies die young and are forgotten. Virginia is still living.

AT FIVE years of age, with a huge pink hair ribbon perched cockily atop her black tresses, they say she sang solos at Christmas and Easter in Louisville's Fourth Avenue Methodist Church.

There has been a lot of idle chatter bantered about to the effect that the proud Murphys of Kentucky sent their daughter to a high-toned finishing school. Olive Palmer, who is a purely fictitious character, may have gone to finishing school in her imaginary youth, but the real Virginia Murphy went to the Hill street grammar school in Louisville and entered public high school. Just another one of the girls.

Then, when Virginia was 12 or 13, Papa Murphy got a job in Des Moines, Iowa, and took his family with him. Mother Murphy, like so many other mothers, thought her daughter could sing.

In Des Moines, of course, was Drake University, with its up and coming conservatory of music. Virginia was put in the conservatory, taking lessons. She became president of the glee club and she took the leads in the musical shows. On the side she was soloist in the University Church of Christ.

Just after she was graduated from the conservatory, the Drake University prima donna, still going strong under the name of Virginia Murphy, took the step that led to her first change of name.

Olive Palmer at home.

"I'm going to ask Mr. Hinshaw to give me a chance," she told her mother.

"That long trip!" exclaimed Mrs. Rea. "You know you hate traveling, dear. And it's such a slim chance even after you get there!"

"I'll telephone him and ask him."

Mrs. Murphy laughed. Naturally, she thought her daughter was joking.

But Virginia meant it. She got long distance. And when a far-away voice said, "This is Mr. Hinshaw speaking," she started talking so fast that it's a wonder he was able to understand anything of what she was saying.

But when astonished Mr. Hinshaw did find what it was all about, he cut Miss Murphy short. He was sorry, he said, but his casts were full and there was no use of her coming to New York.

"Oh, I don't want to come to New York," the girl said. "Just let me sing for you!"

Well, of course, there wasn't anything Hinshaw could do but listen. It would have been fearfully rude to cut off that minute. Besides, the girl in Des Moines was paying for the call.

He pressed the receiver closer to his ear. And, singing through those miles and miles of wire, came a silvery voice, Virginia Rea, singing the famous "Shadow Song."

There is another version of this fame-making telephone audition, to the effect that Virginia Murphy went on to New York, called Mr. Hinshaw on the telephone from her hotel, found that he was just leaving the city, and therefore sang to him on the instant, but this story the singer denies.

The call was really made, she says, from Des Moines.

Anyway, that dramatic incident opened another chapter in the life of Virginia Murphy. She arrived as an artist. She sang a number of outstanding operatic roles, and then made her concert tour across the country.

It was about this time that Virginia Murphy became Virginia Rea. Rea was her mother's family name, and it was also the name of Virginia's brother, Rea Murphy.

Virginia Rea decided that she wanted to be a recording artist and make phonograph records. So she got her music teacher to write a letter of introduction to the head of the Brunswick company. The music teacher didn't know the phonograph official, but that made no difference to Virginia. She got away with this bluff, too.

She made records under the name of Virginia Rea, and then the phonograph company put her on the air. She was a hit, instantly, but suddenly she disappeared. That was in 1927 when the first hour of a soap company was broadcast. The soap people killed lovely Virginia Rea, and Olive Palmer was put over as a brand-new star.

The ruse was a success. Within two years Olive Palmer was listed among the 10 best-known air personalities.

She is an earnest young woman, who talks a great deal of her "business." She takes her public very seriously, and seeks diligently to live up to its opinion of her.

"When I am on the air," she says, "I try to look as nice as I can, to look as pretty as the announcer says I do.

"You see, it is his business to say I am pretty. And so it is my duty to keep him from being a liar."

When she is broadcasting, Miss Murphy usually wears white. She hates bright colors, and especially dislikes brilliant greens and reds and purples. She is fond of pastel shades, particularly soft blues and pinks. Her preference for quiet colors is reflected in her choice of perfumes. She dislikes vamp odors, and old-fashioned violet is her favorite scent.

"The park," she declares, "is my playground. I am on friendly terms with every bird and squirrel from 59th street north to 110th."

Recently she had a letter from a woman who said she was sure that Olive Palmer was her sister, who had run away from home years before, to become a singer.

"I know," she wrote, "that you are my little sister. God has answered my prayers."

"It was a pathetic letter," says Virginia, "and so sincere. Ordinarily I don't answer letters. I get so many that I really can't. But of course, I wrote this poor lady and told her that I wasn't her sister.

"I love to sing," she says. "But it makes me furious to have people ask me to entertain them. You'd never guess how many people ask singers to dinner, and then expect us to sing for our meals. Why, it's as bad as entertaining a doctor and requesting, after supper, that he remove little Roscoe's adenoids."

Olive Palmer is pretty. She is a decided brunet, with friendly brown eyes and long dark hair. Her skin is dark. She is slender, but confesses that it is not easy to keep that way.

She has an irresistible liking for cheap jewelry, she says.

"It's most amusing," she admits. "I simply can't pass a counter where barbaric jewelry is displayed. The cheaper and more awful it is, the more I want of it. I buy it in quantities. But when I get it home, I never wear it. My bureau drawers are full of trash that I've never had on." The jewelry Miss Palmer does wear is in perfect taste and most inconspicuous.

MISS PALMER'S speaking voice is almost child-like, and her accents are very soft. She stands on her toes when she sings. And her voice in the studio is scarcely audible, for she has learned that Old Man Microphone is particularly kind to low, natural tones.

The studio is usually crowded with visitors when Miss Virginia goes on the air. She likes having people about, because she can judge by their faces, she says, whether she is pleasing her invisible audience.

Miss Murphy has one particular gesture that always brings questions from visitors in the studio. She cups her hand over her ear as she sings.

And, when she has finished, someone invariably asks, "Why do you do that, Miss Palmer? It was as if you were listening for something."

"I was," she tells them. "I was listening to my own voice. It's as much as I can do to hear it at all. Didn't you notice how much louder the orchestra was than my voice? It is perfectly deafening here in the studio. But, of course, it only sounds that way to the singer and to studio visitors.

"The orchestra is placed much further from the microphone than I am, so that the radio listener hears it as it should be heard—as background music.

"When I cup my hand over my ear it is to shut out as much sound as I can so that I can hear myself. Honestly, it's all a radio singer can do to hear his own voice above the din of the accompaniment."

CHICAGO.

IT LASTED at that much longer than anyone ever thought it would. When Mrs. Henry Higinbotham, divorced wife of a wealthy Chicago business man and daughter of an even wealthier one, ran away to marry young Neil Bradley, everyone smiled politely and gave the marriage about six months to run. For Mrs. Higinbotham was 39 years old. Neil Bradley was 18.

"Old enough to be his mother," friends of the family said, with faint scorn. As a matter of fact, Mrs. Higinbotham has a son who is just three years younger than the second husband she has just divorced. It was through her son that she met young Bradley—they were playmates. Ten years this marriage lasted. And when Mrs. Bradley got her divorce the other day she was granted the custody of Cameron Franklin Bradley, a son, 9 years old now, by this oddly assorted union.

The unusual romance of the Bradleys had its beginning in the beautiful lake country of Wisconsin in the summer of 1917. Mrs. Bradley, who was then Mrs. Henry Higinbotham, the wife of a Chicago business man, and daughter of Henry A. Blair, a prominent and wealthy resident of Chicago, was in the habit of spending the summer months at her summer home at Trout Lake, Wisconsin. Her young son, Blair Higinbotham, was with his mother during the summer of 1917 and brought about the meeting of young Bradley and his mother.

Blair Higinbotham, who was then 12 years old, was an ardent horseman. While he was out riding one day he met young Neil Bradley, then 15 years old, who was also spending the summer at Trout Lake. The two boys became great pals and it was only natural that he should bring his new friend to his home as his guest.

Neil Bradley was a lonely, restless boy. His mother was dead and he had spent most of his life roughing it on the ranches in the Southwest country. No doubt the hospitality and graciousness of the Higinbotham home and the kindliness of his chum's mother warmed the lonely heart of the boy, for Mrs. Higinbotham made him very welcome as the friend of her young son.

Neil became a constant visitor to the Higinbotham home, ostensibly as Blair's guest, but with many opportunities to become acquainted with his future wife. But apparently his devotion that summer was only that of a lonely boy to the cordial mother of his friend.

WHEN the summer months were over Mrs. Higinbotham returned to Chicago and young Bradley remained in Wisconsin. In 1918 Mrs. Higinbotham, then 37 years old, divorced her husband, Henry Higinbotham, who was then 53 years of age. The divorce of the Higinbothams was a quiet affair, creating little publicity, for apparently it was mutually agreed upon. Mrs. Higinbotham's two children, Blair and Priscilla, continued to live with her.

During this time Mrs. Higinbotham had heard from young Bradley through her son, and then, supposedly after the divorce, the young lover became courageous enough to write to Mrs. Higinbotham direct. They became ardent correspondents, and young Bradley wrote frequently of life on the Montana ranch where he was then living.

Christmas of 1919 brought the young suitor to the palatial home of his future wife in Evanston, the ultra-fashionable suburb of Chicago, where he was a guest for several weeks. During this time the lovers became secretly engaged, planning to be married the following summer and to keep their marriage a secret also. When his visit was over Bradley did not return to Montana, but went to Texas to work on the Four Sixes Ranch, near Panhandle.

MARRIED HER SON'S CHUM

The Unusual Romance Between the Wealthy Mrs. Higinbotham and Young Neil Bradley, Which Has Now Gone to Smash in the Courts.

Mrs. Neil Bradley, formerly Mrs. Higinbotham.

IT LASTED at that much longer than anyone ever thought it would. When Mrs. Henry Higinbotham, divorced wife of a wealthy Chicago business man and daughter of an even wealthier one, ran away to marry young Neil Bradley, everyone smiled politely and gave the marriage about six months to run. For Mrs. Higinbotham was 39 years old. Neil Bradley was 18.

"Old enough to be his mother," friends of the family said, with faint scorn. As a matter of fact, Mrs. Higinbotham has a son who is just three years younger than the second husband she has just divorced. It was through her son that she met young Bradley—they were playmates. Ten years this marriage lasted. And when Mrs. Bradley got her divorce the other day she was granted the custody of Cameron Franklin Bradley, a son, 9 years old now, by this oddly assorted union.

The unusual romance of the Bradleys had its beginning in the beautiful lake country of Wisconsin in the summer of 1917. Mrs. Bradley, who was then Mrs. Henry Higinbotham, the wife of a Chicago business man, and daughter of Henry A. Blair, a prominent and wealthy resident of Chicago, was in the habit of spending the summer months at her summer home at Trout Lake, Wisconsin. Her young son, Blair Higinbotham, was with his mother during the summer of 1917 and brought about the meeting of young Bradley and his mother.

Blair Higinbotham, who was then 12 years old, was an ardent horseman. While he was out riding one day he met young Neil Bradley, then 15 years old, who was also spending the summer at Trout Lake. The two boys became great pals and it was only natural that he should bring his new friend to his home as his guest.

Neil Bradley was a lonely, restless boy. His mother was dead and he had spent most of his life roughing it on the ranches in the Southwest country. No doubt the hospitality and graciousness of the Higinbotham home and the kindliness of his chum's mother warmed the lonely heart of the boy, for Mrs. Higinbotham made him very welcome as the friend of her young son.

Neil became a constant visitor to the Higinbotham home, ostensibly as Blair's guest, but with many opportunities to become acquainted with his future wife. But apparently his devotion that summer was only that of a lonely boy to the cordial mother of his friend.

WHEN the summer months were over Mrs. Higinbotham returned to Chicago and young Bradley remained in Wisconsin. In 1918 Mrs. Higinbotham, then 37 years old, divorced her husband, Henry Higinbotham, who was then 53 years of age. The divorce of the Higinbothams was a quiet affair, creating little publicity, for apparently it was mutually agreed upon. Mrs. Higinbotham's two children, Blair and Priscilla, continued to live with her.

During this time Mrs. Higinbotham had heard from young Bradley through her son, and then, supposedly after the divorce, the young lover became courageous enough to write to Mrs. Higinbotham direct. They became ardent correspondents, and young Bradley wrote frequently of life on the Montana ranch where he was then living.

Christmas of 1919 brought the young suitor to the palatial home of his future wife in Evanston, the ultra-fashionable suburb of Chicago, where he was a guest for several weeks. During this time the lovers became secretly engaged, planning to be married the following summer and to keep their marriage a secret also. When his visit was over Bradley did not return to Montana, but went to Texas to work on the Four Sixes Ranch, near Panhandle.

But the well-known, well-laid plans went astray, for shortly after his arrival in Texas Bradley wrote his fiancee that he was ill. Whether it was loving anxiety or an overwhelming desire to see him again before the date of their marriage, is not known, but at any rate Mrs. Higinbotham, upon receiving news of Bradley's illness, caught the first train for Texas.

Arriving at the small town of Panhandle at 5 o'clock in the morning, the anxious lady was met by her youthful lover, who had apparently recovered from his illness. Young Bradley and his prospective bride went immediately to the Town Clerk and woke him up from a sound sleep with the demand for a marriage license. With this necessary bit of paper obtained, they routed out the Justice of the Peace, who not only performed the duties of that office but was also a plumber and a lawyer. Came the dawn—as in the movies—and Mrs. Higinbotham, 39 years old, became the wife of Neil Bradley, 18.

The bride and groom returned at once to Chicago, where announcement of their marriage was made the following week. At this time Mrs. Bradley admitted that her marriage was rather unusual, but remarked that after all romance never dies. When the announcement of their marriage was made it was understood from Mrs. Bradley that she and her young husband were going to close up the home in Evanston and return to the West to live. But apparently these plans did not materialize, for they continued to live in Mrs. Bradley's home in Evanston.

For a few weeks after their marriage the Bradleys seemed to be enjoying a happy married life. However, there was one black cloud dimming the horizon. Henry A. Blair, father of Mrs. Bradley and a wealthy business man, president of the Chicago surface lines, was violently opposed to the marriage of his daughter to young Bradley. In fact, it is said that his disapproval was so great that he announced his intention of discontinuing the allowance which he gave his daughter for her living expenses.

IN ANSWER to this threat of her father, Mrs. Bradley, according to friends, vowed that she would continue to live with her young husband even though it meant selling her beautiful Evanston home and whatever else was necessary. She expressed a willingness to do this if the need arose and to go with her husband back to Panhandle, or wherever he wanted to go, and to live modestly on what proceeds they could gather together.

While Mrs. Bradley and her father were dickering over the continuation of her allowance, the young husband departed. Two months after the runaway marriage of the Bradleys, Bradley was seen leaving the home of his wife in Evanston, accompanied by numerous pieces of baggage. Apparently, his departure was both sudden and unexpected.

At this time Mrs. Bradley refused to comment on the sudden leave-taking of her young husband. She said it was entirely a personal matter and she would not discuss it. It was generally believed that Bradley had returned to Texas to take up his ranch life again, although it later developed that he had gone to Milwaukee to live with a brother. However, Mrs. Bradley and her father both claimed they did not know where Bradley had gone.

With the young husband out of the way, Mrs. Bradley's father again stepped into the picture. His visits continued regularly, and it was understood that there had been a reconciliation between Mrs. Bradley and her father. In the summer of 1920, Mrs. Bradley, instead of choosing Wisconsin as her vacation site, went to Estes Park, Colorado, for the summer months. From the time Bradley left the home of his wife in April until Mrs. Bradley went to Colorado, nothing was heard about the young husband. Mrs. Bradley's friends were under the impression that it was only a matter of time until her second matrimonial adventure should officially crash. But in August, 1920, they were all electrified by the news from Estes Park—Mrs. Bradley and her young husband had become reunited, and not only that but a child was expected.

PERHAPS impending motherhood had brought Mrs. Bradley's youthful husband hurrying to her side or perhaps a skillful reading between the lines might bring forth the supposition that the ire of Mrs. Bradley's father had lessened to such an extent that he was more tolerant toward the marriage.

At any rate, in September the couple returned to the big house on Ridge avenue, in Evanston, and started living together again, apparently in the same peace and harmony as before.

A few months later their son, Cameron Franklin Bradley, was born and the Bradleys continued their marital existence in the Evanston mansion in the same manner to which Mrs. Bradley had been accustomed as the daughter of a wealthy man.

The comment and gossip which had been buzzing around ever since their return from an early morning marriage in Texas died down. During this time the young husband apparently followed no profession, nor did he appear to be engaged in any business. However, life in the Evanston mansion went on much the same as it always had.

But in January, 1928, young Bradley, then 26 years of age, again packed his bags and left the home of his wife, who was 47. Young Bradley headed for Northern Wisconsin, where he may still be roughing it in the lake country. Or perhaps he has again taken up his free life on a Western ranch.

This time there was no reconciliation, for in March, 1930, Mrs. Bradley brought suit for divorce against him on the charge of desertion. Her suit was not contested by Bradley and Mrs. Bradley's two children by her former husband, Priscilla and Blair Higinbotham, testified for their mother.

Two views of Bob MacGimsey.

LAKE PROVIDENCE, Louisiana.

THIS little town of Lake Providence has no music store. It is just a strip of beautiful old houses lost in the thickest of crepe myrtle and japonica and an occasional pecan grove overlooking a lake which once was a part of the Mississippi River, and then a strip of shops where "general merchandise" is dispensed. If you want to buy a saxophone or a set of tubes you go into almost any one of the general stores.

I had been walking along that road, past groups of Negroes lounging under the canopies that shade the walk, threading among white folks in broad black hats and whipcord, who were in from the plantations for Saturday trading. Under a swinging sign that read "Robert Hunter MacGimsey, Attorney at Law, Real Estate," I paused. There stood Bob MacGimsey himself, with a big flat package under his arm.

Since there was no music store, I persuaded him into the biggest of the general stores. For Bob has just been up in New York making his first phonograph records, and I wanted to hear the proofs of them which he had in the package.

We walked through the notion department and past the hats to the shoe department. This was where the phonographs were displayed, too. Somebody opened one and wound it, took Bob's package from him and laid a record proof in the machine. Bob retreated nervously to one of those rolling ladders that travel along the walls of shoe departments and leaned against it.

EVERYTHING in the store stopped. People forgot the notions, turned away from the millinery, lost interest in hardware. They came silently over to the shoe department and stood listening to Bob's records, one after the other.

Down there in the Louisiana village, though, it wasn't news any longer that a man can whistle a chord, three notes at one time, over an octave range. It wasn't news, at any rate, that Bob MacGimsey could do it.

They have heard this boy whistle such complicated, mysterious harmonies as he strolled down their street to his law office; listening, they have followed him down the street. Out in the cotton fields of his own plantation they have heard him. Down there they have known him a long time.

But up in New York, where the heads of the music industry direct phonograph recording and nationwide radio broadcasting, it was news. It was startling news. It was uncanny.

And that is why the lawyer's sign today is no longer swinging from its hinge in Lake Providence; why, this season, somebody else is looking after the plantation and why, now, a year after we heard those first records, Bob's sweet, unearthly, three-tone whistle is heard by millions of radio listeners the country over as it goes out on the network from one of the National Broadcast Company studios in New York.

Someone had chanced to hear him whistle. They didn't let him get away after that. He was signed up for a season's broadcasting before he knew what had happened.

They tried to solve the mystery of this harmony whistling.

"Do you know how you do it?" they asked.

He was taken to the New York University Medical Department and for three days physicians examined his throat. It was entirely normal, they announced. Nothing freakish about it. Just the usual throat. He was passed along to the speech department, and again experts listened and examined, shook their heads. They couldn't understand. One more experiment was made: They turned him over to the psychologists. Perhaps there was some mental or emotional explanation. But if there was it was not discovered. This young man could whistle in harmony, that was all. Nobody could say how it was done.

While Bob doesn't know how, he thinks he knows why he whistles in this amazing way.

"Once when I was just a little shaver I found a flute that used to belong to one of my uncles. I blew into that thing and I got so I could play it, but I hated it. Hated it because it could only play one note at a time. It wouldn't harmonize. Then later, when I was in high school, my dad gave me a saxophone. Reckon I was the only boy in town with one of those things. Well, I never could bring myself to play it alone. Wouldn't touch it unless I could get somebody to play a fiddle and a piano with me, so we could harmonize. I just like harmony. So whenever I whistle it naturally comes that way."

And further explanation you cannot get from him. Thinking about how it's done upsets him, as a matter of fact.

"AFTER the doctors examined and questioned me, the whistling deteriorated quite noticeably for a while," he observed. "It was because I got to thinking how I was doing it. Kind of spoiled it for a while."

But if the experts are puzzled with Bob, he in turn, now that he is in New York, is bewildered by the new trend of his destiny. Personally, he is deeply interested in just two things: scientific farming and good government! With two partners he has taken over an immense tract of Mississippi delta land, which is being converted into a modern, machine-cultivated cotton plantation. His legal training, and several years' experience as secretary, in Washington, to Senator Ransdell of Louisiana have given him another objective: some day he is going into politics.

Meanwhile, and quite by chance, he believes, he finds himself a performing musical artist. He is hailed as a wonder-whistler. He can do something no one, so far as is known, has ever been able to do before. "It's

THE BEGGAR'S DIAMOND

By
Alma and Paul Ellerbe

Pete went on combing, until he saw that the man was Morg McHale. Then he stopped and looked sharply at Evie. She was brushing her hair, with her back to the window. He let his big chest swell wide with relief. She hadn't seen.

Evie's hair wasn't red-brown and short and weedy like Pete's, but black and fine and long. She had thrown it forward over her bowed head, and the warm air from the stove made it flare and wave gently as if with a delicate life of its own.

The sight of them always moved big Pete. It seemed to him that anyone who wanted to could break Evie with a touch. He stepped across the room and pulled down the window shade.

"Sun'll wake up the kid," he said, and moved toward the door.

McHale would have to follow the road around the corner of the Baker place. He was riding slowly. There was plenty of time.

"I'm going down to fix that broken place in the fence."

But the covers of a cot against the wall erupted violently, and a little head, stiff-haired and amazingly like his own, thrust itself up in the midst and a shrill voice sang out with the exuberance of a meadow lark:

"I ain't 'sleep! Lemme go wif you!"

And then, without waiting for reply, Little Pete began his morning game; jounce, jounce, jounce on the springs of his cot, a piercing "Wee-opp!" and a leap through the air to his father's arms.

Pete tossed the child back into the cot and went on out into the kitchen. Evie followed him.

"I just wanted a kiss." She had swept her hair up and was wrapping it in smooth bands and about her head. "I'm as happy as he is, and why shouldn't I show it? We've really bought the Baker place, and we've really got him, and each other. I want to talk about it all the time! Oh, Pete, Pete, aren't we lucky!"

"I'll say we are!"

He flung it out like a challenge to the gathering uneasiness in his mind, swung her off her feet into his arms, and held her close for a moment.

He and McHale reached the barbed-wire gate together. He made no move to open it, and there was no pretense of greeting. Morg McHale lounged in the saddle with immense and loutish ease.

"Sade's back."

"It's nothing to me that Sade's back. She's your daughter for life, but I got rid of her when I got the divorce. You couldn't find anybody on earth it makes less difference to about her being back than me."

"You might be too sure about that. Anyway, here's all I got to say: She wants to see you."

"YEP, to you. Up to my place, before sunset. Sade's sick and ain't able to travel. She said to tell you it's about the kid. The only way you can head off trouble from Little Pete's by going to see her."

Taggard could not control the blind panic that rolled itself into a ball behind his breastbone, but he suppressed all evidences of it.

"If you was to touch one of his shoestrings I'd put you where you'd be some good for the first time since I've known you; I'd plant you over there in that field and raise a crop out of you."

"Sade ever lie to you?" he said, and wheeled his horse casually and loped away. Sade never lied to anyone.

Pete rode over there three hours after his talk with McHale—at 10 o'clock on that November morning.

He had gone from the gate to the breakfast table and chewed Morg's message with his bacon. Then he had said to Evie: "Kelso's scaling timber today over to Offutt's mill." Kelso was the forest ranger. "Guess I'll jog around there and buy some dead stuff for firewood." Had saddled his horse and jogged, first to the mill and now to McHale's.

He threw the reins over his horse's head and walked up the steps. The bell flared shrilly through the house and Sade's voice bade him enter. He lifted the latch and stepped into the house Sade had married him to get away from and closed the door.

THE musty, acrid odor of the house was drowned in the heavy fragrance of the crab-apple blossom perfume Sade always used. About the husk of the flaming beauty that had once fanned through his pulses like a drug were the old paraphernalia of colors; a kimono of yellow silk flung about her and, floating out of an open suit case on a chair, an orange veil, and on the floor black satin pumps with gold buckles and run-over purple boudoir slippers with shabby purple pompons. There was purple, too, beneath the great yellow eyes, but Sade hadn't put it there, and her cheeks were redder than rouge.

"You've changed as much as I have," she said bitterly.

"I've got what I want. I'm happy. I'm sorry you're sick, Sade."

"You're not. You're glad. You hate me just like I hate you. But you're scared of me."

"What do you want?" he said, in a tone that startled him.

"Is that all you've got to say to me after nine years, when I come home sick?"

"It would be better if I didn't say anything to you. Words never did mean the same to you that they did to me."

"Not even at first?" she said softly, with one of her swift, incalculable changes. "Not even that summer night you drove me to Crystal Plume? Not even when I loved you, Pete?"

"I won't talk about that. Not to you nor anybody."

"Why not? Because it don't fit in with Little Pete and Evie's kitten face and cute little Methodist eyes?"

"No, it's not that. I'd be glad to tell you about Evie and Little Pete if you wanted to understand, but you don't. All you want is to stick something into me and make me wriggle. That's the reason you want to talk about—about that. You want to find out how you could hurt me the most."

"Come here," she said suddenly, and he came over and stood close beside her, looking down into her restless eyes. "Will you tell me the truth about just one thing?"

The cold fire leaped high in her eyes. "Do you love me now? Even—a little bit?"

"No, not even a little, Sade. So help me God."

"You're not more'n half as dumb as you used to be," she said at length, in an almost chatty tone. "I don't love you, either. I feel just the way you do—I hate you. And I want to pay you a little of what I owe you. Now listen. This is strictly business. I'm going to die"——

Pete started.

"Isn't there—any—chance?"

She shook her head. "I'm as sure to be dead at the end of two years as you are at the end of a 'hundred. Now this is my little scheme for fixing up a nice last act to the play called 'Sadie McHale,' if you get what I mean. Before noon tomorrow I want you to deed over the Baker place to me, so that I can have a comfortable house to move into (I've never liked this one, you know), and Dad can have something to live on in his old age, when he's ready to give up bootlegging and"——

"THE Baker place? Deed you the Baker place?" He stared at her in frank incredulity.

"Evie's place. Little Pete's place. I know you bought it for them, and I know all you are going to say about keeping it for them, but that won't do you any good. I want it for Dad and me, and I'm going to take it—before noon tomorrow."

"Did you know that I had to put a mortgage on the ranch to get the money to buy the Baker place?"

"Yes. What of it?"

"And that Evie and I have planned to live there since we were married, and have got along in a shack not much bigger than a chicken house, saving for it?"

Sade put her hands behind her head, so that the full yellow sleeves of the kimono fell on both sides of her face.

"That's the reason I want it. I want Evie to get a little of what I've had. It will kind of ease up my last days. Now, I'll have a notary public waiting for you here tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock, and you'll either bring me the deed that you got from Baker, so that I can know the place really belongs to you, and execute another deed in my favor before noon, or"——

"I don't know what it is that you are going to try to blackmail me with, but I'm not afraid of you. You can't have the Baker place, ever, and that's flat. Knowing what it means to me, only a devil would have asked for it."

——"Or I'll tell the world," she went on smoothly, "that I'm your wife and Evie's not, and"——

"But Evie is my wife," he broke in. "And you are not my wife—we were divorced. I let them grant the divorce in your name because you wanted it that way. Went away and left you, so that you could say you'd been deserted."

"You are a fool! My mind's a good bit sounder than yours. I'm not the kind that goes insane. Did it ever occur to you that saving my reputation wasn't the only reason I had for wanting the divorce given to me? Did it ever occur to you that maybe we weren't divorced at all?"

"I asked a friend of mine to sit in the courtroom," said Pete. "He heard the Judge grant you the decree."

"Yes. And I've got it now. It's a perfectly-drawn decree. With the i's dotted and the t's crossed, and signed and sealed and everything, only I never had it recorded and"—she shrugged her shoulders slightly and smiled into his eyes—"it's no good until it's recorded. And so you see," she summed up, "Evie's not your wife. And little Pete—well, you know what little Pete is."

He stood perfectly still and stared at her.

She had robbed and humiliated and tortured him, but she had never lied to him. And so that hope died out of his face. She saw it and nodded.

He turned heavily toward the door. "You can't have the Baker place," he said thickly. "I'll see you in hell first!"

"No," she said, as cool as lily buds—"afterward!"

HE HUNG his head and yielded to the comforting, swift trotting of his horse. His mind took hold of the strong, steady beat and kept itself empty of everything else.

His head cleared on the way and he told himself he'd tell Evie the truth. They'd face it hand in hand. She'd see, as he did, that no mere slipping of legal cogs could vitiate their marriage.

The answer faced him across the dinner table when he got home at 12:30—Evie. As he looked into her tranquil eyes he realized that they were empty of something he had counted on finding there. Looking into her eyes, he went as deep as he pleased, and there was no trouble or pain. If he told her, that fathomless serenity, as deep as the sky, would never be there again. He lowered the food he was raising to his lips and sat staring.

Evie laughed. "Hey, wake up!"

He looked so surprised that she laughed again—the happy, running laugh that ran so easily from ripple to ripple.

"Did you meet a spook up there in Long Grass Park, old Solemn Face?"

"Maybe," said Little Pete excitedly, "maybe he saw Nine Mile Bully! I'll bet you 'twouldn't take him long to get acrost, lookin' for bad boys! Two free steps an' he'd be there! Oh, Daddy, did yer see Nine Mile Bully? Did yer?"

For the rest of that day, as he went quietly about his work, Peter Taggard carried under his red-brown scrub-brush hair a hell of his own. And at night it was on his pillow.

He sank back, and thoughts snowed into his mind, thick and futile. They snowed all night, while he stared the hours away. They told him what it would mean to give the Baker place to the McHales and have them living there while he and Evie slaved on to raise the mortgage. They told him how hard it would be to explain such a gift to Evie. What could he say to her? They told him how it would be if Evie knew the truth. They told him what would happen if he slipped out of bed and went to the barn and got his horse and rode over the mountains and Long Grass Park to Sade's house and shot McHale first and then his daughter and buried them under the spruce trees. They told him everything there was to say, and they were still snowing hard the next morning when he rose and went about his chores.

After breakfast he drove into the town—to get a new coulter for the plow, he said to Evie; to clear his head, he said to himself, but through his drifting thoughts Sade's voice told him it was to get the deed to the Baker place.

He stopped his car at the courthouse and looked around him with a fresh realization of his plight. Robbed in broad daylight under the eyes of the people he knew the best! His eyes fingered curiously the names on the stores and offices. There was scarcely one of them but stood for a friend.

FOR the sake of Evie he trod steadily into the bank and got his deed and brought it out, bound for Sade and surrender. And for her sake he stopped and obstinately took up the fight again. The Baker place was her place. He'd never give it up—to anyone! . . .

Aimlessly he began to walk, found himself beside his car, and aimlessly got into it. He pushed his little car into low and put forth again—God knew for where.

"Hey, Pete!" he shouted. "Pete Taggard! There's a call for you on the telephone!"

In the back of the store, over in the corner where the wall telephone was, everything fell still and clear inside of him, to listen, for the heavy tones that shook the receiver in his hand were Morg McHale's, and what he said was this:

"I've got your boy." Slowly, twice. "I've got your boy. He's taking a little ride with me, back into the hills. He's liking it fine. It won't do him any harm, if we don't go too far. I was thinking we'd stop up to my place if you could arrange to meet us there alone—before noon, like Sade said—and bring along the thing that you and her was talking about. If you was to forget it, or fetch somebody else with you, or be too late, we'd go further, me and the kid. Quite a lot further."

Pete heaved his speaking machinery into motion like something huge and rusty. "I will do what you say. Give me time. Something might happen to the car."

"All right, then, we'll call it 2 o'clock. Your wife thinks the kid's over to Hutchinson's, where he was going when I picked him up. If you don't tell her, she needn't know."

He was pale as he walked out.

"Everything all right with the boy and the missus?" said Holtzclaw, and Pete said yes, they are fine, and got into his car and drove out of the town.

He drove with great care. All his complexity was simplified. They could do whatever they liked to him. They had him. He must get the boy. He went into the McHale house with the deed in his hand.

IT WAS dark in there, and very quiet except for the distant moaning of the wind. But this time he didn't hear it, nor smell the drench of perfume that weighted the air, nor see the gaudy oasis of colors about the bed. He saw only Sade's yellow eyes, alive and waiting, and beneath them the child, stretched motionless across the foot of the bed.

Taggard opened his mouth to speak, but only unintelligible noises came out of it. Suddenly he sat down heavily on a chair.

"Is he dead?" he said.

"So you care like that?" she mused. "It's funny. I wouldn't've thought it of you. No, he's asleep. He played and talked so much—about himself and you and his mother—that he wore himself out, and all of a sudden he laid down there and slept like a puppy."

Pete sagged in the chair and let the waves of relief wash over him.

"This kidnaping stunt was a fool idea of Dad's. When he showed up here with the kid I sent him about his business. There's nobody here but me and Little Pete. I knew you'd bring the deed anyhow. Is that what you've got in your hand?"

"Yes," he said, "that's the deed," and reached back and laid his heavy .44 on top of it.

Sade smiled. "You won't have any use for either of 'em here, Pete. I lied to you about the divorce. I had it recorded as soon as I got it."

He got to his feet, studying her face. "You don't lie. You do everything else. You're a devil. But—you—don't—lie." He looked deeply into her eyes. "But I guess you've lied now, one time or the other."

"After doing everything else, I lied to you, just like you said. And I'm sorrier about that than all the rest of it. It used to be a kind of comfort to me that I didn't lie. It meant quite a lot. It was like"—she pondered soberly—"like a ragged beggar with a big diamond. And now I've lost that, too."

"I'd have given you money"—

"I don't like being given things. I like to take 'em. Besides, I wanted to make you wriggle."

"Why?" said Pete, from the midst of an old despair.

"Don't you know?"

"How could I know?"

"I didn't either until this little brat that looks exactly like you got to climbing around on my bed. Funny, isn't it? It's because I love you."

THERE was a long pause, during which they looked together at this final assay of their relationship.

"Take him," she said at last—Pete had nothing left within him that he wanted to say—"and go home. Dad don't know and Evie don't know. I didn't lie to anybody but you."

He thrust his revolver into its holster and put the deed in his pocket and bent over the sleeping child.

He kissed her gently on the cheek and gathered up his son and went away.

Sade lay back on her pillow. After a while she drew out the recorded decree of divorce. "What they don't know won't hurt them," she said, and tore the paper into bits.

Mrs. Mary Folta of Martinsburg, Missouri, had come to Bentonville to look at the body and had promptly declared it was not that of her missing son. Her two others sons, who came with her, said the same thing. Then they told how Dr. Bass, just before his arrest, had urged them to identify the body as William Folta's, saying that if they did so they would inherit William's extensive land holdings in Arkansas. That further confirmed the Sheriff's hunch.

ABOUT the same time, a Columbia waitress, Miss Pearl Powell, was becoming worried over the failure of William Pearman to return. Pearman was a friend of hers. He had told her he was going away with Dr. Bass on a trip in connection with a "land deal." He had often made trips like that. He had told her he was getting $50 a week for posing as somebody else and was going to make $50,000 before he got through. Miss Powell had noted from newspaper reports that the man identified as Folta wore a wig and she recalled that Pearman usually wore such a wig when he went away on these mysterious business trips with Dr. Bass.

The upshot of it was that she took a trip down to Bentonville to have a look at the body herself. And she found it to be, as she had suspected, the body of Pearman. A day or two later, Pearman's wife, his son and daughter, who are students in the University of Missouri, went to Bentonville and made the identification certain.

So the Folta story told by Dr. Bass was a myth. Things began to look bad for the doctor. Sitting there in the Bentonville jail, he watched his super-plot, his masterpiece of criminal construction, crumble bit by bit. Miss Powell supplied many damaging bits of evidence against him—bits of information she had gathered from remarks of Pearman. Then insurance investigators arrived. They disclosed that "Folta" had taken out four insurance policies of $50,000 each and had assigned them to Dr. Bass. Officials of the Lincoln National Life Insurance Company then identified Pearman as the man to whom they had issued the Folta policies.

With the net thus tightening about him while he sat in jail unable to obtain bond, Dr. Bass soon broke the silence he had maintained since his arrest and tried desperately to talk his way out. He first said a criminal gang had compelled him to identify the body; that a band of St. Louis gunmen had harassed him for months and had threatened to "blow up" him and all his family unless he went to Bentonville and told the officers that the slain man was William Folta.

When that story failed to hang together, he broke. He confessed to Rogers that he, himself, had planned and executed the murder in furtherance of an insurance fraud scheme which he had come through a series of coincidences—or 'breaks' as they say up here in New York," he explained. "I just happened to meet folks who got interested. Gene Austin, the recording artist, for example. He really put the bee in my bonnet to come up here."

Robert MacGimsey was the youngest of the six children of a professor of mathematics in Centennial College in Pineville, Louisiana, and a mother who played piano and violin and sang in the Presbyterian choir. He had a child soprano voice and soon was singing in the choir beside her.

"REALLY, old Uncle Armstead was the first person who got me all stirred up about music at that," he observed. "Uncle used to be a slave in my aunt's family, years gone by. Well, when I was a little fellow he used to go into a trance sometimes and he'd have a dream and then he'd sing. Never have I heard anything anywhere like those songs. Said they came to him from 'the spirit.' I used to listen to him by the hour.

"A music teacher came to Pineville later, in 1917, when I was finishing high school. That was D. D. Nye, son of Bill Nye, the humorist. I began to study with him and he showed me some real music. Chopin, Grieg, Brahms. Well, it was like being reborn.

They disclosed that "Folta" had taken out four insurance policies of $50,000 each and had assigned them to Dr. Bass. Officials of the Lincoln National Life Insurance Company then identified Pearman as the man to whom they had issued the Folta policies.

With the net thus tightening about him while he sat in jail unable to obtain bond, Dr. Bass soon broke the silence he had maintained since his arrest and tried desperately to talk his way out. He first said a criminal gang had compelled him to identify the body; that a band of St. Louis gunmen had harassed him for months and had threatened to "blow up" him and all his family unless he went to Bentonville and told the officers that the slain man was William Folta.

When that story failed to hang together, he broke. He confessed to Rogers that he, himself, had planned and executed the murder in furtherance of an insurance fraud scheme which he had evolved. He said he had killed Pearman near Rocheport, Boone County, Missouri, as the two were returning in his automobile from Kansas City; that he had concealed the body in the back of his coupe and left it in his garage in Columbia until the next day, when he and Casper Tillman, a moonshiner of Linn (Osage County), Missouri, whom he had hired for $1250, drove with him to Gravette and helped dispose of the body. Finally, he amended this story with the statement that while he had been in every way responsible for the murder, Tillman had actually been the slayer; that Tillman had shot Pearman as the unsuspecting dupe stood beside Dr. Bass' automobile on a road near Tillman's home in Osage County. This later version seemed to hang together best and is generally accepted as true.

WHY a man of Dr. Bass' education, reputation and financial security should have staked everything, including life itself, upon a fantastic fraud scheme which involved the murder of a friend, is one of the mysteries of the case which seems to admit of explanation only on the theory the dentist was insane. His attorneys, Boyle Clark of Columbia and John R. Duty of Rogers, Arkansas, have characterized him as mentally unbalanced, and insurance investigators of long experience have catalogued him as a paranoiac, a type known as the most dangerous of the criminal insane. In Columbia, his birthplace, he was known as a mild-mannered man, but as one who never forgot a grievance and who nursed hatreds for years. It was an old hatred that finally led, in a roundabout way, to the insurance fraud plot, only, strange to say, the man he hated was not Pearman, who was eventually killed. It was his wife's cousin, Machir Dorsey, of Indianapolis.

Many years ago, according to Dr. Bass, in a signed statement to two insurance men, Arthur F. Brinkman of St. Louis and E. O. Binkley of the Lincoln National Life Insurance Co., Mrs. Bass' father signed a note for Dorsey. When he died Dorsey asked Dr. and Mrs. Bass to substitute their names for the father's on the note. This they did and, the doctor says, they finally had to pay off the note, which was for more than $50,000. Dorsey afterwards became successful and the doctor felt that he should have reimbursed him and Mrs. Bass. Whether Dorsey ever was under any obligation to Dr. Bass has not been proved, but the doctor claims Dorsey was morally responsible and should have made the note good.

The upshot of it was that Dr. Bass began to hate Dorsey with a magnificent hatred. For two years he brooded over what he thought was a great wrong to him and his family. This became such an obsession that he devoted a year or more to a plot against Dorsey's life. He maneuvered to have Dorsey assign him $100,000 of life insurance as security and then hired gunmen to kill Dorsey. But this plan was frustrated and he called the gunmen off when he learned Dorsey had reassigned the policies to somebody else. Until recently, Dorsey never knew of his close call.

With the Dorsey plot frustrated, Dr. Bass then turned to another scheme by which to rehabilitate his fortune. He based it on the circumstance of William Folta's disappearance 17 years ago. Pearman, who had been a conspirator in the Dorsey plot, also entered into this. Posing as William Folta, Pearman would take out $200,000 of insurance. He would then assign this to Dr. Bass in a land transaction—Dr. Bass had dealt extensively as a land speculator since his retirement as a dentist—and then William Folta would be killed. That is, somebody would be killed and Dr. Bass would identify the body as that of Folta. Pearman, meanwhile, would resume his real identity and they would split the profits. The big job was to find a body, to obtain a victim who would be found and identified as Folta.

FIRST, Dr. Bass thought of Herbert Rice of Ashland, Missouri. Rice had got into trouble over some checks and the doctor had gone to his assistance and made the checks good. He tried to induce Rice to enter the conspiracy as the killer, but Rice refused. Rice then became suspicious and disappeared. Dr. Bass then brought Ray Magee into the plot. Magee was an employe who worked on the doctor's farm in Arkansas. Magee also was told he was to be the killer, but he, too, became suspicious. To reassure him, the doctor gave him a pistol with which to protect himself.

Still later, Dr. Bass made a deal with Casper Tillman to be the killer. Thus at different times he had four men in the conspiracy, to all of whom he unfolded his plans in detail. These men, all carrying pistols, became suspicious of each other after the doctor had, at various times, maneuvered all of them toward Arkansas. Prosecuting Attorney John S. Combs of Benton County says that had all four met on the scene there would have been a pitched battle instead of a murder. Finally, Magee "ran out," so there was nothing left to do but kill Pearman.

"The reason I had to take so many people into the plot," says the doctor, "was that it is not an easy matter to hire a man to kill another. I could not kill a man myself, regardless of what people think, so I spent most of my time hiring. I didn't want to be at the scene of the killing. But when Magee ran out just as we had him on the scene, fate moved around and put me on the scene of the murder.

"I am not a killer, although I realize that to hire a vicious person to do it is worse. I accept full responsibility for the murder of Pearman. My purpose in telling of Tillman's act is to tell the truth and not to shield myself. I hope nothing happens to Tillman. He is easily led and would do anything. The thing I regret most is that Dorsey wasn't killed instead of the man for whose murder I am held. But even though I hated Dorsey to the point of madness, I could not bring myself to kill him. That's why I hired a gunman.

"I regret that Bill Pearman was killed. He had never done anything to me. But I had thought of murder so long in connection with Dorsey that it became an obsession and somebody had to be murdered. There was no way out for me. Some call me insane. I'm not going to say anything about that, but I know my judgment throughout this thing was good."

What he meant, apparently, was that according to the laws of probability the scheme should have worked. What he doesn't seem to understand, is why it didn't work, notwithstanding the fact that he took in so many fellow conspirators.

IN RELATING the circumstances of the murder, Dr. Bass would frequently pause and exclaim: "How could I ever bring myself to such a bloodcurdling deed as resulted in the death of Bill Pearman?

"And poor Casper Tillman," he would continue. "I have gotten that man into serious trouble. I hope they don't hurt him. I wouldn't have told on him, but I couldn't tell a plausible story and leave him out. So I had to put him in. Fate has decreed there had to be a murder. It has been done. God help my precious ones at home."

For a long time after his arrest, the doctor nursed a violent hatred for Sheriff Fields. He felt that had it not been for the Sheriff his fantastic plan would have been consummated. For weeks he would not so much as speak to the Sheriff. The arrest at the hands of a small-town official had hurt his pride. But they have become fast friends. Sheriff Fields is a very human sort of person, and his kindly treatment of the doctor, whom he believes to be insane, has won him a place in the heart of the man whose plans he upset. After all, Dr. Bass has shown that he can forgive.

back to high school. He did it, too. But after the boy graduated he rejoined the circus. From that time on he was a show man. He'd first felt the thrill of wild animals when as a child he went to see them now and then in the zoo at Cincinnati.

"Prince," he says, "behaves better than the rest. I can do more with him. He's always been that way. Why? I don't know. I haven't treated him a great deal different from the others. I've worked with him a lot. I've had him in moving pictures. I've worked him in shows during the winter. He's big and he can hold his own with any of them. But he is different. He goes his own way and doesn't pay a great deal of attention to any of the other cats. He doesn't seem to care what they do.

"Now, Trudy. I just got her last winter. I trained her at winter quarters in Peru. She is mean, no doubt about that. And the other day she just decided to try me out. They all do, sooner or later, and I've got to bluff them off. She's tried me once, and almost beat me. She'll try it again some day. She's in pretty good shape now, her wounds are healing. I'll put her in the act in a day or two."

It was getting close to time for the afternoon performance. The men's dressing tent was filling up. Beatty started to get into his outfit and clowns began to paint their faces. Across from us a group of Spanish tumblers were sponging their faces in their respective buckets, working some shiny lotion into their hair. The bugle blew the first call for costumes. Everyone matter-of-factly went on with his dressing. And I noticed no clowns who, beneath their painted exteriors, seemed to be suffering from breaking hearts.

"Let's go to the menagerie tent," said Beatty, "and look at the cats."

There they were in their cages, one cage after another. As Beatty walked up to the first he called a tiger by its name, slapped his hand against the bars. "Grrr-rrrr-grrrr." Up on his feet and walking about the cage, his head swaying from side to side. Not a pretty greeting.

"Oh," said Beatty, "they know me all right."

On we went down the line. The self-same greeting from all the beasts.

And then we came to Trudy. It wasn't hard to tell Trudy. Either by her actions or by her looks—or by her wounds. She snarled. She almost screamed. She got up and her eyes showed fire. She snarled as none of the others snarled and she ran her sharp claws over the wooden floor..

"Hello, Trudy," said Beatty. "What's the matter? How's Trudy today?" But Trudy evidenced no amiability.

"Prince!" Beatty called. And Prince got up, came to the bars. No snarling, no clawing. He put his great head against the cage's side, and Beatty stuck his hand between the iron bars, running his fingers through the cat's mane. This massive, dangerous-looking Prince. Acting like a big pet of a dog.

"Why," I asked Beatty after the afternoon performance, "do you only have blanks in that gun?"

"Well," he told me, "bullets wouldn't do you a great deal of good in an emergency. To kill a cat you've got to hit it in the right place. And you seldom have time to aim. The report of the pistol is the important thing. Understand, these cats have one-track minds. The explosion disturbs them, makes them, usually, stop what they are doing. Gives them something else to think about."

What about Prince? Would he always be able to depend upon Prince? He shook his head. No, he'd have to watch Prince always, just like he did the rest. Prince was all right. But you couldn't tell what might happen some day with all those cats in the cage.

Of course, tigers and lions together made it more difficult. That was his own idea, he said, working tigers and lions together. He got more action out of it. Lions and tigers hate each other. They are always fighting.

Beatty told me that it wasn't unusual to lose a tiger or two a season. A tiger fights on his back. A lion hurls itself on top. That exposes the lion, and that is the reason a tiger has a good chance with him. But let a lion and a tiger get into a battle, and the lions all leap to the aid of their kind. The tigers don't do that.

This young man of a fraction less than 5 feet 6 inches, who weighs about 145 pounds, this young man who, lithe and active though he is, faces that great cage full of beasts twice a day with a whip and a chair and a revolver with blank cartridges, has been Hagenback-Wallace's chief trainer for some five years now. He first was with the show as second trainer. One day the trainer walked to the cage and found his training days were over. Nervous breakdown. Beatty volunteered in the emergency, and he's had the job since. Beatty told me the secret of animal training. Bluff, he explained. Bluff.

come through a series of coincidences—or 'breaks' as they say up here in New York," he explained. "I just happened to meet folks who got interested. Gene Austin, the recording artist, for example. He really put the bee in my bonnet to come up here."

Robert MacGimsey was the youngest of the six children of a professor of mathematics in Centennial College in Pineville, Louisiana, and a mother who played piano and violin and sang in the Presbyterian choir. He had a child soprano voice and soon was singing in the choir beside her.

"REALLY, old Uncle Armstead was the first person who got me all stirred up about music at that," he observed. "Uncle used to be a slave in my aunt's family, years gone by. Well, when I was a little fellow he used to go into a trance sometimes and he'd have a dream and then he'd sing. Never have I heard anything anywhere like those songs. Said they came to him from 'the spirit.' I used to listen to him by the hour.

"A music teacher came to Pineville later, in 1917, when I was finishing high school. That was D. D. Nye, son of Bill Nye, the humorist. I began to study with him and he showed me some real music. Chopin, Grieg, Brahms. Well, it was like being reborn.

"Up to then I had intended to be a lawyer, but now that was all changed. I was going to be a musician, perhaps a composer. My father was disappointed, but he sent me up to New York and I studied the history and theory of music, piano and pipe organ, under Frank Damrosch at the Institute of Musical Arts.

"I decided I ought to have a more general education, too, and in the fall of 1919 I entered Sewanee University for academic work. My father's death called me home and my mother and I moved to Shreveport. It seemed best then to give up the uncertainties of a musical career and I entered the office of my uncle, Robert A. Hunter, an attorney, to study law with him.

"He made me learn stenography as well, because he said, 'When anybody offers you a heifer, you must be ready with the halter.' It turned out lucky because it qualified me to become Senator Ransdell's secretary in Washington a few years later."

Then came one of those coincidences—or breaks. On a campaign tour with Senator Ransdell he stopped in Minden, Louisiana, at the home of an old friend, Mrs. R. H. Miller, who owned a grand piano.

"She was a very sweet woman and she let me play that piano as often as I wanted. Gene Austin, she told me, had lived across the street from her as a child and he too had often played it. Then she remembered that Gene was home now on a vacation. This time I was whistling as I played—and she went to the phone and called Gene. She told him she wanted him to hear me.

"Gene came and I whistled some for him. He seemed quite astonished and he asked me to go up to New York and make some records with him. So I did that."

Still it did not occur to him to take whistling seriously as a profession and he returned to his village law office. Presently he was buying land and planning to apply modern farm practices to the fertile, neglected delta soil.

"Then Raymond Knight, of National Broadcasting, heard of me and the next time I was in New York I went to see him. He asked me to sign up exclusively with a big railroad's hour on the air. I told him I had a law practice, a real estate business, a Chamber of Commerce, and a brand-new plantation with two anxious partners to worry about.

"I went down home and talked it over with my partners. They said they could look after the plantation while I was gone. So I took down my law-office shingle and said good-by for a while."

AND now this young man is whistling every Monday night on the railroad's program—popular Broadway airs, old-fashioned Negro melodies remembered from Uncle Armstead, intricate passages from Rimsky-Korsakoff and Moussorgsky, all in that uncanny, three-toned harmony he cannot explain. Standing straight up before the microphone, he gives an almost perfect imitation of doing nothing at all. No change comes over his calm, good-looking face, his lips barely seem to move.

"Funny thing, though," he confessed, "there's one way I can't whistle. And that's with my fingers. I had a brother used to devil me a lot about that. He could whistle with any two of his fingers, or even with his thumbs. But I never could. I'd blow and blow, and never a sound came out."

ALLEGRO CON ROW-DE-OW-DOW

Revelations Concerning a Popular Malady.

AMERICA is fast becoming a nation of boop-de-doopers, voh-de-oh howlers and ah-cha sneezers. Not that you can blame anyone. The patter is poured out of countless loud speakers every night and friends of the radio audience are bound to pick up a more or less crooning knowledge of it.

The scientific explanation of voh-de-oh-do, row-de-ow-dow and similar phenomena is that they are natural adjuncts of the epileptic and nerve-wracking stagger with which one reacts to dance music. People in the stress of excitement or anguish frequently exercise the vocal cords to ease their feelings. If a man yells when he sits on a hot stove, science points out, he suffers much less than he would if he sat there without yelling. Science further advises that if a man didn't row-de-ow-dow or ah-cha while oscillating about, he would probably fall in a heap. Hence this yapping process is regarded as a blessing in disguise. The disguise, incidentally, is very good.

The malady that attacks a man when he hears popular music is known in scientific circles as dementia foxtrot, or, to put it in everyday language, jazz cramps. The symptoms are easily recognized—dilated pupils, racing pulse, feverish brow and extreme restlessness (gyration urge).

Ordinarily, a person stamps about the room with short, spasmodic steps while swaying the body and flapping the hands. However, it is not uncommon for people to throw out their arms and remain rigid except for a slight shivering motion. Others undulate the knees for a few measures and then solemnly bend themselves through a whole series of pretzel-like formations.

An effective spasm is usually selected through the trial and error method. But regardless of the external behavior, there is, in the normal person, an immediate response of the boop-a-doop instinct.

It seems that an impulse travels up the central nerve shaft to the cranial superstructure, where a wee, small voice (not to be confused with the conscience) murmurs: "Get hot!" Voh-de-oh-do, or something like it, automatically ensues. This patter is released by the subconscious mind-entity, which has learned it from some bleating tenor or mooing contralto.

IN ITS common form the ailment is quite harmless and there is no occasion for the family to get worried and send for the nearest physician. In the acute stage, however, it is apt to be serious, especially when the people downstairs or across the hall are being cheated out of their sleep. Sometimes the neighbors break in and talk about swinging a hatchet. If complaints are received the family should put an ice pack on the patient's head and attempt to quiet him. If words fail, there is nothing to do but tune out the dance music and find an etude, minuet or some other meek selection.

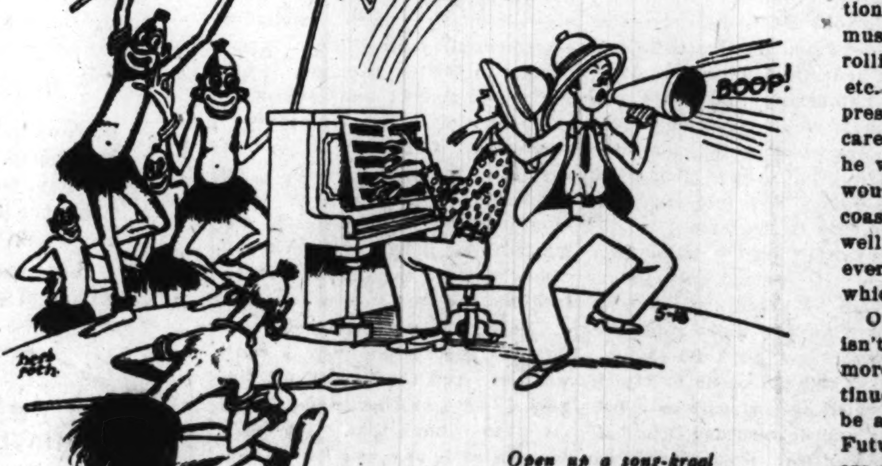
The contortion reflex and attendant ah-cha is recognized by the various broadcasting companies. That is why announcers say, "Stand by for station announcements." They know that a great many listeners are on their feet and the request to stand by is official notice to quit writhing.

The slight pause is usually welcome. One has an opportunity to sit down, fan one's self and rest one's tired muscles and strained larynx. A person must have a strong, healthy body before he can listen properly to good dance music. In fact, just before the weekly radio concert of your favorite dance orchestra—for instance, the Thompson Products Company's Eleven Royal Sardines—it might be well to condition yourself. You could walk to the office, exercise in a gymnasium during the noon hour and have a final workout at home by trundling the lawn mower around or trying to raise windows in the sun parlor.

Orchestras are different from what they were a few years ago. They now confine themselves, as far as possible, to legitimate instruments instead of trying to coax music out of washboards, gas pipes, flatirons, tomato cans and old shoes. Here and there a cocoanut or a boiler cover may creep up, but that can be overlooked. The point is that they no longer obtain their novelty effects with jarring, discordant noises but with row-de-ow-dow, which is a step forward—or backward, depending on which way you look at it.

There has been a great change, too, in singing. It used to be deliberate and dignified. A soprano would cruise out of the wings, incline her head slightly to the audience and clasp her hands like Rommel preparing to heave a knuckle ball. Then she would fix her eyes on the buoyant Greek flappers painted on the ceiling and chirp her number, clearly enunciating every word of it. There was plenty to enunciate, too, with such ballads as: "Why Should I Cry When You Don't Remember the Day You Cried Because I Didn't Cry" and "I Never Knew That You Thought I Remembered, but I Couldn't Forget After All."

Nowadays, the soprano romps out on the stage, waves her hand to the audience, cyclones around and gives them boop-a-doop with both tonsils. She sings the line, "I ain't goin' nowhere 'cause I ain't got nobody" simply as "Row-de-ow-dow, voh-de-oh, ah-cha," virtually murdering it. A similar refrain will be shouted with "She's My Grain of Saccharine" as well as "You're My Gal, Old Mother Pal" and "Cryin' for the Antipodes." The result is that the popular song of today has no more individuality than an oyster.



BOOP-OOP-A DOOP!
BOOP!

INASMUCH as a child's first words are "Da-da," many parents think they have an infant prodigy on their hands who will develop into a successful blues singer. When the baby mutters "Boop-oop," and perhaps "Dow pow de-yow," they are almost certain of it. However, there is no real indication of genius unless the child reacts to music with the snapping of fingers, the rolling of eyes, the stamping of feet, etc. If all these manifestations are present, he might be groomed for a career. Perhaps, in his formative years, he will develop a striking gurgle that would make a hit, later on, over a coast-to-coast hookup. Radio stars are well paid. Some of them get $5000 for every 30 minutes of broadcasting, which is at the rate of $2.15 a boop.

Owing to the present vogue there isn't much use in writing lyrics any more, and the practice may be discontinued. Of course, there will always be a striving for new jungle phrases. Future song hits may appear with covers containing such captions as "Music & Flapdoodle, by Herbert Spivik," and "Music and Gibberish, by Lionel R. Klink." The only intelligible thing about the song will be the title.

The number, "When Ah-Cha, Ah-Cha Charley Comes to Town," will, for instance have a chorus something like this:

Voh-de-oh-wa-wa,
Roh-de-oh-ga-ga,
AH-CHA!

If the publisher is smart, he will get the number copyrighted not only in the United States and Europe but in Africa. He could take it down there, open a song-kraal on the banks of the Tanganyika, near old Mombasa, and sell the natives 1,000,000 copies in a five-day week. Some may disparage it through envy, but unbiased savages will admit it has the calories.

Some radio listeners will eagerly tune in the song every time it is played; others will just as eagerly wrench away from it. You can tell whether it will be played or not by consulting the radio column in the daily press. If the song isn't listed on a given program, they will play it; if it is listed, they won't play it. This rule may not be ironclad, but it has a good coating of tin.

The one grave danger is that the new art will affect the language. Right now we find members of the younger generation exchanging such greetings as "Ah-cha, ole kid!" and "Voh-de-oh hello!" If this trend is maintained the language, in a century or so, might disappear altogether. So perhaps we'd better stop this thing before it's too late, better ah-cha, boop-a-doop, voh-de-oh-do—now they've got me doing it.

The VEIL* that hides your True Loveliness

*DESQUAMATION—medical term for the invisible peeling that goes on in every healthy skin, and brings out the new skin underneath

DESQUAMATION—a natural process of every healthy skin.

To help this natural peeling off process and tone the new skin as it comes through, there's a special treatment worked out by the Woodbury laboratories:

FIRST BATHE THE FACE in warm water. Then work gently into your skin a generous lather of Woodbury's soap. Now wash off with warm water. The Woodbury lather has freed it of the tiny, invisible dead cells that covered its surface. Now tone the new fresh skin with a brisk splashing of cold water.

Woodbury's is 25 cents a cake at any drug-store or toilet-goods counter. It also comes in convenient 3-cake boxes.

To meet the Woodbury laboratories' exacting requirements for a facial soap, Woodbury's is very finely milled. This also makes it last much longer. The Andrew Jergens Company—Cincinnati, Ohio.

TIME TO GO—

but still time to use MUM

Those times when you must be ready in a jiffy! Just time to slip on your dress. Not a moment more to spare—yet you must not chance perspiration offense. Then's when you're most grateful for Mum!

In no more time than it takes to powder your nose, your underarm toilet is made with Mum. One dab of snowy cream under each arm and you're safe. Mum doesn't have to dry. It is soothing to the skin, and just as harmless to the daintiest fabric. Mum doesn't even leave the skin greasy. This likable and usable deodorant has removed the last excuse for offending. For it is ready for any and all occasions. It offers you permanent protection, for its daily use can do no harm.

Why chance embarrassment—ever—when you can always have absolute protection in this delightful form! Mum will neutralize every bit of unpleasant odor. Not the slightest suggestion of any odor can possibly penetrate that protecting film. You are safe for hours.

Keep a jar of Mum on your dressing table and make its use a dainty habit, morning and night. Many women keep it in the purse, just to be ready for any emergency.

Spread a little Mum on the sanitary napkin and you will be serenely safe from offense. Every vestige of odor is neutralized—not merely stifled, or disguised. All toilet-goods counters, 35c and 60c.

"Eugène!," answered Paris, "Eugène!," answered London, and now — "Eugène!," answers New York, Chicago, Los Angeles. In all the great cities of the world, when you ask for the name of the preferred method of permanent waving, smart society has only one answer . . . . "EUGÈNE!"

Please note the patented perforated steam tab, on the Eugène Sachet shown above. This tab controls and directs the steam. . . . It has made permanent waving safe, gentle and certain.

Better still, with this tab, those few new inches of new straight hair, grown since your previous permanent wave, can be separately waved while protecting the rest of the hair. Thus, the Eugène Wave is worth its slightly higher price because it can be maintained at its lovely best throughout the year.

"I have treated Thousands of Cases"

The famous head of a famous clinic tells his experience with yeast

IN THE FOREFRONT of German medicine today stands Dr. Ernst Kromayer, founder and head of the aristocratic Kromayer Sanitarium and professor in the University of Berlin. During the War, Dr. Kromayer headed the great 2500-bed Berlin Eastern Hospital. He says:

"Fresh yeast greatly helps intestinal action and prevents constipation. Through its strongly purifying effect on the intestinal tract, skin affections such as boils and pimples can be overcome.

"As the inventor of the first medical quartz irradiation lamp, I of course heartily endorse the irradiation of yeast. From my own experience—and I have treated several thousands of cases—I know that fresh yeast, when irradiated, will produce greater results than ever before. The 'sunshine' vitamin D which it contains has an extraordinary effect on strengthening the bones and teeth."

Every cake of Fleischmann's Yeast is rich in two indispensable vitamins—B and D. Eat 3 cakes every day, following directions on the label. At grocers, restaurants, and soda fountains.

Medical Leaders Tell Yeast Benefits

DR. LOUIS DARTIGUES, famous French abdominal surgeon and former president of the Society of Medicine of Paris, says, "Cathartics cannot be often used with safety. Yeast is a harmless yet active intestinal cleanser."

GEHEIMRAT DR. FRIEDRICH KRAUS, the "father of modern German medicine," states, "Yeast stimulates the intestines to normal action, stops the growth of harmful bacteria in the colon and promotes normal digestion."

PROFESSOR DR. GUSTAVO PITTALUGA, most noted of Spanish physicians, says, "Yeast stimulates the glandular action and has a tonic effect on the general health. Its use will renew appetite and aid digestion."

Their experience matches what great doctors say

(Left) "Watch repairing means long hours with little exercise," writes O. J. Schaar of Salt Lake City. "When I relaxed after work, I often had a terrific headache. I was also troubled with indigestion. Fleischmann's Yeast improved my health tremendously. My indigestion stopped."

(Right) "Medicines every day! I had indigestion and constipation," writes Miss Blanche Irene Hill of London, Ont. "Bilious attacks made me weak. Then I developed pimples . . . Thanks to yeast my sick days are now past! No more pains or eruptions. I eat well and sleep well. The yeast gave me more pep, too."

ST. LOUIS DOG TRIUMPHS—Maud S, wolfhound owned by Mrs. Joseph C. Tebeau, 3015 N. Taylor avenue, judged the best of its breed at recent Arena show, and later declared champion at Ohio exhibit.

NATIONALIST LEADER OF INDIA—"Nehru the Elder," a lawyer of Calcutta, who has resigned from post in the British Government to take part in the campaign for independence.

"You are ADORABLE!"

DU BARRY
BEAUTY TREATMENTS
HOME METHOD—HAND PRINCIPLE

YOU CAN RECAPTURE THE FINE TEXTURE OF A FRESH, YOUTHFUL SKIN . . . THIS SIMPLE DU BARRY HOME WAY

These new Du Barry Beauty Preparations and the new Du Barry Hand Principle bring the Beauty Salon to your own home.

So many, many women have found that this new Du Barry home method is exactly what they have been hoping some one would bring out. For here are treatments so simply explained—so easy to apply—that you can make them your own over night. Here, too, are beauty preparations scientifically devised for home use to make them safe, pure, and unusually effective.

Velvety creams that are liquefied by the very warmth of your finger tips. Sparkling lotions to stimulate circulation. Fragrant oils to revivify lazy facial muscles. Creams, too, that nourish and invigorate the skin . . . Many of them contain ingredients never before used in beauty aids.

With each Du Barry purchase you receive a handbook that describes in detail the different treatments: for getting rid of enlarged pores; for smoothing out frown lines, lines around the mouth and nose or on the forehead; for lifting sagging chin and cheek muscles; for bringing color to the cheeks; and many others.

RICHARD HUDNUT'S

First . . . a thorough cleansing with Du Barry Cleansing Cream and Du Barry Skin Tonic. Then smooth on Du Barry Tissue Cream—or if the skin is overdry, Du Barry Skin Food—all over the face. Now, with the cushion tips of the middle fingers, smooth the Muscle Oil up from the bridge of the nose over the frown lines with a brisk, firm motion. Alternate the fingers till the skin feels warm and tingly. This natural tissue stimulation is part of the special Du Barry principle.

NEW YORK, May 19.—The pro- ssional trading element in Wall reet again had things all their n way in today's stock market, d after their meager success on e bull side last week began the w week solidly bearish. Opera- ons for the decline were increas- gly effective throughout the aft- noon and a long list of important ocks closed about 3 to 10 points wer.

The average price of 20 utility ocks decreased 7.5 points, 50 in- strials lost 4.1 points and 20 rail- ads decreased .8 point, with the tal 90 showing loss of 6.2 points. Although stocks broke rather arply, the market was again a cidedly dull affair. During the orning the pace of trading was en slower than it was Saturday, d that was the slowest in nearly o years, but trading increased in lume as the bear movement ined in momentum during the ternoon. Total sales, neverthe- ss, were only about 2,400,000 ares.

Secretary of Commerce Lamont's atement on business conditions, edicting a return to normal in ree months, was about in keep- g with conservative Wall stree timates and failed to influenc e market. The few earning ming to hand were mostly unfa orable and the day's news gene lly was largely negative in cha cter.

Credit conditions were hanged with call loans holdin per cent and other mone ccommodations showing little ivity at around last week's evels. The fact that the $100,0 00 issue of Treasury bill mus paid for this week will undoub keep the rateеg fairly stead few days.

One of the first April ra net income reports to appear that of Kansas City Sout showing a decline of $31 compared to $405,042 the pre month, and $472,486 in April, April tobacco production fi made their appearance, and ing moderate reductions from of last year, were less fav than expected, in view of unofficial reports of incr sales.
